This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

NYPL RESEARCH LIBRARIES
3 3433 07608653 1

Hoadley Dodge

THE

WORKS

OF

Alexander Pope, Esq.

VOLUME VII.

CONTAINING HIS

Miscellaneous Pieces in Prose.

LONDON,

Printed for A. MILLAR; J. and R. TONSON; H. LINTOT; and C. BATHURST.

MDCC LVII.

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY
140472A
ASTOR, LENOX AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS
1924 L

CONTENTS

OF THE

SEVENTH VOLUME.

MEMOIRS of the extraordinary Life, Works, and Discoveries of MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS 9

MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS Περὶ Βάθους, or the Art of sinking in Poetry 99

VIRGILIUS RESTAURATUS, sive MARTINI SCRIBLERI Summi Critici Castigationum in Æneidem Specimen 177

A Specimen of SCRIBLERUS's Reports, Stradling versus Stiles 187

MEMOIRS of P. P. clerk of this parish 193

Of the Poet Laureate, Nov. 19, 1729. 207

Guardians 214

Preface to Homer's Iliad 266

Preface to the Works of Shakespear 305

24X162

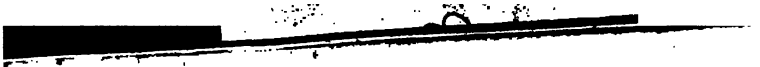
MEMOIRS

Of the Extraordinary

Life, Works, and Diſcoveries

OF

MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS.



INTRODUCTION

To the READER.

IN the Reign of Queen ANNE (which, notwithſtanding thoſe happy Times which ſucceeded, every Engliſhman may remember) thou may'ſt poſſibly, gentle Reader, have ſeen a certain venerable Perſon who frequented the outſide of the Palace of St. James's, and who, by the Gravity of his Deportment and Habit, was generally taken for a decay'd Gentleman of Spain. His ſtature was tall, his viſage long, his complexion olive, his brows were black and even, his eyes hollow yet piercing, his noſe inclined to aquiline, his beard neglected and mix'd with grey: All this contributed to ſpread a ſolemn Melancholy over his countenance. Pythagoras was not more ſilent, Pyrrho more motionleſs, nor Zeno more auſtere. His Wig was as black and ſmooth as the plumes of a Raven, and hung as ſtrait as the hair of a River God riſing from the water. His cloak ſo compleatly covered his whole perſon, that whether or no he had any other cloaths (much leſs any linnen) under it, I ſhall not ſay; but his ſword appeared a full yard behind him, and his manner of wearing it was ſo ſtiff, that it ſeemed grown to his Thigh. His whole figure was ſo utterly unlike any thing of this world, that it was not natural for any man to aſk him a queſtion without bleſſing himſelf firſt. Thoſe who never ſaw a Jeſuit, took him for one, and others believed him ſome High Prieſt of the Jews.

But under this macerated form was conceal'd a Mind replete with Science, burning with a zeal of benefiting his fellow-creatures, and filled with an honeſt conſcious pride, mixt with a ſcorn of doing, or ſuffering the leaſt thing beneath the dignity of a Philoſopher. Acoordingly he had a ſoul that would not let him accept of any offers of Charity, at the ſame time that his body ſeemed but too much to require it. His lodging was in a ſmall chamber up four pair of ſtairs, where he regularly payed for what he had when he eat or drank; and he was often obſerved wholly to abſtain from both. He declined ſpeaking to any one, except the Queen, or her firſt Miniſter, to whom he attempted to make ſome applications; but his real buſineſs or intentions were utterly unknown to all men. Thus much is certain, that he was obnoxious to the Queen's Miniſtry; who, either out of Jealouſy or Envy, had him ſpirited away, and carried abroad as a dangerous perſon, without any regard to the known Laws of the Kingdom.

One day, as this Gentleman was walking about dinner-time alone in the Mall, it happened that a Manuſcript dropt from under his cloak, which my ſervant pick'd up, and brought to me. It was written in the Latin tongue, and contain'd many moſt profound ſecrets, in an unuſual turn of reaſoning and ſtyle. The firſt leaf was inſcribed with theſe words Codicillus, ſeu Liber Memorialis, Martini Scribleri. The Book was of ſo wonderful a nature, that it is incredible what a deſire I conceived that moment to be acquainted with the Author, who I clearly perceived was ſome great Philoſopher in diſguiſe. I ſeveral times endeavoured to ſpeak to him, which he as often induſtriouſly avoided. At length I found an opportunity (as he ſtood under the Piazza by the Dancing-room in St. James's) to acquaint him in the Latin tongue, that his Manuſcript was fallen into my hands; and ſaying this, I preſented it to him, with great encomiums on the learned Author. Hereupon he took me aſide, ſurvey'd me over with a fixt attention, and opening the claſps of the Parchment cover, ſpoke (to my great ſurprize) in Engliſh, as follows:

" Courteous ſtranger, whoever thou art, I em" brace thee as my beſt friend; for either the Stars
" and my Art are deceitful, or the deſtined time is
" come which is to manifeſt Martinus Scriblerus to

" the world, and thou the perſon choſen by fate for " this taſk. What thou ſeeſt in me is a body ex- " hauſted by the labours of the mind. I have found " in Dame Nature not indeed an unkind, but a " very coy Miſtreſs: Watchful nights, anxious days, " ſlender meals, and endleſs labours, muſt be the lot " of all who purſue her, through her labyrinths and " mæanders. My firſt vital air I drew in this iſland " (a ſoil fruitful of Philoſophers) but my complexion " is become aduſt, and my body arid, by viſiting " lands (as the poet has it) alio ſub ſole calentes. I " have, through my whole life, paſſed under ſeveral " diſguiſes and unknown names, to ſkreen myſelf " from the envy and malice which mankind expreſs " againſt thoſe who are poſſeſſed of the Arcanum " Magnum. But at preſent I am forced to take Sanc- " tuary in the Britiſh Court, to avoid the Revenge " of a cruel Spaniard, who has purſued me almoſt " through the whole terraqueous globe. Being about " four years ago in the City of Madrid in queſt of " natural knowledge, I was informed of a Lady who " was marked with a Pomegranate upon the in- " ſide of her right Thigh, which bloſſom'd, and, as " it were, ſeem'd to ripen in the due ſeaſon. Forth- " with was I poſſeſſed with an inſatiable curioſity to " view this wonderful Phænomenon. I felt the ar- " dour of my paſſion encreaſe as the ſeaſon advan- " ced, till, in the month of July, I could no longer

" contain. I bribed her Duenna, was admitted to " the Bath, ſaw her undreſs'd, and the wonder diſ" played. This was ſoon after diſcovered by the " huſband, who finding ſome letters I had writ to
" the Duenna, containing expreſſions of a doubtful
" meaning, ſuſpected me of a crime moſt alien from
" the Purity of my Thoughts. Incontinently I left
" Madrid by the advice of Friends, have been pur-
" ſued, dogged, and way-laid through ſeveral na" tions, and even now ſcarce think myſelf ſecure
" within the ſacred walls of this Palace. It has " been my good fortune to have ſeen all the grand
" Phænomena of Nature, excepting an Earthquake,
" which I waited for in Naples three years in vain;
" and now by means of ſome Britiſh Ship (whoſe
" Colours no Spaniard dare approach [a]) I impa" tiently expect a ſafe paſſage to Jamaica, for that " benefit. To thee, my Friend, whom Fate has " marked for my Hiſtoriographer, I leave theſe my " Commentaries, and others of my works. No
" more—be faithful and impartial."

He ſoon after performed his promiſe, and left me the Commentaries, giving me alſo further lights by many Conferences; when he was unfortunately ſnatched away (as I before related) by the jealouſy of the Queen's Miniſtry.

[a] This marks the time when the Introduction was written.

Tho' I was thus to my eternal grief deprived of his converſation, he for ſome years continued his Correſpondence, and communicated to me many of his Projects for the benefit of mankind. He ſent me ſome of his Writings, and recommended to my care the recovery of others, ſtraggling about the world, and aſſumed by other men. The laſt time I heard from him was on occaſion of his Strictures on the Dunciad: ſince when, ſeveral years being elapſed, I have reaſon to believe this excellent perſon is either dead, or carried by his vehement thirſt of knowledge into ſome remote, or perhaps undiſcovered Region of the world. In either caſe, I think it a debt no longer to be delayed, to reveal what I know of this Prodigy of Science, and to give the Hiſtory of his life, and of his extenſive merits to mankind; in which I dare promiſe the Reader, that, whenever he begins to think any one Chapter dull, the ſtyle will be immediately changed in the next.

MEMOIRS

OF

MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS.

BOOK I. CHAP. I.

Of the Parentage and Family of Scriblerus, how he was begot, what Care was taken of him before he was born, and what Prodigies attended his birth.

IN the City of Munſter in Germany, lived a grave and learned Gentleman, by Profeſſion an Antiquary; who, among all his invaluable Curioſities, Memoirs.] Mr. Pope, Dr. Arbuthnot and Dr. Swift projected to write a ſatire in conjunction, on the abuſes of human learning; and to make it the better received, they propoſed to do it in the manner of Cervantes (the original author of this ſpecies of ſatire) under the hiſtory of ſome feigned adventures. They had obſerved thoſe abuſes ſtill kept their ground againſt all that the ableſt and graveſt Authors could ſay to diſcredit them; they concluded therefore, the force of ridicule was wanting to quicken their diſgrace; which was here in its place, when the abuſes had been already detected by ſober reaſoning; and Truth in no danger to ſuffer by the premature uſe of ſo powerful an inſtrument. But the ſeparation of our Author's friends, which ſoon after happened, with the death of one, and the infirmities of the other, put a final ſtop to their project, when they had only drawn out eſteemed none more highly, than a Skin of the tru Pergamenian Parchment, which hung at the upper end of his hall. On this was curiouſly traced th ancient Pedigree of the Scribleri, with all thei Alliances and collateral Relations (among whic were reckoned Albertus Magnus, Paracelſus Bom baſtus, and the famous Scaligers in old tim Princes of Verona) and deduced even from th times of the Elder Pliny to Cornelius Scriblerus for ſuch was the name of this venerable Perſonage whoſe glory it was, that, by the ſingular virtue c the Women, not one had a head of a different Ca from his family.

His wife was a Lady of ſingular beauty, whoi not for that reaſon only he eſpouſed; but becaul ſhe was undoubted daughter either of the great Scr verius, or of Gaſper Barthius. It happened on time the ſaid Gaſper made a viſit to Scriverius an imperfect eſſay towards it, under the title of the Firſt book the Memoirs of Scriblerus.

Polite letters never loſt more than in the defeat of this ſchem in which, each of this illuſtrious triumvirate would have fou exerciſe for his own peculiar talent; beſides conſtant emplo ment for that they all had in common. Dr. Arbuthnot w ſkilled in every thing which related to ſcience; Mr. Pope was maſter in the fine arts: and Dr. Swift excelled in the knowled of the world. WIT they had all in equal meaſure, and this large, that no age perhaps ever produced three men, to who Nature had more bountifully beſtowed it, or Art brought it higher perfection.

Harlem, taking with him a comely Lady of his acquaintance, who was ſkilful in the Greek Tongue, of whom the learned Scriverius became ſo enamoured, as to inebriate his friend, and be familiar with his Miſtreſs. I am not ignorant of what [a] Columeſius affirms, that the learned Barthius was not ſo overtaken, but he perceived it; and in Revenge ſuffered this unfortunate Gentlewoman to be drowned in the Rhine at her return. But Mrs. Scriblerus (the iſſue of that Amour) was a living proof of the falſehood of this Report. Dr. Cornelius was farther induced to his marriage, from the certain information that the aforeſaid Lady, the mother of his wife, was related to Cardan on the father's ſide, and to Aldrovandus on the mother's: Beſides which, her Anceſtors had been profeſſors of Phyſick, Aſtrology, or Chemiſtry, in German Univerſities, from generation to generation.

With this fair Gentlewoman had our Doctor lived in a comfortable Union for about ten years: But this our ſober and orderly pair, without any natural infirmity, and with a conſtant and frequent compliance to the chief duty of conjugal life, were yet unhappy, in that Heaven had not bleſſed them with any iſſue. This was the utmoſt grief to the good man; eſpecially conſidering what exact Precautions and Methods he had uſed to procure that Bleſſing: for he never had cohabitation with his ſpouſe, but he pondered on the Rules of the Ancients, for the generation of Children of Wit. He ordered his diet according to the preſcription of Galen, confining himſelf and his wife for almoſt the whole firſt year to [b] Goat's Milk and Honey. It unfortunately befel her, when ſhe was about four months gone with child, to long for ſomewhat, which that author inveighs againſt as prejudicial to the underſtanding of the infant. This her huſband thought fit to deny her, affirming, it was better to be childleſs, than to become the Parent of a Fool. His wife miſcarried; but as the Abortion proved only a female Fœtus, he comforted himſelf, that, had it arrived to perfection, it would not have anſwer'd his account; his heart being wholly fixed upon the learned Sex. However he diſdained not to treaſure up the Embryo in a Vial, among the curioſities of his family.

[a] Columeſius relates this from Iſaac Voſſius, in his Opuſcul. p. 102.

Having diſcovered that Galen's preſcription could not determine the ſex, he forthwith betook himſelf to Ariſtotle. Accordingly he withheld the nuptial embrace when the wind was in any point of the South; this [c] Author aſſerting that the groſſneſs and moiſture of the ſoutherly winds occaſion the procre-ation of females, and not of males. But he redoubled his diligence when the wind was at Weſt, a wind on which that great philoſopher beſtowed the Encomiums of father of the earth, Breath of the Elyſian Fields, and other glorious Elogies. For our learned man was clearly of opinion, that the Semina out of which Animals are produced, are Animalcula ready formed, and received in with the Air.

[b] Galen. Lib. de Cibis boni et mali ſucci, cap. 3.

[c] Arift. xiv. Sect. Prob. 5.

Under theſe regulations, his wife, to his unexpreſſible joy, grew pregnant a ſecond time; and, (what was no ſmall addition to his happineſs) he juſt then came to the poſſeſſion of a conſiderable Eſtate by the death of her Uncle, a wealthy Jew, who reſided at London. This made it neceſſary for him to take a Journey to England; nor would the care of his poſterity let him ſuffer his Wife to remain behind him. During the voyage, he was perpetually taken up on the one hand how to employ his great Riches, and on the other, how to educate his Child. He had already determined to ſet apart ſeveral annual Sums, for the recovery of Manuſcripts, the effoſſion of Coins, the procuring of Mummies; and for all thoſe curious diſcoveries by which he hoped to become (as himſelf was wont to ſay) a ſecond Peireſkius[d]. He had already chalked out all poſſible ſchemes for the improvement of a male child, yet was ſo far prepared for the worſt that could happen, that before the nine months were expired, he had compoſed two Treatiſes of Education; the one he called, A Daughter's Mirrour, and the other A Son's Monitor.

[d] There was a great deal of trifling pedantry and curioſity in that great Man's character.

This is all we can find relating to Martinus, while he was in his mother's womb, excepting that he was entertained there with a Concert of Muſick once in twenty four hours, according to the cuſtom of the Magi: and that on a [e] particular day, he was obſerved to leap and kick exceedingly, which was on the firſt of April, the birth day of the great Baſilius Valentinus.

The Truth of this, and every preceding Fact, may be depended upon, being taken literally from the Memoirs. But I muſt be ſo ingenuous as to own, that the Accounts are not ſo certain of the exact time and place of his birth. As to the firſt, he had the common frailty of old men, to conceal his age: as to the ſecond, I only remember to have heard him ſay, that he firſt ſaw the light in St. Giles's Pariſh. But in the inveſtigation of this point, Fortune hath favoured our diligence. For one day s I was paſſing by the Seven Dials, I overheard a iſpute concerning the place of Nativity of a great ſtrologer, which each man alledged to have been n his own ſtreet. The circumſtances of the time, nd the deſcription of the perſon, made me imagine : might be that univerſal Genius whoſe life I am /riting. I returned home, and having maturely onſidered their ſeveral arguments, which I found o be of equal weight, I quieted my curioſity with his natural concluſion, that he was born in ſome oint common to all the ſeven ſtreets; which muſt e that on which the column is now erected. And t is with infinite pleaſure that I ſince find my Conecture confirmed, by the following paſſage in the Codicil to Mr. Neal's Will.

[e] Ramſey's Cyrus. It was with judgment, that the Authors choſe rather to ridicule the modern relator of this ridiculous practice, than the Ancients from whence he took it. As it is a ſure inſtance of folly, when amongſt the many excellent things which may be learned from Antiquity, we find a modern writer only picking out their abſurdities.

I appoint my Executors to engrave the following Inſcription on the Column in the Centre of the ſeven ſtreets which I erected.

LOC. NAT. INCLVT. PHILOS. MAR. SCR.

But Mr. Neale's Order was never performed, becauſe the Executors durſt not adminiſter.

Nor was the Birth of this great man unattended with Prodigies: He himſelf has often told me, that on the night before he was born, Mrs. Scriblerus dream'd ſhe was brought to bed of a huge Ink-horn, out of which iſſued ſeveral large ſtreams of Ink, as t had been a fountain. This dream was by her huſband thought to ſignify, that the child ſhould prove a very voluminous Writer. Likewiſe a [f] Crab-tree that had been hitherto barren, appeared on a ſudden laden with a vaſt quantity of Crabs: This ſign alſo the old gentleman imagined to be a prognoſtic of the acuteneſs of his Wit. A great ſwarm of [g] Waſps played round his cradle without hurting him, but were very troubleſome to all in the room beſides: This ſeemed a certain preſage of the effects of his Satire. A Dunghill was ſeen within the ſpace of one night to be covered all over with Muſhrooms: This ſome interpreted to promiſe the infant great fertility of fancy, but no long duration to his works; but the Father was of another opinion.

But what was of all moſt wonderful was a thing that ſeemed a monſtrous Fowl, which juſt then dropt through the ſky-light, near his wife's apartment. It had a large body, two little diſproportioned wings, a prodigious tail, but no head. As its colour was white, he took it at firſt ſight for a Swan, and was concluding his ſon would be a Poet: but on a nearer view, he perceived it to be ſpeckled with black, in the form of letters; and that it was indeed a Paper kite which had broke its leaſh by the impetuoſity of the wind. His back was armed with the Art Military, his belly was filled with Phyſick, his wings were the wings of Quarles and Withers, the ſeveral

[f] Virgil's Laurel, Donat. [g] Plato, Lucan, etc.

Nodes of his voluminous tail were diverſified with ſeveral branches of Science; where the Doctor beheld with great joy a knot of Logick, a knot of Metaphyſick, a knot of Caſuiſtry, a knot of Polemical Divinity, and a knot of common Law, with a Lanthorn of Jacob Behmen.

There went a report in the family, that, as ſoon as he was born, he uttered the voice of nine ſeveral animals: he cry'd like a Calf, bleated like a Sheep, chatter'd like a Mag-pye, grunted like a Hog, neigh'd like a Foal, croaked like a Raven, mewed like a Cat, gabled like a Gooſe, and brayed like an Aſs. And the next morning he was found playing in his bed with two Owls, which came down the chimney. His Father greatly rejoiced at all theſe ſigns, which betokened the variety of his Eloquence, and the extent of his Learning; but he was more particularly pleaſed with the laſt, as it nearly reſembled what happened at the birth of Homer [h].

CHAP. II.

The Speech of Cornelius over his Son, at the Hour of his Birth.

NO ſooner was the cry of the Infant heard, but the old gentleman ruſhed into the room, [h] Vid. Euſtath. in Odyſſ. l. xii. ex Alex. Paphio, et Leo. Allat. de patr. Hom. pag. 45.

and ſnatching it into his arms, examined every li with attention. He was infinitely pleaſed to fi that the child had the Wart of Cicero, the v neck of Alexander, knots upon his legs like Mari and one of them ſhorter than the other like Ag laus. The good Cornelius alſo hoped he wo come to ſtammer like Demoſthenes, in order to as eloquent; and in time arrive at many other defe of famous men. He held the child ſo long, tl
the Midwife, grown out of all patience, ſnatched from his arms in order to ſwaddle it. "Swad
"him! (quoth he) far be it from me to ſubmit
"ſuch a pernicious Cuſtom! Is not my ſon a Ma
"and is not Man the Lord of the univerſe? I
"thus you uſe this Monarch at his firſt arrival
"his dominions, to manacle and ſhackle him ha
"and foot? Is this what you call to be free-bor
"If you have no regard to his natural Liberty,
"leaſt have ſome to his natural Faculties. Beh
"with what agility he ſpreadeth his Toes, a
"moveth them with as great variety as his F
"gers! a power, which in the ſmall circle of
"year may be totally aboliſhed, by the enorm
"confinement of ſhoes and ſtockings. His E "(which other animals turn with great advanta
"towards the ſonorous object) may, by the mi
"ſtry of ſome accurſed Nurſe, for ever lye flat a "immoveable. Not ſo the Ancients, they eo

"move them at pleaſure, and accordingly are often "deſcribed arrectis auribus." "What a devil (quoth "the Midwife) would you have your ſon move his "Ears like a Drill?" "Yes, fool (ſaid he) why "ſhould he not have the perfection of a Drill, or "of any other animal?" Mrs. Scriblerus, who lay all this while fretting at her huſband's diſcourſe, at laſt broke out to this purpoſe. "My dear, I "have had many diſputes with you upon this ſub- "ject before I was a month gone: We have but "one child, and cannot afford to throw him away "upon experiments. I'll have my boy bred up like "other gentlemen, at home, and always under my "own eye." All the Goſſips with one voice, cried, Ay, ay; but Cornelius broke out in this manner, "What, bred at home! Have I taken all this pains "for a creature that is to live the inglorious life of "a Cabbage, to ſuck the nutritious juices from the "ſpot where he was firſt planted? No; to peram- "bulate this terraqueous Globe is too ſmall a "Range; were it permitted, he ſhould at leaſt make "the Tour of the whole ſyſtem of the Sun. Let "other Mortals pore upon Maps, and ſwallow the "legends of lying travellers; the ſon of Cornelius "ſhall make his own Legs his Compaſſes; with "thoſe he ſhall meaſure Continents, Iſlands, Capes, "Bays, Streights, and Iſthmus's: He ſhall himſelf "take the altitude of the higheſt mountains, from

" the peak of Derby to the peak of Teneriff; when " he has viſited the top of Taurus, Imaus, Caucaſus, " and the famous Ararat, where Noah's Ark firſt " moor'd, he may take a ſlight view of the ſnowy " Riphæans, nor would I have him neglect Athos " and Olympus, renowned for poetical fictions. " Thoſe that vomit fire will deſerve a more parti- " cular attention: I will therefore have him obſerve " with great care Veſuvius, Ætna, the burning " mountain of Java, but chiefly Hecla the greateſt " rarity in the Northern Regions. Then he may " likewiſe contemplate the wonders of the Mephi- " tick cave. When he has dived into the bowels " of the earth, and ſurveyed the works of Nature " under ground, and inſtructed himſelf fully in " the nature of Vulcanos, Earthquakes, Thunders, " Tempeſts, and Hurricanes, I hope he will bleſs " the world with a more exact ſurvey of the deſerts " of Arabia and Tartary, than as yet we are able " to obtain: Then will I have him croſs the ſeven " Gulphs, meaſure the currents in the fifteen famous " Streights, and ſearch for thoſe fountains of freſh " water, that are at the bottom of the Ocean." ——At theſe laſt words Mrs. Scriblerus fell into a trembling: the deſcription of this terrible Scene made too violent an impreſſion upon a woman in her condition, and threw her into a ſtrong hyſteric Fit; which might have proved dangerous, if Cornelius had not been puſhed out of the room by the united force of the women.

CHAP. III.

Shewing what befel the Doctor's Son and his Shield, on the Day of the Chriſt'ning.

THE day of the Chriſt'ning being come, and the houſe filled with Goſſips, the Levity of whoſe Converſation ſuited but ill with the Gravity of Dr. Cornelius, he caſt about how to paſs this day more agreeably to his Character; that is to ſay, not without ſome Profitable Conference, nor wholly without obſervance of ſome Ancient Cuſtom.

He remembered to have read in Theocritus, that the Cradle of Hercules was a Shield: and being poſſeſs'd of an antique Buckler which he held as a moſt ineſtimable Relick, he determined to have the infant laid therein, and in that manner brought into the Study, to be ſhown to certain learned men of his acquaintance.

The regard he had for this Shield, had cauſed him formerly to compile a Diſſertation concerning it[1], proving from the ſeveral properties, and particularly the colour of the Ruſt, the exact chron logy thereof.

[1] See the Diſſertation on Dr. Woodward's Shield.

With this treatiſe, and a moderate ſupper, propoſed to entertain his Gueſts; tho' he had a another deſign, to have their aſſiſtance in the calc lation of his Son's Nativity.

He therefore took the Buckler out of a Caſe which he always kept it, leſt it might contract a modern Ruſt) and intruſted it to his Houſe-ma with orders that when the company was come i ſhould lay the child carefully in it, cover'd with mantle of blue Sattin.

The Gueſts were no ſooner ſeated, but they e tered into a warm Debate about the Triclinium a the manner of Decubitus of the Ancients, which C nelius broke off in this manner;

" This day, my friends, I purpoſe to exhibit r " ſon before you; a Child not wholly unwort " of inſpection, as he is deſcended from a Race " Virtuoſi. Let the Phyſiognomiſts examine his f " tures; let the Chirographiſts behold his Palr " but above all, let us conſult for the calculati " of his Nativity. To this end, as the child is r " vulgar, I will not preſent him unto you in a v " gar manner. He ſhall be cradled in my Anci " Shield, ſo famous through the Univerſities " Europe. You all know how I purchaſed that " valuable piece of Antiquity at the great (thou " indeed inadequate) expence of all the Plate of our " family, how happily I carried it off, and how " triumphantly I tranſported it hither, to the inex- " preſſible grief of all Germany. Happy in every " circumſtance, but that it broke the heart of the " great Melchior Inſipidus !"

Here he ſtopped his Speech, upon ſight of the Maid, who entered the room with the Child: He took it in his arms and proceeded:

" Behold then my Child, but firſt behold the " Shield: Behold this Ruſt,—or rather let me call " it this precious Ærugo,—behold this beautiful " varniſh of Time,—this venerable Verdure of ſo " many ages—

In ſpeaking theſe words, he ſlowly lifted up the Mantle, which covered it, inch by inch; but at every inch he uncovered, his cheeks grew paler, his hand trembled, his nerves failed, till on ſight of the whole, the Tremor became univerſal: The Shield and the Infant both dropt to the ground, and he had only ſtrength enough to cry out, " O " God! my Shield, my Shield!"

The truth was, the Maid (extremely concern'd for the reputation of her own cleanlineſs, and her young maſter's honour) had ſcoured it as clean as her Andirons [k].

[k] Poor Vadius, long with learned ſpleen devour'd,
Can taſte no pleaſure ſince his Shield was ſcour'd.

Cornelius ſunk back on a chair, the Gueſts ſtood aſtoniſhed, the infant ſquaul'd, the maid ran in, ſnatch'd it up again in her arms, flew into her miſtreſs's room, and told what had happen'd. Down ſtairs in an inſtant hurried all the Goſſips, where they found the Doctor in a Trance: Hungary water, Hartſhorn, and the confuſed noiſe of ſhrill voices, at length awaken'd him: when opening his eyes, he ſaw the Shield in the hands of the Houſe-maid. "O Woman! Woman! he cryed "(and ſnatched it violently from her) was it to "thy ignorance that this Relick owes its ruin? "Where, where is the beautiful Cruſt that covered "thee ſo long? where thoſe Traces of Time, and "Fingers as it were of Antiquity? Where all thoſe "beautiful obſcurities, the cauſe of much delightful "diſputation, where doubt and curioſity went hand "in hand, and eternally exerciſed the ſpeculations "of the learned? All this the rude Touch of an "ignorant Woman hath done away? The curious "Prominence at the belly of that figure, which ſome "taking for the Cuſpis of a ſword, denominated a "Roman Soldier; others accounting the Inſignia "Virilia, pronounced to be one of the Dii Termini; "behold ſhe hath cleaned it in like ſhameful ſort, "and ſhewn to be the head of a Nail. O my "Shield! my Shield! well may I ſay with Horace, "non bene relicta Parmula.

The Goſſips, not at all inquiring into the cauſe of his ſorrow, only aſked if the Child had no hurt? and cry'd, "Come, come, all is well; what has "the Woman done but her duty? a tight cleanly "wench I warrant her; what a ſtir a man makes "about a Baſon, that an hour ago, before this la- "bour was beſtowed upon it, a Country Barber "would not have hung at his ſhop door.', A Ba- "ſon! (cry'd another) no ſuch matter, 'tis no- "thing but a paultry old Sconce, with the nozzle "broke off." The learned Gentlemen, who till now had ſtood ſpeechleſs, hereupon looking narrowly on the Shield, declared their Aſſent to this latter opinion; and deſired Cornelius to be comforted, aſſuring him it was a Sconce and no other. But this, inſtead of comforting, threw the Doctor into ſuch a violent Fit of Paſſion, that he was carried off groaning and ſpeechleſs to bed; where being quite ſpent, he fell into a kind of ſlumber.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Suction and Nutrition of the Great Scriblerus in his Infancy, and of the firſt Rudiments of his Learning.

AS ſoon as Cornelius awaked, he raiſed himſelf on his elbow, and caſting his eye on Mrs. Scriblerus, ſpoke as follows. "Wiſely was it "ſaid by Homer, that in the Cellar of Jupiter are "two barrels, the one of good, the other of evil, "which he never beſtows on mortals ſeparately, but "conſtantly mingles them together. Thus at the "ſame time hath Heav'n bleſſed me with the birth "of a Son, and afflicted me with the ſcouring of "my Shield. Yet let us not repine at his Diſpen-"ſations, who gives, and who takes away; but "rather join in prayer, that the Ruſt of Antiquity "which he hath been pleaſed to take from my "Shield, may be added to my Son; and that ſo "much of it, as it is my purpoſe he ſhall contract "in his Education, may never be deſtroyed by any "Modern poliſhing."

He could no longer bear the ſight of the Shield, but ordered it ſhould be removed for ever from his eyes. It was not long after purchas'd by Dr. Woodward, who, by the aſſiſtance of Mr. Kemp, incruſted t with a new Ruſt, and is the ſame whereof a Cut hath been engraved, and exhibited to the great Con-ntation of the learned.

Cornelius now began to regulate the Suction of his child. Seldom did there paſs a day without diſputes between him and the Mother, or the Nurſe, concerning the nature of Aliment. The poor Woman never dined but he denied her ſome diſh or other, which he judged prejudicial to her milk. One day ſhe had a longing deſire to a piece of beef, and as ſhe ſtretch'd her hand towards it, the old gentleman drew it away, and ſpoke to this effect. "Hadſt thou read the Ancients, O Nurſe, thou "would'ſt prefer the welfare of the Infant which "thou nouriſheſt, to the indulging of an irregular "and voracious Appetite. Beef, it is true, may "confer a Robuſtneſs on the limbs of my ſon, but "will hebetate and clog his Intellectuals." While he ſpoke this, the Nurſe looked upon him with much anger, and now and then caſt a wiſhful eye upon the Beef—"Paſſion, (continued the Doctor, "ſtill holding the diſh) throws the mind into too "violent a fermentation; it is a kind of Fever of "the ſoul, or, as Horace expreſſes it, a ſhort Mad-"neſs. Conſider, Woman, that this day's Suction "of my ſon may cauſe him to imbibe many ungo-"vernable Paſſions, and in a manner ſpoil him for " the temper of a Philoſopher. Romulus by ſuck-

" ing a Wolf, became of a fierce and ſavage diſpo-
" ſition: and were I to breed ſome Ottoman Em" peror, or Founder of a Military Commonwealth,
" perhaps I might indulge thee in this carnivorous
" Appetite."—What, interrupted the Nurſe, Beef ſpoil the underſtanding? that's fine indeed—how then could our Parſon preach as he does upon Beef, and Pudding too, if you go to that? Don't tell me of your Ancients, had not you almoſt killed the poor babe with a Diſh of Dæmonial black Broth?—
" Lacedæmonian black Broth, thou would'ſt ſay,
" (replied Cornelius) but I cannot allow the ſurfeit
" to have been occaſioned by that diet, ſince it was " recommended by the Divine Lycurgus. No,
" Nurſe, thou muſt certainly have eaten ſome meats
" of ill Digeſtion the day before, and that was the " real cauſe of his diſorder. Conſider, Woman,
" the different Temperaments of different Na" tions: What makes the Engliſh Phlegmatick and " melancholy, but Beef? what renders the Welſh
" ſo hot and cholerick, but Cheeſe and Leeks? the " French derive their levity from their Soups, Frogs,
" and Muſhrooms: I would not let my Son dine
" like an Italian, leſt like an Italian he ſhould be " jealous and revengeful: The warm and ſolid diet
" of Spain may be more beneficial, as it might en-
" due him with a profound Gravity, but at the ame time he might ſuck in with their food their ntolerable Vice of Pride. Therefore, Nurſe, in ort, I hold it requiſite to deny you at preſent, ot only Beef, but likewiſe whatſoever any of oſe Nations eat." During this ſpeech, the rſe remained poating and marking her plate with knife, nor would ſhe touch a bit during the ole dinner. This the old Gentleman obſerving, ered that the Child, to avoid the riſque of im- ing ill humours, ſhould be kept from her breaſt that day, and be fed with Butter, mixed with ney, according to a Preſcription he had met with newhere in Euſtathius upon Homer. This indeed ve the Child a great looſeneſs, but he was not ncerned at it, in the opinion that whatever harm might do his body, would be amply recompenſed the improvements of his underſtanding. But m thenceforth he inſiſted every day upon a par- ular Diet to be obſerved by the Nurſe; under ich having been long uneaſy, ſhe at laſt parted m the family, on his ordering her for dinner the ps of a Sow with Pig; taking it as the higheſt in- gnity, and a direct Inſult upon her Sex and Call- g.

Four years of young Martin's life paſſed away in abbles of this nature. Mrs. Scriblerus conſidered was now time to inſtruct him in the fundamen- s of Religion, and to that end took no ſmall pains in teaching him his Catechiſm. But Cornelius looked upon this as a tedious way of Inſtruction, and therefore employed his head to find out more pleaſing methods, the better to induce him to be fond of learning. He would frequently carry him to the Puppet-ſhow, of the Creation of the world, where the Child with exceeding delight gained a notion of the Hiſtory of the Bible. His firſt rudiments in prophane hiſtory were acquired by ſeeing of Raree-ſhows, where he was brought acquainted with all the Princes of Europe. In ſhort, the old Gentleman ſo contrived it, to make every thing contribute to the improvement of his knowledge, even to his very Dreſs. He invented for him a Geographical ſuit of cloaths, which might give him ſome hints of that Science, and likewiſe ſome knowledge of the Commerce of different Nations. He had a French Hat with an African Feather, Holland Shirts and Flanders Lace, Engliſh Cloth lined with Indian Silk, his Gloves were Italian, and his Shoes were Spaniſh: He was made to obſerve this, and daily catechis'd thereupon, which his Father was wont to call "Travelling at home." He never gave him a Fig or an Orange but he obliged him to give an account from what Country it came. In Natural hiſtory he was much aſſiſted by his Curioſity in Sign-Poſts, inſomuch that he hath often confeſſed he owed to them the knowledge of many Creatures which he never found ſince in any Author, ſuch as White Lions, Golden Dragons, &c. He once thought the ſame of Green Men, but had ſince found them mentioned by Kercherus, and verified in the Hiſtory of William of Newbury [l].

His diſpoſition to the Mathematicks was diſcovered very early, by his drawing [m] parallel lines on his bread and butter, and interſecting them at equal Angles, ſo as to form the whole Superficies into Squares. But in the midſt of all theſe Improvements, a ſtop was put to his learning the Alphabet, nor would he let him proceed to Letter D, till he could truly and diſtinctly pronounce C in the ancient manner, at which the Child unhappily boggled for near three months. He was alſo obliged to delay his learning to write, having turned away the Writing Maſter becauſe he knew nothing of Fabius's Waxen Tables.

Cornelius having read, and ſeriouſly weighed the methods by which the famous Montagne was educated [n], and reſolving in ſome degree to exceed [l] Gul. Neubrig. Book i. ch. 27.

[m] Paſcal's Life—Locke of Educ. etc.—There are ſome extravagant lies told of the excellent Paſcal's amazing genius for Mathematics in his early youth; and ſome trifling directions given for the introduction to the elements of Science, in Mr. Locke's book of Education.

[n] Who was taught Latin in his nurſe's arms, and not ſuffered to hear a word of his mother tongue, till he could ſpeak the other perfectly.

them, reſolved he ſhould ſpeak and learn no
but the learned Languages, and eſpecially the G in which he conſtantly eat and drank, accordi Homer. But what moſt conduced to his eaſy a ment of this Language, was his Love of Gi bread; which his Father obſerving, cauſed it ſtampt with the Letters of the Greek Alphabet;
the Child the very firſt day eat as far as Iota.
his particular application to this language abov
reſt, he attained ſo great a proficience therein, Gronovius ingenuouſly confeſſes he durſt not c with this Child in Greek at eight years old [o], a fourteen he compoſed a Tragedy in the ſame guage, as the younger [p] Pliny had done b him.

He learned the Oriental Languages of Erpe who reſided ſome time with his father for that poſe. He had ſo early a Reliſh for the Eaſtern of writing, that even at this time he compoſe imitation of it) the Thouſand and One Arabian and alſo the Perſian Tales, which have been

[o] So Montaigne ſays of his Latin. George Bucanan et Antoine Muret, mes precepteurs domeſtiques, m'ont dit ſo que j'avois ce langage en mon enfance ſi preſt et ſi à main craignoient à m'accoſter.——Somme, nous nous latinizames qu'il en regorgea juſque à nos villages tout autour, ou i encores, et ont pris pied par l'uſage, pluſieurs appellation tines d'Artiſans et d'outils.

[p] Plin. Epiſt. Lib. 7.

anſlated into ſeveral languages, and lately into our wn with particular elegance, by Mr. Ambroſe hilips. In this work of his Childhood, he was ot a little aſſiſted by the hiſtorical Traditions of is Nurſe.

CHAP. V.

A Diſſertation upon Play-things.

HERE follow the Inſtructions of Cornelius Scriblerus concerning the Plays and Play-things to be uſed by his ſon Martin.

"Play was invented by the Lydians as a remedy "againſt Hunger. Sophocles ſays of Palamedes, "that he invented Dice to ſerve ſometimes inſtead "of a Dinner. It is therefore wiſely contrived by "Nature, that Children, as they have the keeneſt "Appetites, are moſt addicted to Plays. From the "ſame cauſe, and from the unprejudiced and incor-"rupt ſimplicity of their minds it proceeds, that the "Plays of the Ancient Children are preſerved more "entire than any other of their Cuſtoms[q]. In this

[q] Dr. Arbuthnot uſed to ſay, that notwithſtanding all the boaſts of the ſafe conveyance of Tradition; it was no where preſerved pure and uncorrupt but amongſt Children; whoſe Games and Plays are delivered down invariably from one generation to another.

" matter I would recommend to all who have any " concern in my Son's Education, that they deviate " not in the leaſt from the primitive and ſimple " Antiquity.

" To ſpeak firſt of the Whiſtle, as it is the firſt " of all Play-things. I will have it exactly to cor- " reſpond with the ancient Fiſtula, and accordingly " to be compoſed ſeptem paribus diſjuncta cicutis.

" I heartily wiſh a diligent ſearch may be made " after the true Crepitaculum, or Rattle of the An- " cients, for that (as Archytas Tarentinus was of opi- " nion) kept the Children from breaking Earthen " Ware. The China cups in theſe days are not at " all the ſafer for the modern Rattles; which is " an evident proof how far their Crepitacula ex- " ceeded ours.

" I would not have Martin as yet to ſcourge a " Top, till I am better informed whether the Tro- " chus which was recommended by Cato be really " our preſent Top, or rather the Hoop which the " boys drive with a ſtick. Neither Croſs and Pile, " nor Ducks and Drakes are quite ſo ancient as " Handy-dandy, tho' Macrobius and St. Auguſtine " take notice of the firſt, and Minutius Fœlix de- " ſcribes the latter; but Handy-dandy is mentioned " by Ariſtotle, Plato, and Ariſtophanes.

" The Play which the Italians call Cinque, and " the French Mourre, is extremely ancient; it was played at by Hymen and Cupid at the Marriage of Pſyché, and termed by the Latins, digitis micare.

"Julius Pollux deſcribes the Omilla or Chuck-farthing: tho' ſome will have our modern Chuck-farthing to be nearer the Aphetinda of the Ancients. He alſo mentions the Baſilinda, or King I am; and Myinda, or Hoopers-Hide.

"But the Chytrindra deſcribed by the ſame Author is certainly not our Hot-cockle; for that was by pinching and not by ſtriking; tho' there are good authors who affirm the Rathapygiſmus to be yet nearer the modern Hot-cockles. My ſon Martin may uſe either of them indifferently, they being equally antique.

"Building of Houſes, and Riding upon Sticks have 'been uſed by children in all ages, Ædificare caſas, 'equitare in arundine longa. Yet I much doubt whe-'ther the riding upon Sticks did not come into uſe 'after the age of the Centaurs.

"There is one Play which ſhews the gravity of 'ancient Education, called the Acinetinda, in which 'children contended who could longeſt ſtand ſtill. 'This we have ſuffered to periſh entirely; and, if 'I might be allowed to gueſs, it was certainly firſt 'loſt among the French.

"I will permit my Son to play at Apodidaſ-'cinda, which can be no other than our Puſs in a 'Corner.

" Julius Pollux in his ninth book ſpeaks of the " Melolonthe or the Kite; but I queſtion whether " the Kite of Antiquity was the ſame with ours; " And though the Ορτυϛοκοπία or Quail-fighting is " what is moſt taken notice of, they had doubtleſs " Cock-matches alſo, as is evident from certain an- " cient Gems and Relievo's.

" In a word, let my ſon Martin diſport himſelf " at any Game truly Antique, except one, which " was invented by a people among the Thracians, " who hung up one of their Companions in a Rope, " and gave him a Knife to cut himſelf down; which " if he failed in, he was ſuffered to hang till he " was dead; and this was only reckoned a ſort of " joke. I am utterly againſt this, as barbarous " and cruel.

" I cannot conclude, without taking notice of the " beauty of the Greek names, whoſe Etymologies " acquaint us with the nature of the ſports; and " how infinitely, both in ſenſe and ſound, they ex- " cel our barbarous names of Plays."

Notwithſtanding the foregoing injunctions of Dr. Cornelius, he yet condeſcended to allow the Child the uſe of ſome few modern Play-things; ſuch as might prove of any benefit to his mind, by inſtilling an early notion of the ſciences. For example, he found that Marbles taught him Percuſſion and the Laws of Motion; Nut-crackers the uſe

Leaver; Swinging on the ends of a Board, lance; Bottle-ſcrews, the Vice; Whirligigs the d Peritrochia; Bird-cages, the Pully; and Tops trifugal motion.

ers of his ſports were farther carried to im- his tender ſoul even in Virtue and Morality. ill only inſtance one of the moſt uſeful and ive, Bob-cherry, which teaches at once two Virtues, Patience and Conſtancy; the firſt in ig to the purſuit of one end, the latter in ; a diſappointment.

les all theſe, he taught him as a diverſion, l and ſecret manner of Stealing, according to ſtom of the Lacedæmonians; wherein he led ſo well, that he practiſed it to the day of th.

CHAP. VI.

e Gymnaſticks, in what Exerciſes Mar- s was educated; ſomething concern- Muſick, and what ſort of a Man his le was.

OR was Cornelius leſs careful in adhering to the rules of the pureſt Antiquity, in rela- the Exerciſes of his Son. He was ſtript powder'd, and anointed, but not conſtantly bath'd, which occaſion'd many heavy complaints of the Laundreſs about dirtying his linen. When he played at Quoits, he was allowed his Breeches and Stockings; becauſe the Diſcoboli (as Cornelius well knew) were naked to the middle only. The Mother often contended for modern Sports, and common Cuſtoms, but this was his conſtant reply, "Let "a Daughter be the care of her Mother, but the "Education of a Son ſhould be the delight of his "Father."

It was about this time, he heard, to his exceeding content, that the Harpaſtus of the Ancients was yet in uſe in Cornwall, and known there by the name of Hurling. He was ſenſible the common Foot-ball was a very imperfect imitation of that exerciſe; and thought it neceſſary to ſend Martin into the Weſt, to be initiated in that truly ancient and manly part of the Gymnaſticks. The poor boy was ſo unfortunate as to return with a broken leg. This Cornelius looked upon but as a ſlight ailment and promiſed his Mother he would inſtantly cure it: He ſlit a green Reed, and caſt the Knife upward, then tying the two parts of the Reed to the diſjointed place, pronounced theſe words[r], Daries, daries, aſtataries diſſunapiter; huat, banat, huat, iſta, piſta, ſiſta, domi abo, damnauſtra But finding, to his no ſmall aſtoniſhment, that this had no effect, in five days he condeſcended to have it ſet by a modern Surgeon.

[r] Plin. Hiſt. Nat. lib. xvii. in fine. Carmen contra luxata membra, cujus verba inſerere non equidem ſerio auſim, quanquam a Catone prodita. Vid. Caton. de re ruſt c. 160.

Mrs. Scriblerus, to prevent him from expoſing her ſon to the like dangerous Exerciſes for the future, propoſed to ſend for a Dancing-Maſter, and to have him taught the Minuet and Rigadoon. "Dancing (quoth Cornelius) I much approve, for "Socrates ſaid the beſt Dancers were the beſt war- "riors; but not thoſe ſpecies of Dancing which "you mention: They are certainly Corruptions of "the Comic and Satyric Dance, which were ut- "terly diſliked by the founder Ancients. Martin "ſhall learn the Tragic Dance only, and I will "ſend all over Europe, till I find an Antiquary able "to inſtruct him in the Saltatio Pyrrhica. [a] Scali- "ger, from whom my Son is lineally deſcended, "boaſts to have performed this warlike Dance in "the preſence of the Emperor, to the great admi- "ration of all Germany. What would he ſay, "could he look down and ſee one of his poſterity "ſo ignorant, as not to know the leaſt ſtep of that "noble kind of Saltation?"

[a] Scalig. Poetic. l. x. c. 9. Hanc ſaltationem Pyrrhicam, nos ſæpe et diu, juſſu Bonifacii patrui, coram Divo Maximiliano, non ſine ſtupore totius Germaniæ, repræſentavimus. Quo tempore vox illa Imperatoris, Hic puer aut thoracem pro pelle aut pro cunis habuit.

The poor Lady was at laſt enur'd to bear all theſe things with a laudable patience, till one day her huſband was ſeized with a new thought. He had met with a ſaying, that "Spleen, Garter, and "Girdle are the three impediments to the Curſus." Therefore Pliny (lib. xi. cap. 37.) ſays, that ſuch as excel in that exerciſe have their Spleen cauterized, "My ſon (quoth Cornelius) runs but hea-"vily; therefore I will have this operation per-"formed upon him immediately. Moreover it "will cure that immoderate Laughter to which I "perceive he is addicted: For Laughter (as the "ſame author hath it, ibid.) is cauſed by the big-"neſs of the Spleen." This deſign was no ſooner hinted to Mrs. Scriblerus, but ſhe burſt into tears, wrung her hands, and inſtantly ſent to his Brother Albertus, begging him for the love of God to make haſte to her Huſband.

Albertus was a diſcreet man, ſober in his opinions, clear of Pedantry, and knowing enough both in Books and in the World, to preſerve a due regard for whatever was uſeful or excellent, whether ancient or modern: If he had not always the authority, he had at leaſt the art, to divert Cornelius from many extravagancies. It was well he came ſpeedily, or Martin could not have boaſted the entire Quota of his Viſcera. "What does it "ſignify (quoth Albertus) whether my Nephew

" excels in the Curſus or not? Speed is often a " ſymptom of Cowardice, witneſs Hares and Deer." —" Do not forget Achilles (quoth Cornelius) I " know that Running has been condemned by the " proud Spartans, as uſeleſs in war; and yet De- " moſthenes could ſay. Ἀνὴρ ὁ φεύγων καὶ πάλιν " μαχήσεται; a thought which the Engliſh Hudibras " has well rendered,

For he that runs may fight again,
Which he can never do that's ſlain.

" That's true (quoth Albertus) but pray conſider " on the other ſide that Animals [t] ſpleened grow " extremely ſalacious, an experiment well known " in dogs. Cornelius was ſtruck with this, and " replied gravely; If it be ſo, I will defer the " Operation, for I will not encreaſe the powers of " my ſon's body at the expence of thoſe of his " mind. I am indeed diſappointed in moſt of my " projects, and fear I muſt ſit down at laſt con- " tented with ſuch methods of Education as mo- " dern barbarity affords. Happy had it been for " us all, had we lived in the Age of Auguſtus! " Then my ſon might have heard the Philoſophers " diſpute in the Porticos of the Palæſtra, and at " the ſame time formed his Body and his Under-

[t] Blackmore's Eſſay on Spleen.

" ſtanding " " It is true (reply'd Albertus) we " have no Exedræ for the Philoſophers, adjoining " to our Tennis-Courts; but there are Ale-houſes " where he will hear very notable argumenta- " tions: Tho' we come not up to the Ancients in " the Tragic-dance, we excel them in the κυβι- " στικὴ, or the art of Tumbling. The Ancients " would have beat us at Quoits, but not ſo much " at the Jaculum or pitching the Bar. The [u] Pu- " gilatus is in as great perfection in England as in " old Rome, and the Corniſh-Hug in the [w] Luctus " is equal to the volutatoria of the Ancients." " You could not (anſwered Cornelius) have pro- " duced a more unlucky inſtance of modern folly " and barbarity, than what you ſay of the Jacu- " lum. [x] The Cretans wiſely forbid their ſervants " Gymnaſticks, as well as Arms; and yet your " modern Footmen exerciſe themſelves daily in " the Jaculum at the corner of Hyde-Park, whilſt " their enervated Lords are lolling in their chariots " a ſpecies of Vectitation ſeldom us'd amongſt " the Ancients, except by old Men.) You ſay " well (quoth Albertus) and we have ſeveral other " kinds of Vectitation unknown to the Ancients; " particularly flying Chariots, where the people " may have the benefit of this exerciſe at the ſmall

[u] Fifty-Cuffs. [w] Wreſtling.
[x] Ariſtot. politic. lib. ii. cap. 3.

'expence of a farthing. But ſuppoſe (which I 'readily grant) that the Ancients excelled us almoſt 'in every thing, yet why this ſingularity? your ſon 'muſt take up with ſuch maſters as the preſent age 'affords; we have Dancing-maſters, Writing-'maſters, and Muſick-maſters.

The bare mention of Muſick threw Cornelius into paſſion. "How can you dignify (quoth he) this 'modern fidling with the name of Muſick? Will 'any of your beſt Hautboys encounter a Wolf 'now-a-days with no other arms but their inſtru-'ments, as did that ancient piper Pythocaris? Have 'ever wild Boars, Elephants, Deer, Dolphins, Whales or Turbots, ſhew'd the leaſt emotion at the moſt elaborate ſtrains of your modern Scrapers, all which have been, as it were, tamed and humanized by ancient Muſicians? Does not[y] Ælian tell us how the Libyan Mares were excited to horſing by Muſick? (which ought in truth to be a caution to modeſt Women againſt frequenting Operas; and conſider, Brother, you are brought to this dilemma, either to give up the virtue of the Ladies, or the power of your Muſick:) Whence proceeds the degeneracy of our Morals? Is it not from the loſs of ancient Muſick, by which (ſays Ariſtotle) they taught all the Virtues? Elſe might we turn Newgate into a College of [y] Ælian Hiſt. Animal. lib. xi. cap. 18. and lib. xii. cap. 44.

" Dorian Muſicians, who ſhould teach moral Vir" tues to thoſe people. Whence comes it that our " preſent diſeaſes are ſo ſtubborn? whence is it that " I daily deplore my ſciatical pains? Alas! becauſe
" we have loſt their true cure, by the melody of " the Pipe. All this was well known to the Ancients,
" as [z] Theophraſtus aſſures us, (whence [a] Cælius
" calls it loca dolentia decantare) only indeed ſome
" ſmall remains of this ſkill are preſerved in the " cure of the Tarantula. Did not [b] Pythagoras ſtop
" a company of drunken Bullies from ſtorming a " civil houſe, by changing the ſtrain of the Pipe to
" the ſober Spondæus? and yet your modern Muſi-
" cians want art to defend their windows from com" mon Nickers. It is well known that when the " Lacedæmonian Mob were up, they [c] commonly
" ſent for a Leſbian Muſician to appeaſe them, and
" they immediately grew calm as ſoon as they heard
" Terpander ſing: Yet I don't believe that the " Pope's whole band of Muſick, though the beſt
" of this age, could keep his Holineſs's Image from " being burnt on a fifth of November. Not " would Terpander himſelf (replied Albertus) at " Billingſgate, nor Timotheus at Hockley in the " Hole have any manner of effect, nor both of z Athenæus, lib. xiv. P. a Lib. de ſanitate tuenda, cap. 2. P. b Quintilian. lib. i. cap. 10. c Suidas in Timotheo.

"them together bring [d] Horneck to common civi"lity." "That's a groſs miſtake (ſaid Cornelius
"very warmly) and to prove it ſo, I have here a
"ſmall Lyra of my own, fram'd, ſtrung, and tun'd
"after the ancient manner. I can play ſome frag"ments of Leſbian tunes, and I wiſh I were to try "them upon the moſt paſſionate creatures alive."
——"You never had a better opportunity (ſays
"Albertus) for yonder are two Apple women ſcold-
"ing, and juſt ready to uncoif one another."
With that Cornelius, undreſſed as he was, jumps out into his Balcony, his Lyra in hand, in his ſlip-pers, with his breeches hanging down to his ankles, a ſtocking upon his head, and waiſtcoat of murreycoloured ſatin upon his body: He touched his Lyra with a very unuſual ſort of an Harpegiatura, nor were his hopes fruſtrated. The odd Equipage, the uncouth Inſtrument, the ſtrangeneſs of the Man and of the Muſick, drew the ears and eyes of the whole Mob that were got about the two female Champions, and at laſt of the Combatants themſelves. They all approach'd the Balcony, in as cloſe attention as Orpheus's firſt Audience of Cattle, or that of an Italian Opera, when ſome favourite Air is juſt awakened. This ſudden effect of his Muſick encouraged him mightily, and it was obſerved he never

[d] Horneck, a ſcurrilous Scribler, who wrote a weekly paper, called the High German Doctor.

touch'd his Lyre in ſuch a truly chromatick and enharmonick manner as upon that occaſion. The mob laughed, ſung, jumped, danced, and uſed many odd geſtures, all which he judged to be cauſed by the various ſtrains and modulations. "Mark (quoth "he) in this, the power of the Ionian, in that, you "ſee the effect of the Æolian." But in a little time they began to grow riotous, and threw ſtones: Cornelius then withdrew, but with the greateſt air of triumph in the world. "Brother (ſaid he) do you "obſerve I have mixed unawares too much of the "Phrygian; I might change it to the Lydian, and "ſoften their riotous tempers: But it is enough: learn "from this Sample to ſpeak with veneration of an"cient Muſick. If this Lyre in my unſkilful hands "can perform ſuch wonders, what muſt it not have "done in thoſe of a Timotheus or a Terpander?" Having ſaid this, he retired with the utmoſt Exultation in himſelf, and Contempt of his Brother; and, it is ſaid, behaved that night with ſuch unuſual haughtineſs to his family, that they all had reaſon to wiſh for ſome ancient Tibicen to calm his Temper.

CHAP. VII.

Rhetorick, Logick, and Metaphyſicks.

COrnelius having (as hath been ſaid) many ways been diſappointed in his attempts of improving the bodily Forces of his ſon, thought it now high time to apply to the Culture of his Internal faculties. He judged it proper in the firſt place to inſtruct him in Rhetorick. But herein we ſhall not need to give the Reader any account of his wonderful progreſs, ſince it is already known to the learned world by his Treatiſe on this ſubject: I mean the admirable Diſcourſe Περὶ Βάθους, which he wrote at this time, but concealed from his Father, knowing his extreme partiality for the Ancients. It lay by him concealed, and perhaps forgot among the great multiplicity of other Writings, till, about the year 1727, he ſent it us to be printed, with many additional examples drawn from the excellent live Poets of this preſent age. We proceed therefore to Logic and Metaphyſics.

The wiſe Cornelius was convinced, that theſe being Polemical Arts, could no more be learned alone, than Fencing or Cudgel-playing. He thought it therefore neceſſary to look out for ſome Youth of pregnant parts, to be a ſort of humble Companion to his ſon in thoſe ſtudies. His good fortune directed him to one of the moſt ſingular endowments, whoſe name was Conradus Crambe, who by the father's ſide was related to the Crouches of Cambridge, and his Mother was Couſin to Mr. Swan, Gameſter and Punſter of the City of London. So that from both parents he drew a natural diſpoſition to ſport himſelf with Words, which as they are ſaid to be the counters of wiſe Men, and ready-money of Fools, Crambe had great ſtore of caſh of the latter ſort. Happy Martin in ſuch a Parent, and ſuch a Companion! What might not he atchieve in Arts and Sciences!

Here I muſt premiſe a general obſervation of great benefit to mankind. That there are many people who have the uſe only of one Operation of the Intellect, tho', like ſhort-ſighted men, they can hardly diſcover it themſelves: they can form ſingle apprehenſions [e], but have neither of the other two faculties, the judicium or diſcurſus. Now as it is wiſely ordered, that people deprived of one ſenſe have the others in more perfection, ſuch people will form ſingle Ideas with a great deal of vivacity; and e When a learned Friend once urged to our Author the Authority of a famous Dictionary-maker againſt the latinity of the expreſſion amor publicus, which he had uſed in an inſcription, he replied, that he would allow a Dictionary-maker to underſtand a ſingle word, but not two words put together.

happy were it indeed if they would confine themſelves to ſuch, without forming judicia, much leſs argumentations.

Cornelius quickly diſcovered, that theſe two laſt operations of the intellect were very weak in Martin, and almoſt totally extinguiſhed in Crambe; however he uſed to ſay, that Rules of Logick are Spectacles to a purblind underſtanding, and therefore he reſolved to proceed with his two Pupils.

Martin's underſtanding was ſo totally immerſed in ſenſible objects, that he demanded examples from Material things of the abſtracted Ideas of Logick: As for Crambe, he contented himſelf with the Words, and when he could but form ſome conceit upon them, was fully ſatisfied. Thus Crambe would tell his Inſtructor, that All men were not ſingular; that Individuality could hardly be prædicated of any man, for it was commonly ſaid that a man is not the ſame he was, that madmen are beſide themſelves, and drunken men come to themſelves; which ſhows, that few men have that moſt valuable logical endowment, Individuality [f]. Cornelius told Martin that a ſhoulder of mutton was an individual, which Crambe denied, for he had ſeen it cut into commons; That's true (quoth the Tutor) but you never ſaw it cut into ſhoulders of mutton: If it could (quoth Crambe) it would be the moſt lovely individual of the Univerſity. When he was told, a ſubſtance was that which was ſubject to accidents; then Soldiers (quoth Crambe) are the moſt ſubſtantial people in the world. Neither would he allow it to be a good definition of accident, that it could be preſent or abſent without the deſtruction of the ſubject; ſince there are a great many accidents that deſtroy the ſubject, as burning does a houſe, and death a man. But as to that, Cornelius informed him, that there was a natural death, and a logical death; that though a man after his natural death was not capable of the leaſt pariſh-office, yet he might ſtill keep his Stall amongſt the logical prædicaments.

[f] "But if it be poſſible for the ſame man to have diſtinct incommunicable conſciouſneſs at different times, it is without doubt the ſame man would at different times make different perſons. Which we ſee is the ſenſe of mankind in not puniſhing the madman for the ſober man's actions, nor the ſober man for what the madman did, thereby making them two perſons; which is ſomewhat explained by our way of ſpeaking in Eng-

Cornelius was forced to give Martin ſenſible images; thus calling up the Coachman he aſked him what he had ſeen in the Bear-garden? the man anſwered, he ſaw two men fight a prize; one was a fair man, a Sergeant in the Guards; the other black, a Butcher; the Sergeant had red Breeches, the Butcher blue; they fought upon a Stage about four o' clock, and the Sergeant wounded the Butcher in the leg. "Mark (quoth Cornelius) how the fellow runs "through the prædicaments. Men, ſubſtantia; two, "quantitas; fair and black, qualitas; Sergeant and "Butcher, relatio; wounded the other, actio & "paſſio; fighting, ſitus; Stage, ubi; two a Clock, "quando; blue and red Breeches, habitus." At the ſame time he warned Martin, that what he now learn'd as a Logician, he muſt forget as a natural Philoſopher; that tho' he now taught them that accidents inhered in the ſubject, they would find in time there was no ſuch thing; and that colour, taſte, ſmell, heat, and cold, were not in the things but only phantaſms of our brains. He was forced to let them into this ſecret, for Martin could not conceive how a habit of dancing inhered in a dancing-maſter, when he did not dance; nay, he would demand the Characteriſticks of Relations: Crambe uſed to help him out by telling him, a Cuckold, a loſing gameſter, a man that had not dined, a young heir that was kept ſhort by his father, might be all known by their countenance; that, in this laſt caſe, the Paternity and Filiation leave very ſenſible impreſſions in the relatum and correlatum. The greateſt difficulty was when they came to the Tenth prædicament: Crambe affirmed that his habitus was more a ſubſtance than he was; for his cloaths could better ſubſiſt without him, than he without his cloaths.

"life, when they ſay ſuch an one is not himſelf, or is beſides himſelf." Locke's Eſſay on Hum. Underſt. B. ii. c. 27.

Martin ſuppoſed an Univerſal Man to be like a Knight of a Shire or a Burgeſs of a Corporation, that repreſented a great many Individuals. His Father aſked him, if he could not frame the Idea of an Univerſal Lord Mayor? Martin told him, that, never having ſeen but one Lord Mayor, the Idea of that Lord Mayor always returned to his mind; that he had great difficulty to abſtract a Lord Mayor from his Fur Gown, and Gold Chain; nay, that the horſe he ſaw the Lord Mayor ride upon not a little diſturbed his imagination. On the other hand Crambe, to ſhow himſelf of a more penetrating genius, ſwore that he could frame a conception of a Lord Mayor not only without his Horſe, Gown, and Gold Chain, but even without Stature, Feature, Colour, Hands, Head, Feet, or any Body; which he ſuppoſed was the abſtract of a Lord Mayor[g]. Cornelius told him that he was a lying Raſcal; that an Univerſale was not the object of imagination, and that there was no ſuch thing in reality, or a parte Rei. But I can prove (quoth Crambe) that there are Clyſters a parte Rei, but Clyſters are univerſales; ergo. Thus I prove my Minor. Quod aptum eſt ineſſe multis, is an univerſale by definition: but every clyſter before it is dminiſtred has that quality; therefore every clyſter s an univerſale.

[g] This is not a fair repreſentation of what is ſaid in the Eſſay on Human Underſt. concerning general and abſtract ideas. But ſerious writers have done that Philoſopher the ſame injuſtice.

He alſo found fault with the Advertiſements, that ey were not ſtrict logical definitions: In an adver- ſement of a Dog ſtolen or ſtrayed, he ſaid it ought o begin thus, An irrational animal of the Genus animum, &c. Cornelius told them, that tho' thoſe ad- ertiſements were not framed according to the exact ules of logical definitions, being only deſcriptions f things numero differentibus, yet they contained a aint image of the prædicabilia, and were highly ubſervient to the common purpoſes of life; often iſcovering things that were loſt, both animate and nanimate. An Italian Greyhound, of a mouſe-colour, white ſpeck in the neck, lame of one leg, belongs to uch a Lady. Greyhound, genus; mouſe-coloured, tc. differentia; lame of one leg, accidens; belongs o ſuch a Lady, proprium.

Though I'm afraid I have tranſgreſſed upon my eader's patience already, I cannot help taking otice of one thing more extraordinary than any et mentioned; which was Crambe's Treatiſe of yllogiſms. He ſuppoſed that a Philoſopher's brain as like a great Foreſt, where Ideas ranged like nimals of ſeveral kinds; that thoſe Ideas copulated, nd engendered Concluſions; that when thoſe of ifferent Species copulate, they bring forth monſters r abſurdities; that the Major is the male, the Minor the female, which copulate by the Middle Term, and engender the Concluſion. Hence they are called the præmiſſa, or Predeceſſors of the Concluſion; and it is properly ſaid by the Logicians quod pariant ſcientiam, opinionem, they beget ſcience, opinion, etc. Univerſal Propoſitions are Perſons of quality; and therefore in Logick they are ſaid to be of the firſt Figure. Singular Propoſitions are private perſons, and therefore placed in the third or laſt figure, or rank. From thoſe principles all the rules of Syllogiſms naturally follow.

I. That there are only three Terms, neither more nor leſs; for to a child there can be only one father and one mother.

II. From univerſal premiſſes there follows an univerſal concluſion, as if one ſhould ſay, that perſons of quality always beget perſons of quality.

III. From the ſingular premiſſes follows only a ſingular concluſion, that is, if the parents be only private people, the iſſue muſt be ſo likewiſe.

IV. From particular propoſitions nothing can be concluded, becauſe the Individua vaga are (like whoremaſters and common ſtrumpets) barren.

V. There cannot be more in the concluſion than was in the premiſſes, that is, children can only inherit from their parents.

VI. The concluſion follows the weaker part, that is, children inherit the diſeaſes of their parents.

VII. From two negatives nothing can be concluded, for from divorce or ſeparation there can come no iſſue.

VIII. The medium cannot enter the concluſion, that being logical inceſt.

IX. An hypothetical propoſition is only a contract, or a promiſe of marriage; from ſuch therefore there can ſpring no real iſſue.

X. When the premiſſes or parents are neceſſarily join'd (or in lawful wedlock) they beget lawful iſſue; but contingently joined, they beget baſtards.

So much for the Affirmative propoſitions; the Negative muſt be deferred to another occaſion.

Crambe uſed to value himſelf upon this Syſtem, from whence he ſaid one might ſee the propriety of the expreſſion, ſuch a one has a barren imagination; and how common is it for ſuch people to adopt concluſions that are not the iſſue of their premiſſes? therefore as an Abſurdity is a Monſter, a Falſity is a Baſtard; and a true concluſion that followeth not from the premiſſes, may properly be ſaid to be adopted. But then what is an Enthymem? (quoth Cornelius.) Why an Enthymem (replied Crambe) is when the Major is indeed married to the Minor, but the Marriage kept ſecret.

METAPHYSICKS were a large field in which to exerciſe the Weapons Logick had put into their hands. Here Martin and Crambe uſed to engage like any Prize-fighters, before their Father, and his other learned companions of the Sympoſiacks. And as Prize-fighters will agree to lay aſide a buckler, or ſome ſuch defenſive weapon, ſo would Crambe promiſe not to uſe ſimpliciter et ſecundum quid, provided Martin would part with materialiter et formaliter: But it was found that without the help of the defenſive armour of thoſe Diſtinctions, the arguments cut ſo deep, that they fetched blood at every ſtroke. Their Theſes were picked out of Suarez, Thomas Aquinas, and other learned writers on thoſe ſubjects. I ſhall give the reader a taſte of ſome of them.

I. If the Innate Deſire of the knowledge of Metaphyſicks was the cauſe of the Fall of Adam; and the Arbor Porphyriana, the Tree of Knowledge of good and evil? affirmed.

II. If tranſcendental goodneſs could be truly predicated of the Devil? affirmed.

III. Whether one, or many be firſt? or if one doth not ſuppoſe the notion of many? Suarez,

IV. If the deſire of news in mankind be appetitus innatus, not elicitus? affirmed.

V. Whether there is in human underſtandings potential falſities? affirmed.

VI. Whether God loves a poſſible Angel better than an actually-exiſtent ſye? denied.

VII. If Angels paſs from one extreme to another without going through the middle? Aquinas.

VIII. If Angels know things more clearly in a morning? Aquinas.

IX. Whether every Angel hears what one Angel ſays to another? denied. Aquinas.

X. If temptation be proprium quarto modo of the Devil? denied. Aquinas.

XI. Whether one Devil can illuminate another? Aquinas.

XII. If there would have been any females born in the ſtate of Innocence? Aquinas.

XIII. If the Creation was finiſhed in ſix days, becauſe ſix is the moſt perfect number; or if ſix be the moſt perfect number, becauſe the Creation was finiſhed in ſix days? Aquinas.

There were ſeveral others, of which in the courſe of the life of this learned perſon we may have occaſion to treat: and one particularly that remains undecided to this day; it was taken from the learned Suarez.

KIV. An præter eſſe actualis eſſentiæ ſit aliud eſſe ne ceſſarium quo res actualiter exiſtat? In Engliſh thus. Whether beſides the real being of actual being, there be any other being neceſſary to cauſe a thing to be?

This brings into my mind a Project to baniſh Metaphyſicks out of Spain, which it was ſuppoſed might be effectuated by this method: That nobody ſhould uſe any Compound or Decompound of the Subſtantial Verbs but as they are read in the common conjugations; for every body will allow, that if you debar a Metaphyſician from ens, eſſentia, entitas, ſubſiſtentia, &c. there is an end of him.

Crambe regretted extremely, that Subſtantial Forms a race of harmleſs beings which had laſted for man years, and afforded a comfortable ſubſiſtence many poor Philoſophers, ſhould be now hunt down like ſo many Wolves, without the poſſibil of a retreat. He conſidered that it had gone m harder with them than with Eſſences, which retired from the Schools into the Apothecaries S where ſome of them had been advanced int degree of Quinteſſences. He thought there ſ be a retreat for poor ſubſtantial forms, among Gentlemen-uſhers at court; and that there we deed ſubſtantial forms, ſuch as forms of Praye forms of Government, without which the things could never long ſubſiſt. He alſo uſed to wonder it there was not a reward for ſuch as could find out a fourth Figure in Logick, as well as for him who ſhould diſcover the Longitude.

CHAP. VIII.

ANATOMY.

Cornelius, it is certain, had a moſt ſuperſtitious veneration for the Ancients; and if he contradicted each other, his Reaſon was ſo pliant and ductile, that he was always of the opinion of the laſt he read. But he reckoned it a point of honour never to be vanquiſhed in a diſpute; from which quality he acquired the Title of Invincible Doctor. While the Profeſſor of Anatomy was demonſtrating to his ſon the ſeveral parts of Inteſtines, Cornelius affirm'd that there were only two, the Colon and the Aichos, according to Hippocrates, who it was impoſſible could be miſtaken. It was in vain to aſſure him that the whole Canal of the Guts: Say what you pleaſe (he replied) this is both mine and Hippocrates's opinion. You may with equal reaſon (anſwered the Profeſſor) affirm, that a man's Liver hath five Lobes, and deny the Circulation of the blood. Ocular demonſtration (ſaid Cornelius) ſeems to be on your ſide, yet I ſhall not give it up: Show me any viſcus of a human body, and I will bring you a monſter that differs from the common rule in the ſtructure of it. If Nature ſhews ſuch variety in the ſame age, why may ſhe not have extended it further in ſeveral ages? Produce me a man now of the age of an Antediluvian: of the ſtrength of Samſon, or the Size of the Giants. If in the whole, why not in parts of the body, may it not be poſſible the preſent generation of men may differ from the Ancients? The Moderns have perhaps lengthened the channel of the guts by Gluttony, and diminiſhed the liver by hard drinking. Though it ſhall be demonſtrated that modern blood circulates, yet I will believe with Hippocrates, that the blood of the Ancients had a flux and reflux from the heart, like a Tide. Conſider how Luxury hath introduced new diſeaſes, and with them not improbably altered the whole Courſe of the Fluids. Conſider how the current of mighty Rivers, nay the very channels of the Ocean are changed from what they were in ancient days; and can we be ſo vain to imagine that the Microcoſm of the human body alone is exempted from the fate of all things? I queſtion not but plauſible Conjectures may be made even as to the Time when the blood firſt began to circulate.—Such diſputes as theſe frequently perplexed the Profeſſor to that degree, that he would now and then in a paſſion leave him in the middle of a Lecture, as he did at this time.

There unfortunately happened ſoon after, an unuſual accident, which retarded the proſecution of the ſtudies of Martin. Having purchaſed the body of a Malefactor, he hir'd a room for its diſſection near the Peſt-fields in St. Giles's, at a little diſtance from Tyburn Road. Crambe (to whoſe care this body was committed) carried it thither about twelve a clock at night in a Hackney-coach, few Houſekeepers being very willing to let their lodgings to ſuch kind of Operators. As he was ſoftly ſtalking up ſtairs in the dark, with the dead man in his arms, his burthen had like to have ſlipped from him, which he (to ſave from falling) graſp'd ſo hard about the belly, that it forced the wind through the Anus, with a noiſe exactly like the Crepitus of a living man. Crambe (who did not comprehend how this part of the Animal Oeconomy could remain in a dead man) was ſo terrified that he threw down the body, ran up to his maſter, and had ſcarce breath to tell him what had happened. Martin with all his philoſophy could not prevail upon him to return to his poſt.—You may ſay what yc (quoth Crambe) no man alive ever broke wi naturally; nay, he ſeemed to be mightily

by it.—The rolling of the corpſe down ſta ſuch a noiſe that it awaked the whole houſ maid ſhrieked, the landlady cried out Thie the Landlord, in his ſhirt as he was, taking in one hand, and a drawn ſword in the otl tured out of the Room. The maid with or gle petticoat ran up ſtairs, but ſpurning at body, fell upon it in a ſwoon. Now t lord ſtood ſtill and liſten'd, then he looke him, and ventured down in this manner
after another, till he came where lay h as dead, upon another corpſe unknown.
ran into the ſtreet and cried out Murc
Watch ran in, while Martin and Craml
ing all this uproar, were coming down ſtai Watch imagined they were making thei ſeized them immediately, and carried th neighbouring Juſtice: where upon ſearchi ſeveral kind of knives and dreadful weap found upon them. The Juſtice firſt Crambe.—What is your Name? ſays th
I have acquired (quoth Crambe) no gre
as yet; they call me Crambe or Crambo, ter which, as to myſelf; though it may diſpute to poſterity.—What is yours and ſter's profeſſion? "It is our buſineſs to imbrue our "hands in blood; we cut off the heads, and pull "out the hearts of thoſe that never injured us; we "rip up big-belly'd women, and tear children limb "from limb." Martin endeavoured to interrupt him; but the Juſtice, being ſtrangely aſtoniſhed with the frankneſs of Crambe's Confeſſion, ordered him to proceed; upon which he made the following Speech.

"May it pleaſe your Worſhip, as touching the "body of this man, I can anſwer each head that "my accuſers alledge againſt me to a hair. They "have hitherto talk'd like num-ſculls without "brains; but if your Worſhip will not only give "ear, but regard me with a favourable eye, I will "not be brow-beaten by the ſupercilious looks "of my adverſaries, who now ſtand cheek by "jowl by your Worſhip. I will prove to their "faces, that their foul mouths have not opened "their lips without a falſity; though they have "ſhowed their teeth as if they would bite off my "noſe. Now, Sir, that I may fairly ſlip my neck "out of the collar, I beg this matter may not be "ſlightly ſkined over. Tho' I have no man here "to back me, I will unboſom myſelf, ſince Truth "is on my ſide, and ſhall give them their bellies "full, though they think they have me upon the "hip. Whereas they ſay I came into their lodg-

" ings, with arms, and murdered this man with-
" out their Privity, I declare I had not the leaſt
" finger in it; and ſince I am to ſtand upon my " own legs, nothing of this matter ſhall be left till
" I ſet it upon a right foot. In the vein I am
" in, I cannot for my heart's blood and guts bear
" this uſage: I ſhall not ſpare my lungs to de" fend my good name: I was ever reckoned a " good liver; and I think I have the bowels of " compaſſion. I aſk but juſtice, and from the crown
" of my head to the ſoal of my foot I ſhall ever
" acknowledge myſelf your Worſhip's humble Ser" vant."

The Juſtice ſtared, the Landlord and Landlady lifted up their eyes, and Martin fretted, while Crambe talk'd in this rambling incoherent manner; till at length Martin begg'd to be heard. It was with great difficulty that the Juſtice was convinced, till they ſent for the Finiſher of human laws, of whom the Corpſe had been purchaſed; who looking near the left ear, knew his own work, and gave Oath accordingly.

No ſooner was Martin got home, but he fell into a paſſion at Crambe. " What Dæmon, he " cried, hath poſſeſſed thee, that thou wilt never
" forſake that impertinent cuſtom of punning?
" Neither my counſel nor my example have thus
" miſled thee; thou governeſt thyſelf by moſt er-

"roneous Maxims." Far from it (anſwers Crambe) my life is as orderly as my Dictionary, for by my Dictionary I order my life. I have made a Kalendar of radical words for all the ſeaſons, months, and days of the year: Every day I am under the dominion of a certain Word: but this day in particular I cannot be miſled, for I am governed by one that rules all ſexes, ages, conditions, nay all animals rational and irrational. Who is not governed by the word Led? Our Noblemen and Drunkards are pimp-led, Phyſicians and Pulſes fee-led, their Patients and Oranges pil-led, a New-married Man and an Aſs are bride-led, an old-married Man and a Pack-horſe ſad-led, Cats and Dice are rat-led, Swine and Nobility are fly-led, a Coquet and a Tinder-box are ſpark-led, a Lover and a Blunderer are grove-led. And that I may not be tedious——Which thou art (replied Martin, ſtamping with his foot) which thou art, I ſay, beyond all human toleration. Such an unnatural, unaccountable, uncoherent, unintelligible, unprofitable——There it is now! (interrupted Crambe) this is your Day for Uns. Martin could bear no longer——however, compoſing his Countenance, Come hither, he cried, there are five pounds, ſeventeen ſhillings and nine-pence: thou haſt been with me eight months, three weeks, two days, and four hours. Poor Crambe upon the receipt of his Salary, fell into tears, flung the money upon ground, and burſt forth in theſe words:—— Cicero, Cicero! if to pun be a crime, 'tis a cr I have learned from thee: O Bias, Bias! if to be a crime, by thy example was I biaſs'd.—— Whereupon Martin (conſidering that one of greateſt of Orators, and even a Sage of Greece punned) heſitated, relented, and reinſtated Cra in his Service.

CHAP. IX.

How Martin became a great Critick.

IT was a moſt peculiar Talent in Martinus, convert every trifle into a ſerious thing, ei in the way of Life, or in Learning. This can way be better exemplified, than in the effect wl the Puns of Crambe had on the Mind and Stu of Martinus. He conceived, that ſomewhat like Talent to this of Crambe, of aſſembling pa lel ſounds, either ſyllables, or words, might conc to the Emendation and Correction of Ancient thors, if applied to their Works, with the ſame gence, and the ſame liberty. He reſolved to try upon Virgil, Horace, and Terence; conclud that, if the moſt correct Authors could be ſo ſerved with any reputation to the Critick, the amendment and alteration of all the reſt would eaſily follow; whereby a new, a vaſt, nay boundleſs Field of Glory would be opened to the true and abſolute Critic.

This Specimen on Virgil he has given us, in the Addenda to his Notes on the Dunciad. His Terence and Horace are in every body's hands, under the names of Richard B——ley, and Francis H—re. And we have convincing proofs that the late Edition of Milton publiſhed in the name of the former of theſe, was in truth the Work of no other than our Scriblerus.

CHAP. X.

Of Martinus's uncommon Practice of Phyſick, and how he apply'd himſelf to the Diſeaſes of the Mind.

BUT it is high time to return to the Hiſtory of the Progreſs of Martinus in the Studies of Phyſick, and to enumerate ſome at leaſt of the many Diſcoveries and Experiments he made therein.

One of the firſt was his Method of inveſtigating latent Diſtempers, by the ſagacious Quality of Setting-Dogs and Pointers. The ſucceſs, and the Adventures that befel him, when he walked with theſe Animals, to ſmell them out in the Parks and publick places about London, are what we would willingly relate; but that his own Account, together with a Liſt of thoſe Gentlemen and Ladies at whom they made a Full ſet, will be publiſhed in time convenient. There will alſo be added the Repreſentation, which, on occaſion of one diſtemper which was become almoſt epidemical, he thought himſelf obliged to lay before both Houſes of Parliament, intitled, A Propoſal for a General Flux, to exterminate at one blow the P——x out of this kingdom.

But being weary of all practice on fœtid Bodies; from a certain niceneſs of Conſtitution, (eſpecially when he attended Dr. Woodward thro' a Twelvemonth's courſe of Vomition) he determined to leave it off entirely, and to apply himſelf only to diſeaſes of the Mind. He attempted to find out Specificks for all the Paſſions; and as other Phyſicians throw their Patients into ſweats, vomits, purgations, etc. he caſt them into Love, Hatred, Hope, Fear, Joy, Grief, etc. And indeed the great Irregularity of the Paſſions in the Engliſh Nation, was the chief motive that induced him to apply his whole ſtudies, while he continued among us, to the Diſeaſes of the Mind.

To this purpoſe he directed, in the firſt place, his late acquired ſkill in Anatomy. He conſidered Virtues and Vices as certain Habits which proceed from the natural Formation and Structure of particular parts of the body. A bird flies becauſe it has Wings, a Duck ſwims becauſe it is web-footed: and there can be no queſtion but the aduncity of the pounces and beaks of the Hawks, as well as the length of the fangs, the ſharpneſs of the teeth, and the ſtrength of the crural and maſſeter-muſcles * in Lions and Tygers, are the cauſe of the great and habitual Immorality of thoſe Animals.

1ſt, He obſerved, that the Soul and Body mutually operate upon each other, and therefore if you deprive the Mind of the outward Inſtruments whereby ſhe uſually expreſſeth that Paſſion, you will in time abate the Paſſion itſelf, in like manner as Caſtration abates Luſt.

2dly, That the Soul in mankind expreſſeth every Paſſion by the Motion of ſome particular Muſcles.

3dly, That all Muſcles grow ſtronger and thicker by being much uſed; therefore the habitual Paſſions may be diſcerned in particular perſons by the ſtrength

* Μασσητῆρες μῦες.

and bigneſs of the Muſcles uſed in the expreſſion of that Paſſion.

4thly, That a Muſcle may be ſtrengthen'd or weakened by weakening or ſtrength'ning the force of its Antagoniſt. Theſe things premiſed, he took notice,

That complaiſance, humility, aſſent, approbation, and civility, were expreſſed by nodding the head and bowing the body forward: on the contrary, diſſent, diſlike, refuſal, pride, and arrogance, were marked by toſſing the head, and bending the body backwards: which two Paſſions of aſſent and diſſent the Latins rightly expreſs'd by the words adnuere and abnuere. Now he obſerved that complaiſant and civil people had the Flexors of the head very ſtrong; but in the proud and inſolent there was a great overbalance of ſtrength in the Extenſors of the Neck and the Muſcles of the Back, from whence they perform with great facility the motion of toſſing, but with great difficulty that of bowing, and therefore have juſtly acquired the Title of ſtiff-neck'd: In order to reduce ſuch perſons to a juſt balance, he judged that the pair of Muſcles called Recti interni, the Maſtoidal, with other flexors of the head, neck, and body muſt be ſtrengthen'd; their Antagoniſts, the Splenii Complexi, and the Extenſors of the Spine weakened: For which purpoſe Nature herſelf ſeems to have directed mankind to correct this Muſcular Immorality by tying ſuch fellows Neck and heels.

Contrary to this, is the pernicious Cuſtom of Mothers, who aboliſh the natural Signature of Modeſty in their Daughters, by teaching them toſſing and bridling, rather than the baſhful poſture of ſtooping, and hanging down the head. Martinus charged all huſbands to take notice of the Poſture of the Head of ſuch as they courted to Matrimony, as that upon which their future happineſs did much depend.

Flatterers, who have the flexor Muſcles ſo ſtrong that they are always bowing and cringing, he ſuppoſed might in ſome meaſure be corrected by being tied down upon a Tree by the back, like the children of the Indians; which doctrine was ſtrongly confirmed by his obſerving the ſtrength of the levatores Scapulæ: This Muſcle is called the Muſcle of patience, becauſe in that affection of Mind people ſhrug and raiſe up the ſhoulder to the tip of the ear. This Muſcle alſo he obſerved to be exceedingly ſtrong and large in Henpeck'd Huſbands, in Italians, and in Engliſh Miniſters.

In purſuance of his Theory, he ſuppoſed the conſtrictors of the Eye-lids muſt be ſtrengthened in the ſupercilious, the abductors in drunkards and contemplative men, who have the ſame ſteddy and grave motion of the eye. That the buccinators or blowers up of the cheeks, and the dilators of the Noſe, were too ſtrong in Cholerick people; and therefore Nature here again directed us to a remedy, which was to correct ſuch extraordinary dilatation by pulling by the Noſe.

The rolling amorous Eye, in the Paſſion of Love, might be corrected by frequently looking through glaſſes. Impertinent fellows that jump upon Tables, and cut capers, might be cured by relaxing medicines applied to the Calves of their Legs, which in ſuch people are too ſtrong.

But there were two caſes which he reckoned extremely difficult. Firſt, Affectation, in which there were ſo many Muſcles of the bum, thighs, belly, neck, back, and the whole body, all in a falſe tone, that it required an impracticable multiplicity of applications.

The ſecond caſe was immoderate Laughter: When any of that riſible ſpecies were brought to the Doctor, and when he conſidered what an infinity of Muſcles theſe laughing Raſcals threw into a convulſive motion at the ſame time; whether we regard the ſpaſms of the Diaphragm and all the muſcles of reſpiration, the horrible rictus of the mouth, the diſtortion of the lower jaw, the criſping of the noſe, twinkling of the eyes, or ſphærical convexity of the cheeks, with the tremulous ſuccuſ-ſion of the whole human body: when he conſidered, I ſay, all this, he uſed to cry out Caſus plane deplorabilis; and give ſuch Patients over.

CHAP. XI.

The Caſe of a young Nobleman at Court, with the Doctor's Preſcription for the ſame.

AN eminent Inſtance of Martinus's Sagacity in diſcovering the Diſtempers of the Mind, appeared in the caſe of a young Nobleman at Court, who was obſerved to grow extremely affected in his ſpeech, and whimſical in all his behaviour. He began to aſk odd queſtions, talk in verſe to himſelf, ſhut himſelf up from his friends, and be acceſſible to none, but Flatterers, Poets, and Pick-pockets; till his Relations and old Acquaintance judged him to be ſo far gone, as to be a fit Patient for the Doctor.

As ſoon as he had heard and examined all the ſymptoms, he pronounced his diſtemper to be Love.

His friends aſſured him that they had with great care obſerved all his motions, and were perfectly ſatisfied there was no woman in the caſe. Scriblerus was as positive that he was desperately in l with some person or other. " How can that l

" (said his Aunt, who came to ask the advi
" when he converses almost with none but hi
" self?" Say you so? he replied, why then h in love with himself, one of the most common c in the world. I am astonished people do enough attend this Disease, which has the sa causes and symptoms, and admits of the same c with the other: especially since here the case of Patient is the more helpless and deplorable of two, as this unfortunate passion is more blind th
the other. There are people, who discover fr their very youth a most amorous inclination themselves; which is unhappily nurs'd by su Mothers, as, with their good will, would ne suffer their children to be crossed in love. Ea luxury, and idleness, blow up this flame as well
the other: Constant opportunities of conversati with the person beloved (the greatest of incentiv are here impossible to be prevented. Bawds a pimps in the other love, will be perpetually doi kind offices, speaking a good word for the par and carry about Billet doux. Therefore I ask y Madam, if this Gentleman has not been mu frequented by Flatterers, and a sort of people w bring him dedications and verses? " O Lord! S
" (quoth the Aunt) the house is haunted with them

—There it is, (replied Scriblerus) thoſe are the bawds and pimps that go between a man and himſelf. Are there no civil Ladies, that tell him he dreſſes well, has a gentlemanly air, and the like? "Why truly, Sir, my Nephew is not aukward." —Look you, Madam, this is a misfortune to him: In former days theſe ſort of lovers were happy in one reſpect, that they never had any rivals, but of late they have all the Ladies ſo—Be pleaſed to anſwer a few queſtions more. Whom does he generally talk of? Himſelf, quoth the Aunt.—Whoſe wit and breeding does he moſt commend? His own, quoth the Aunt.—Whom does he write letters to? Himſelf.——Whom does he dream of? All the dreams I ever heard were of himſelf.——Whom is he ogling yonder? Himſelf in his looking-glaſs.—— Why does he throw back his head in that languiſhing poſture? Only to be bleſt with a ſmile of himſelf as he paſſes by.—Does he ever ſteal a kiſs from himſelf, by biting his lips? Oh continually, till they are perfect vermilion.——Have you obſerved him to uſe Familiarities with any body? "With "none but himſelf: he often embraces himſelf "with folded arms, he claſps his hand often upon "his hip, nay ſometimes thruſts it into his breaſt"

Madam, ſaid the Doctor, all theſe are ſtrong ſymptoms; but there remain a few more. Has this amorous gentleman preſented himſelf with any

Love-toys; ſuch as gold Snuff-boxes, repeating Watches, or Tweezer-caſes? thoſe are things that in time will ſoften the moſt obdurate heart. "Not "only ſo (ſaid the Aunt) but he bought the other "day a very fine brilliant diamond Ring for his "own wearing."—Nay, if he has accepted of this Ring, the intrigue is very forward indeed, and it is high time for friends to interpoſe.—Pray Madam, a word or two more: Is he jealous that his acquaintance do not behave themſelves with reſpect enough? will he bear jokes and innocent freedoms? "By no means; a familiar appellation makes him "angry; if you ſhake him a little roughly by the "hand, he is in a rage; but if you chuck him "under the chin, he will return you a box on the "ear."—Then the caſe is plain: he has the true Pathognomick ſign of Love, Jealouſy; for no body will ſuffer his miſtreſs to be treated at that rate. Madam, upon the whole this caſe is extremely dangerous. There are ſome people who are far gone in this paſſion of ſelf-love; but then they keep a very ſecret Intrigue with themſelves, and hide it from all the world beſides. But this Patient has not the leaſt care of the Reputation of his Beloved, he is downright ſcandalous in his behaviour with himſelf; he is enchanted, bewitched, and almoſt paſt cure. However let the following methods be try'd upon him.

Firſt, let him  Hiatus.  Secondly, let him wear a Bob-wig. Thirdly, ſhun the company of flatterers, nay of ceremonious people, and of all Frenchmen in general. It would not be amiſs if he travelled over England in a Stage-coach, and made the Tour of Holland in a Track-ſcoute. Let him return the Snuff-boxes, Tweezer-caſes (and particularly the Diamond Ring) which he has received from himſelf. Let ſome knowing friend repreſent to him the many vile Qualities of this Miſtreſs of his: let him be ſhown that her Extravagance, Pride, and Prodigality will infallibly bring him to a morſel of bread: Let it be proved, that he has been falſe to himſelf, and if Treachery is not a ſufficient cauſe to diſcard a Miſtreſs, what is? In ſhort let him be made to ſee that no mortal beſides himſelf either loves or can ſuffer this Creature. Let all Looking-glaſſes, poliſhed Toys, and even clean Plates be removed from him, for fear of bringing back the admired object. Let him be taught to put off all thoſe tender airs, affected ſmiles, languiſhing looks, wanton toſſes of the head, coy motions of the body, that mincing gait, ſoft tone of voice, and all that enchanting woman-like behaviour, that has made him the charm of his own eyes, and the object of his own adoration. Let him ſurprize the Beauty he adores at a diſadvantage, ſurvey himſelf naked, diveſted of artificial charms, and he will find himſelf a ſtradling Animal, with bandy legs, a ſhort a dun hide, and a pot-belly. It would be y ter, if he took a ſtrong purge once a week, der to contemplate himſelf in that conditi which time it will be convenient to make uſe Letters, Dedications, etc. aboveſaid. Som like this has been obſerved by Lucretius and to be a powerful remedy in the caſe of Wome all this will not do, I muſt e'en leave the poo to his deſtiny. Let him marry himſelf, and he is condemned eternally to himſelf, perh may run to the next pond to get rid of himſel Fate of moſt violent-Self-lovers.

CHAP. XII.

How Martinus endeavoured to find cu Seat of the Soul, and of his Correſp ence with the Free-Thinkers.

IN this Deſign of Martin to inveſtigate th eaſes of the Mind, he thought nothing ceſſary as an Enquiry after the Seat of the So which at firſt he laboured under great unc ties. Sometimes he was of opinion that it the Brain, ſometimes in the Stomach, and ſomenes in the Heart. Afterwards he thought it abrd to confine that ſovereign Lady to one apart-ent, which made him infer that ſhe ſhifted it cording to the ſeveral functions of life: The ain was her Study, the Heart her State-room,

d the Stomach her Kitchen. But as he ſaw ſe-ral Offices of life went on at the ſame time, he as forced to give up this Hypotheſis alſo. He ow conjectured it was more for the dignity of the oul to perform ſeveral Operations by her little Miiſters, the Animal Spirits, from whence it was atural to conclude, that ſhe reſides in different arts according to different Inclinations, Sexes, ges, and Profeſſions. Thus in Epicures he ſeated er in the mouth of the Stomach, Philoſophers ave her in the Brain, Soldiers in their Heart, Vomen in their Tongues, Fiddlers in their Fingers, d Rope-dancers in their Toes. At length he ew fond of the Glandula Pinealis, diſſecting many ubjects to find out the different Figure of this land, from whence he might diſcover the cauſe
f the different Tempers in mankind. He ſupoſed that in factious and reſtleſs-ſpirited people he ould find it ſharp and pointed, allowing no room
r the ſoul to repoſe herſelf; that in quiet Tem-rs it was flat, ſmooth, and ſoft, affording to the ul as it were an eaſy cuſhion. He was confirmed in this by obſerving, that Calves and Phil Tygers and Stateſmen, Foxes and Sharp cocks and Fops, Cock-ſparrows and Coque keys and Players, Courtiers and Spaniels, M Miſers, exactly reſemble one another in formation of the Pineal Gland. He did n likewiſe to find the ſame reſemblance in H men and Conquerors: In order to ſatisfy in which, it was, that he purchaſed the one of the firſt Species (as hath been befo

ed) at Tyburn, hoping in time to have th neſs of one of the latter too, under his An knife.

We muſt not omit taking notice here, th
Enquiries into the Seat of the Soul gave occ his firſt correſpondence with the ſociety Thinkers, who were then in their infancy land, and ſo much taken with the promi dowments of Martin, that they ordered thei
tary to write him the following Letter.

To the learned Inquiſitor into Nature MART SCRIBLERUS: The Society of Free-T greeting.

Grecian Coffee-Houſe,

IT is with unſpeakable joy we have h your inquiſitive Genius, and we think pity that it ſhould not be better employed,

oking after that Theological Non-entity com-ionly called the Soul: Since after all your enqui-ies, it will appear you have loſt your labour in eeking the Reſidence of ſuch a Chimera, that never ad being but in the brains of ſome dreaming Philo-ophers. Is it not Demonſtration to a perſon of your enſe, that, ſince you cannot find it, there is no ſuch hing? In order to ſet ſo hopeful a Genius right in his matter, we have ſent you an anſwer to the ill-grounded Sophiſms of thoſe crackbrained fellows, and likewiſe an eaſy mechanical explication of Percep-tion or Thinking.

[a] One of their chief Arguments is, that Self-con-ſciouſneſs cannot inhere in any ſyſtem of Matter, be-cauſe all matter is made up of ſeveral diſtinct beings, which never can make up one individual thinking being.

This is eaſily anſwered by a familiar inſtance. In every Jack there is a meat-roaſting Quality, which neither reſides in the fly, nor in the weight, nor in any particular wheel of the Jack, but is the reſult of the whole compoſition: So in an Animal, the Self-conſciouſneſs is not a real Quality inhe-rent in one Being (any more than meat-roaſting in a Jack) but the reſult of ſeveral Modes or Qualities in the ſame ſubject. As the fly, the wheels, the chain, the weight, the cords, etc. make one Jack, ſo the ſeveral parts of the body make one Animal. As perception or conſciouſneſs is ſaid to be inherent in this Animal, ſo is meat roaſting ſaid to be inherent in the Jack. As ſenſation, reaſoning, volition, memory, etc. are the ſeveral Modes of thinking; ſo roaſting of beef, roaſting of mutton, roaſting of pullets, geeſe, turkeys, etc. are the ſeveral modes of meat-roaſting. And as the general Quality of meat-roaſting, with its ſeveral modifications as to beef, mutton, pullets, etc. does not inhere in any one part of the Jack; ſo neither does Conſciouſneſs, with its ſeveral Modes of ſenſation, intellection, volition, etc. inhere in any one, but is the reſult from the mechanical compoſition of the whole Animal.

[a] This whole Chapter is an inimitable ridicule on Collins's ar-guments againſt Clarke, to prove the Soul only a Quality.

Juſt ſo, the Quality or Diſpoſition in a Fiddle to play tunes, with the ſeveral Modifications of this tune-playing quality in playing of Preludes, Sarabands, Jigs, and Gavotts, are as much real qualities in the inſtrument, as the Thought or the Imagination is in the mind of the Perſon that compoſes them.

The Parts (ſay they) of an animal body are perpetually changed, and the fluids which ſeem to be the ſubject of conſciouſneſs, are in a perpetual circulation; ſo that the ſame individual particles do not remain in the Brain; from whence it will follow, that the idea of Individual Conſciouſneſs muſt be nſtantly tranſlated from one particle of matter to nother, whereby the Particle A, for example, muſt ɔt only be conſcious, but conſcious that it is the me being with the Particle B that went before.

We anſwer, this is only a fallacy of the imagina-on, and is to be underſtood in no other ſenſe than at maxim of the Engliſh Law, that the King never es. This power of thinking, ſelf-moving, and go-rning the whole Machine, is communicated from very Particle to its immediate Succeſſor; who, as on as he is gone, immediately takes upon him the overnment, which ſtill preſerves the Unity of the hole Syſtem.

They make a great noiſe about this Individuali-: how a man is conſcious to himſelf that he is the me Individual he was twenty years ago; notwith-anding the flux ſtate of the Particles of matter that mpoſe his body. We think this is capable of a ry plain anſwer, and may be eaſily illuſtrated by familiar example.

Sir John Cutler had a pair of black worſted ſtock-gs, which his maid darned ſo often with ſilk, that ey became at laſt a pair of ſilk ſtockings. Now ppoſing thoſe ſtockings of Sir John's endued with me degree of Conſciouſneſs at every particular rning, they would have been ſenſible, that they ere the ſame individual pair of ſtockings both be re and after the darning; and this ſenſation would have continued in them through all the ſucceſſion of darnings; and yet after the laſt of all, there was not perhaps one thread left of the firſt pair of ſtockings, but they were grown to be ſilk ſtockings, as was ſaid before.

And whereas it is affirmed, that every animal is conſcious of ſome individual ſelf-moving, ſelf-determining principle; it is anſwered, that, as in a Houſe of commons all things are determined by a Majority, ſo it is in every Animal ſyſtem. As that which determines the Houſe is ſaid to be the reaſon of the whole aſſembly; it is no otherwiſe with thinking Beings, who are determined by the greater force of ſeveral particles; which, like ſo many unthinking Members, compoſe one thinking Syſtem.

And whereas it is likewiſe objected, that Puniſhments cannot be juſt that are not inflicted upon the ſame individual, which cannot ſubſiſt without the notion of a ſpiritual ſubſtance: We reply, that this is no greater difficulty to conceive, than that a Corporation, which is likewiſe a flux body, may be puniſhed for the faults, and liable to the debts, of their Predeceſſors.

We proceed now to explain, by the ſtructure of the Brain, the ſeveral Modes of thinking. It is well known to Anatomiſts that the Brain is a Congeries of Glands, that ſeparate the finer parts of the blood, called Animal Spirits; that a Gland is nothing but a Canal of a great length, variouſly intorted and wound up together. From the Arietation and Motion of the Spirits in thoſe Canals, proceed all the different ſorts of Thoughts. Simple Ideas are produced by the motion of the Spirits in one ſimple Canal: when two of theſe Canals diſembogue themſelves into one, they make what we call a Propoſition; and when two of theſe propoſitional Chanels empty themſelves into a third, they form a Syllogiſm, or a Ratiocination. Memory is performed in a diſtinct apartment of the brain, made up of veſſels ſimilar, and like ſituated to the ideal, propoſitional, and ſyllogiſtical veſſels, in the primary parts of the brain. After the ſame manner it is eaſy to explain the other modes of thinking; as alſo why ſome people think ſo wrong and perverſely, which proceeds from the bad configuration of thoſe Glands. Some, for example, are born without the propoſitional or ſyllogyſtical Canals; in others, that reaſon ill, they are of unequal capacities; in dull fellows, of too great a length, whereby the motion of the ſpirits is retarded; in trifling genius's, weak and ſmall; in the over-refining ſpirits, too much intorted and winding; and ſo of the reſt.

We are ſo much perſuaded of the truth of this our Hypotheſis, that we have employed one of our Members, a great Virtuoſo at Nuremberg, to make a ſort of an Hydraulick Engine, in which a chemical liquor reſembling blood, is driven through elaſ chanels reſembling arteries and veins, by the f of an Embolus like the heart, and wrought pneumatick Machine of the nature of the lungs, ropes and pullies, like the nerves, tendons, and

cles: and we are perſuaded that this our artif Man will not only walk, and ſpeak, and perf
moſt of the outward actions of the animal life, (being wound up once a week) will perhaps re
as well as moſt of your Country Parſons.

We wait with the utmoſt impatience for the nour of having you a Member of our Society, beg leave to aſſure you that we are, etc.

What return Martin made to this obliging L
we muſt defer to another occaſion: let it ſuffic preſent to tell, that Crambe was in a great rag them, for ſtealing (as he thought) a hint from Theory of Syllogiſms, without doing him the hono much as to mention him. He adviſed his Maſte no means to enter into their Society, unleſs would give him ſufficient ſecurity, to bear him h leſs from any thing that might happen after this ſent life.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Seceſſion of Martinus, and ſome Hint of his Travels.

IT was in the year 1699 that Martin ſet out on his Travels. Thou wilt certainly be very curious to know what they were. It is not yet time to inform thee. But what hints I am at liberty to give, I will.

Thou ſhalt know then, that in his firſt Voyage he was carried by a proſperous Storm, to a Diſcovery of the Remains of the ancient Pygmæan Empire.

That in his ſecond, he was as happily ſhipwrecked on the Land of the Giants, now the moſt humane people in the world.

That in his third Voyage, he diſcovered a whole Kingdom of Philoſophers, who govern by the Mathematicks; with whoſe admirable Schemes and Projects he returned to benefit his own dear Country; but had the misfortune to find them rejected by the envious Miniſters of Queen Anne, and himſelf ſent treacherouſly away.

And hence it is, that in his fourth Voyage he diſcovers a Vein of Melancholy, proceeding almoſt to a Diſguſt of his Species; but above all, a mortal Deteſtation to the whole flagitious Race of Miniſters, and a final Reſolution not to give in any Memorial to the Secretary of State, in order to ſubject the Lands he diſcovered to the Crown of Great-Britain.

Now if, by theſe hints, the Reader can help himſelf to a farther diſcovery of the Nature and Contents of theſe Travels, he is welcome to as much light as they afford him; I am obliged, by all the tyes of honour, not to ſpeak more openly.

But if any man ſhall ever ſee ſuch very extraordinary Voyages, into ſuch very extraordinary Nations, which manifeſt the moſt diſtinguiſhing marks of a Philoſopher, a Politician, and a Legiſlator; and can imagine them to belong to a Surgeon of a Ship, or a Captain of a Merchantman, let him remain in his Ignorance.

And whoever he be, that ſhall farther obſerve, in every page of ſuch a book, that cordial Love of Mankind, that inviolable Regard to Truth, that Paſſion for his dear Country, and that particular attachment to the excellent Princeſs Queen Anne; ſurely that man deſerves to be pitied, if by all thoſe viſible ſigns and Characters, he cannot diſtinguiſh and acknowledge the Great Scriblerus [h].

[h] Gulliver's Travels were firſt intended as a part of Scriblerus's Memoirs.

CHAP. XIV.

f the Diſcoveries and Works of the Great Scriblerus, made and to be made, writ-ten and to be written, known and un-known.

HERE therefore, at this great Period, we end our firſt Book. And here, O Reader, entreat thee utterly to forget all thou haſt hi-erto read, and to caſt thy eyes only forward, to at boundleſs Field the next ſhall open unto thee; e fruits of which (if thine, or our ſins do not pre-nt) are to ſpread and multiply over this our work, d over all the face of the Earth.

In the mean time, know what thou oweſt, and iat thou yet may'ſt owe, to this excellent Per-a, this Prodigy of our age; who may well be lled, The Philoſopher of Ultimate Cauſes, ſince by Sagacity peculiar to himſelf, he hath diſcovered fects in their very cauſe: and without the tri-l helps of Experiments, or Obſervations, hath en the Inventor of moſt of the modern Syſtems d Hypotheſes.

He hath enriched Mathematicks with many pre-e and geometrical Quadratures of the Circle. He t diſcovered the Cauſe of Gravity, and the inteſ-e Motion of Fluids.

To him we owe all the obſervations on the rallax of the Pole Star, and all the new Theori the Deluge.

He it was, that firſt taught the right uſe ſo times of the Fuga Vacui, and ſometimes of the teria Subtilis, in reſolving the grand Phænomen Nature.

He it was, that firſt found out the Palpabili Colours; and by the delicacy of his Touch, c diſtinguiſh the different Vibrations of the heter neous Rays of Light.

His were the Projects of Perpetuum Mobiles, ing Engines, and Pacing Saddles; the Method diſcovering the Longitude by Bomb-Veſſels, and increaſing the Trade-Wind by vaſt plantations Reeds and Sedges.

I ſhall mention only a few of his Philoſoph and Mathematical Works.

1. A compleat Digeſt of the Laws of Nature, v a Review of thoſe that are obſolete or repealed, of thoſe that are ready to be renewed and put force.

2. A Mechanical Explication of the Forma of the Univerſe, according to the Epicurean Hy theſis.

3. An inveſtigation of the Quantity of real Ma in the Univerſe, with the proportion of the ſpeci Gravity of ſolid matter to that of fluid.

4. Microſcopical Obſervations of the Figure and ılk of the conſtituent Parts of all fluids. A Cal- lation of the proportion in which the Fluids of e earth decreaſe, and of the period in which they ill be totally exhauſted.

5. A Computation of the Duration of the Sun, and ›w long it will laſt before it be burned out.

6. A Method to apply the Force ariſing from the ımenſe Velocity of Light to mechanical purpoſes.

7. An anſwer to the queſtion of a curious Gen- :man; How long a New Star was lighted up be- ıre its appearance to the inhabitants of our earth? 'o which is ſubjoined a calculation, how much ıe inhabitants of the Moon eat for Supper, conſi- ering that they paſs a Night equal to fifteen of our atural days.

8. A Demonſtration of the natural Dominion f the Inhabitants of the Earth over thoſe of the loon, if ever an intercourſe ſhould be opened be- ween them. With a Propoſal of a Partition-Treaty, nong the earthly Potentates, in caſe of ſuch diſ- ›very.

9. Tide-Tables, for a Comet, that is to approxi- ate towards the Earth.

10. The Number of the Inhabitants of London :termined by the Reports of the Gold-finders, ıd the Tonnage of their Carriages; with allow- ıce for the extraordinary quantity of the Inge-

ſta and Egeſta of the people of England, and a deduction of what is left under dead walls, and dry ditches.

It will be from hence evident, how much all his Studies were directed to the univerſal Benefit of Mankind. Numerous have been his Projects to this end, of which Two alone will be ſufficient to ſhow the amazing Grandeur of his Genius. The firſt was a Propoſal, by a general contribution of all Princes, to pierce the firſt cruſt or Nucleus of this our Earth, quite through, to the next concentrical Sphere. The advantage he propoſed from it was, to find the Parallax of the Fixt Stars; but chiefly to refute Sir Iſaac Newton's Theory of Gravity, and Mr. Halley's of the variations. The ſecond was, to build Two Poles to the Meridian, with immenſe Light-houſes on the top of them; to ſupply the defect of Nature, and to make the Longitude as eaſy to be calculated as the Latitude. Both theſe he could not but think very practicable, by the Power of all the Potentates of the World.

May we preſume after theſe to mention, how he deſcended from the ſublime to the beneficial parts of Knowledge, and particularly his extraordinary practice of Phyſick. From the Age, Complexion, or Weight of the Perſon given, he contrived to preſcribe at a diſtance, as well as at a Patient's bed ſide.

He taught the way to many modern Phyſicians, to cure their Patients by Intuition, and to others to cure without looking on them at all. He projected a Menſtruum to diſſolve the Stone, made of Dr. Woodward's Univerſal Deluge-water. His alſo was the device to relieve Conſumptive or Aſthmatick perſons by bringing freſh Air out of the Country to Town, by pipes of the nature of the Recipients of Air-pumps: And to introduce the native air of a man's country into any other in which he ſhould travel, with a ſeaſonable Intromiſſion of ſuch Steams as were moſt familiar to him; to the inexpreſſible comfort of many Scotſmen, Laplanders, and white Bears.

In Phyſiognomy, his penetration is ſuch, that from the picture only of any perſon, he can write his Life, and from the features of the Parents, draw the Portrait of any Child that is to be born.

Nor hath he been ſo enrapt in theſe Studies, as to neglect the polite Arts of Painting, Architecture, Muſick, Poetry, etc. It was he that gave the firſt hint to our modern Painters, to improve the Likeneſs of their Portraits by the uſe of ſuch Colours as would faithfully and conſtantly accompany the Life, not only in its preſent ſtate, but in all its alterations, decays, age, and death itſelf.

In Architecture, he builds not with ſo much regard to preſent ſymmetry or conveniency, as with a Thought, well worthy a true lover of Antiquity, to wit, the noble effect the building will have to poſterity, when it ſhall fall and become a Ruin.

As to Muſic, I think Heidegger has not the face to deny that he has been much beholden to his Scores.

In Poetry, he hath appeared under a hundred different names, of which we may one day give a Catalogue.

In Politicks, his Writings are of a peculiar caſt for the moſt part Ironical, and the Drift of them often ſo delicate and refined as to be miſtaken by the vulgar. He once went ſo far as to write a Perſuaſive to people to eat their own Children, which was ſo little underſtood as to be taken in ill part. He has often written againſt Liberty in the name of Freeman and Algernon Sydney, in vindication of the Meaſures of Spain under that of Raleigh, and in praiſe of Corruption under thoſe of Cato and Publicola.

It is true, that at his laſt departure from England, in the Reign of Queen Anne, apprehending leſt any of theſe might be perverted to the Scandal of the weak, or Encouragement of the flagitious, he caſt them all, without mercy, into a Bog-hole near St. James's. Some however have been with great diligence recovered, and fiſhed up with a hook and line, by the Miniſterial Writers, which make at preſent the great Ornaments of their works.

[b] Swift's ironical tract on that ſubject.

Whatever he judged beneficial to mankind, he ɔnſtantly communicated (not only during his ſtay mong us, but ever ſince his abſence) by ſome me-ıod or other in which Oſtentation had no part. With 'hat incredible Modeſty he concealed himſelf, is nown to numbers of thoſe to whom he addreſſed ımetimes Epiſtles, ſometimes Hints, ſometimes whole 'reatiſes, Advices to Friends, Projects to firſt Mi-iſters, Letters to Members of Parliament, Accounts) the Royal Society, and innumerable others.

All theſe will be vindicated to the true Author, in ıe courſe of theſe Memoirs. I may venture to ſay ıey cannot be unacceptable to any, but to thoſe, 'ho will appear too much concerned as Plagiaries,) be admitted as Judges. Wherefore we warn the ublic, to take particular notice of all ſuch as ma-ifeſt any indecent Paſſion at the appearance of this Vork, as Perſons moſt certainly involved in the ;uilt.

The End of the Firſt Book.

ARTINUS SCRIBLERUS,

PEPI BAΘOΥΣ:

OR,

Of the ART of

SINKING in POETRY.

Written in the Year 1727.

ĽTINUS SCRIBLERUS

ΣPI BAΘOΥΣ.

CHAP. I.

h been long (my dear Countrymen) the ſub-f my concern and ſurprize, that whereas ſs Poets, Critics and Orators have compiled ted the Art of ancient Poeſy, there hath not ong us one perſon ſo public-ſpirited, as to the like for the Modern. Although it is y known, that our every-way induſtrious
, both in the Weight of their writings, and elocity of their judgments, do ſo infinitely ſaid Ancients.
:heleſs, too true it is, that while a plain and id is paved to their ὕψος, or Sublime; no been yet chalked out, to arrive at our βάofound. The Latins, as they came between ks and Us, make uſe of the word Altitudo, plies equally height and depth. Wherefore ng with no ſmall grief, how many promiſing

Genius's of this age wandering (as I may ſay) in the dark without a guide, I have undertaken this arduous but neceſſary taſk, to lead them as it were by the hand, and ſtep by ſtep, the gentle down-hill way to the Bathos; the bottom, the end, the central point, the non plus ultra, of true Modern Poeſy!

When I conſider (my dear Countrymen) the extent, fertility, and populouſneſs of our Lowlands of Parnaſſus, the flouriſhing ſtate of our Trade, and the plenty of our Manufacture; there are two reflections which adminiſter great occaſion of ſurprize: The one, that all dignities and honours ſhould be beſtowed upon the exceeding few meager inhabitants of the Top of the mountain; the other, that our own nation ſhould have arrived to that pitch of greatneſs it now poſſeſſes, without any regular Syſtem of Laws. As to the firſt, it is with great pleaſure I have obſerved of late the gradual Decay of Delicacy and Refinement among mankind, who are become too reaſonable to require that we ſhould labour with infinite pains to come up to the taſte of theſe Mountaineers, when they without any may condeſcend to ours. But as we have now an unqueſtionable Majority on our ſide, I doubt not but we ſhall ſhortly be able to level the Highlanders, and procure a farther vent for our own product, which is already ſo much reliſhed, encouraged, and rewarded, by the Nobility and Gentry of Great Britain.

Therefore to ſupply our former defect, I purpoſe › collect the ſcattered rules of our Art into regular nſtitutes, from the example and practice of the deep ienius's of our nation; imitating herein my prede-eſſors the Maſter of Alexander, and the Secretary f the renowned Zenobia. And in this my under-iking I am the more animated, as I expect more iccefs than has attended even thoſe great Critics;
nce their Laws (tho' they might be good) have ever een ſlackly executed, and their Precepts (however ri&t) obey'd only by fits, and by a very ſmall number.

At the ſame time I intend to do juſtice upon our eighbours, inhabitants of the upper Parnaſſus; who, iking advantage of the riſing ground, are perpe-ially throwing down rubbiſh, dirt and ſtones upon s, never ſuffering us to live in peace. Theſe men, hile they enjoy the cryſtal ſtream of Helicon, envy
; our common water, which (thank our ſtars) tho' is ſomewhat muddy, flows in much greater abunance. Nor is this the greateſt injuſtice that we ave to complain of; for though it is evident that e never made the leaſt attempt or inrode into Their rritories, but lived contented in our native fens;
ey have often not only committed Petty Larcenies on our borders, but driven the country, and card off at once whole Cart-loads of our manufacre; to reclaim ſome of which ſtolen goods is part the deſign of this Treatiſe.

For we ſhall ſee in the courſe of this work, that our greateſt Adverſaries have ſometimes deſcended towards us; and doubtleſs might now and then have arrived at the Bathos itſelf, had it not been for that miſtaken opinion they all entertained, that the Rules of the Ancients were equally neceſſary to the Moderns; than which there cannot be a more grievous Error, as will be amply proved in the following diſcourſe.

And indeed when any of theſe have gone ſo far, as by the light of their own Genius to attempt new Models, it is wonderful to obſerve, how nearly they have approached us in thoſe particular pieces; tho' in their others they differed toto cœlo from us.

CHAP. II.

That the Bathos, or Profund, is the natural Taſte of Man, and in particular, of the preſent Age.

THE Taſte of the Bathos is implanted by Nature itſelf in the ſoul of man; till, perverted by cuſtom or example, he is taught, or rather compelled, to reliſh the Sublime. Accordingly, we the unprejudiced minds of Children delight only ich productions, and in ſuch images, as our true lern writers ſet before them. I have obſerved ' faſt the general Taſte is returning to this firſt plicity and Innocence: and if the intent of all try be to divert and inſtruct, certainly that kind ch diverts and inſtructs the greateſt number, is to preferred. Let us look round among the Ad- ers of Poetry, we ſhall find thoſe who have a taſte the Sublime to be very few; but the Profund tes univerſally, and is adapted to every capacity. 'Tis a fruitleſs undertaking to write for men of a ; and foppiſh Guſto, whom after all it is almoſt oſſible to pleaſe, and 'tis ſtill more chimerical to te for Poſterity, of whoſe Taſte we cannot make judgment, and whoſe Applauſe we can never oy. It muſt be confeſſed our wiſer authors have reſent end.

Et prodeſſe volunt & delectare Poetæ.

eir true deſign is Profit or Gain; in order to ac- e which, 'tis neceſſary to procure applauſe by ad- iſtring pleaſure to the reader: From whence it ows demonſtrably, that their productions muſt be ed to the preſent Taſte. And I cannot but con- tulate our age on this peculiar felicity, that though have made indeed great progreſs in all other nches of Luxury, we are not yet debauched with any high Reliſh in Poetry, but are in this one Taſte leſs nice than our anceſtors. If an Art is to be eſtimated by its ſucceſs, I appeal to experience whether there have not been, in proportion to their number, as many ſtarving good Poets, as bad ones.

Nevertheleſs, in making Gain the principal end of our Art, far be it from me to exclude any great Genius's of Rank or Fortune from diverting themſelves this way. They ought to be praiſed no leſs than thoſe Princes, who paſs their vacant hours in ſome ingenious mechanical or manual Art. And to ſuch as theſe, it would be ingratitude not to own, that our Art has been often infinitely indebted.

CHAP. III.

The Neceſſity of the Bathos, phyſically conſidered.

FArthermore, it were great cruelty and injuſtice, if all ſuch Authors as cannot write in the other way, were prohibited from writing at all. Againſt this I draw an argument from what ſeems to me an undoubted phyſical Maxim, That Poetry is a natural or morbid Secretion from the Brain. As I uld not ſuddenly ſtop a cold in the head, or dry my neighbour's Iſſue, I would as little hinder him m neceſſary writing. It may be affirmed with :at truth, that there is hardly any human creature t childhood, but at one time or other has had ne Poetical Evacuation, and, no queſtion, was ich the better for it in his health; ſo true is the ing, Naſcimur Poetæ. Therefore is the Deſire of riting properly termed Pruritus, the "Titillation of the Generative Faculty of the Brain," and the rſon is ſaid to conceive; now ſuch as conceive muſt ng forth. I have known a man thoughtful, me- icholy and raving for divers days, who forthwith :w wonderfully eaſy, lightſome, and chearful, upon liſcharge of the peccant humour, in exceeding pu- ent Metre. Nor can I queſtion, but abundance of timely deaths are occaſioned for want of this lau- ble vent of unruly paſſions: yea, perhaps, in poor etches, (which is very lamentable) for mere want pen, ink, and paper! From hence it follows, that uppreſſion of the very worſt Poetry is of dangerous nſequence to the State. We find by experience, at the ſame humours which vent themſelves in nmer in Ballads and Sonnets, are condenſed by : winter's cold into Pamphlets and Speeches for l againſt the Miniſtry: nay, I know not but many ies a piece of Poetry may be the moſt innocent npoſition of a Miniſter himſelf.

It is therefore manifeſt that Mediocrity ought to be allowed, yea indulged, to the good Subjects of England. Nor can I conceive how the world has ſwallowed the contrary as a Maxim, upon the ſingle authority of that [b] Horace? Why ſhould the golden Mean, and quinteſſence of all Virtues, be deemed ſo offenſive in this Art? or Coolneſs or Mediocrity be ſo amiable a quality in a Man, and ſo deteſtable in a Poet?

However, far be it from me to compare theſe Writers with thoſe great Spirits, who are born with a Vivacité de peſanteur, or (as an Engliſh Author calls it) an "Alacrity of ſinking;" and who by ſtrength of Nature alone can excel. All I mean is to evince the Neceſſity of Rules to theſe leſſer Genius's, as well as the Uſefulneſs of them to the greater.

CHAP. IV.

That there is an Art of the Bathos, or Profund.

WE come now to prove, that there is an Art of Sinking in Poetry. Is there not an

[b] Mediocribus eſſe poetis
Non dii, non homines, etc. Hor. P.

Architecture of Vaults and Cellars, as well as of lofty Domes and Pyramids? Is there not as much ſkill and labour in making Dikes, as in raiſing Mounts? Is there not an Art of Diving as well as of Flying? And will any ſober practitioner affirm, that a diving Engine is not of ſingular uſe in making him long-winded, aſſiſting his ſight, and furniſhing him with other ingenious means of keeping under water?

If we ſearch the Authors of Antiquity, we ſhall find as few to have been diſtinguiſhed in the true Profund, as in the true Sublime. And the very ſame thing (as it appears from Longinus) had been imagined of that, as now of this: namely, that it was entirely the Gift of Nature. I grant that to excel in the Bathos a Genius is requiſite; yet the Rules of Art muſt be allowed ſo far uſeful, as to add weight, or, as I may ſay, hang on lead, to facilitate and enforce our deſcent, to guide us to the moſt advantageous declivities, and habituate our imagination to a depth of thinking. Many there are that can fall, but few can arrive at the felicity of falling gracefully; much more for a man who is amongſt the loweſt of the Creation, at the very bottom of the Atmoſphere, to deſcend beneath himſelf, is not ſo eaſy a taſk unleſs he calls in Art to his aſſiſtance. It is with the Bathos as with ſmall Beer, which is indeed vapid and inſipid, if left at large, and let abroad; but being by our Rules confined and well ſtopt, nothing grows ſo frothy, pert, and bouncing.

The Sublime of Nature is the Sky, the Sun, Moon, Stars, etc. The Profund of Nature is Gold, Pearls, precious Stones, and the Treaſures of the Deep, which are ineſtimable as unknown. But all that lies between theſe, as Corn, Flower, Fruits, Animals, and Things for the meer uſe of Man, are of mean price, and ſo common as not to be greatly eſteemed by the curious. It being certain that any thing, of which we know the true uſe, cannot be invaluable: Which affords a ſolution, why common Senſe hath either been totally deſpiſed, or held in ſmall repute, by the greateſt modern Critics and Authors.

CHAP. V.

Of the true Genius for the Profund, and by what it is conſtituted.

AND I will venture to lay it down, as the firſt Maxim and Corner-Stone of this our Art; that whoever would excel therein, muſt ſtudiouſly avoid, deteſt, and turn his head from all the ideas, ways, and workings of that peſtilent Foe to Wit, and Deſtroyer of fine Figures, which is known by the Name of Common Senſe. His buſineſs muſt be to contract the true Gout de travers; and to acquire a moſt happy, uncommon, unaccountable Way of Thinking.

He is to conſider himſelf as a Groteſque painter, whoſe works would be ſpoiled by an imitation of nature, or uniformity of deſign. He is to mingle bits of the moſt various, or diſcordant kinds, landſcape, hiſtory, portraits, animals, and connect them with a great deal of flouriſhing, by heads or tails, as it ſhall pleaſe his imagination, and contribute to his principal end, which is to glare by ſtrong oppoſitions of colours, and ſurprize by contrariety of images.

Serpentes avibus geminentur, tigribus agni. HOR.

His deſign ought to be like a labyrinth, out of which no body can get clear but himſelf. And ſince the great Art of all poetry is to mix Truth with Fiction, in order to join the Credible with the Surprizing; our author ſhall produce the Credible, by painting nature in her loweſt ſimplicity; and the Surprizing, by contradicting common opinion. In the very Manners he will affect the Marvellous; he will draw Achilles with the patience of Job; a prince talking like a Jack-pudding; a Maid of honour ſelling bargains; a footman ſpeaking like a philoſopher; and a fine gentleman like a ſcholar. Whoever is converſant in modern Plays, may make a moſt noble collection of this kind, and, at the ſame time, form a complete body of modern Ethics and Morality.

Nothing ſeemed more plain to our great authors, than that the world had long been weary of natural things. How much the contrary are formed to pleaſe, is evident from the univerſal applauſe daily given to the admirable entertainments of Harlequins and Magicians on our ſtage. When an audience behold a coach turned into a wheel-barrow, a conjurer into an old woman, or a man's head where his heels ſhould be; how are they ſtruck with tranſport and delight? Which can only be imputed to this cauſe, that each object is changed into that which hath been ſuggeſted to them by their own low ideas before.

He ought therefore to render himſelf maſter of this happy and anti-natural way of thinking to ſuch a degree, as to be able, on the appearance of any object, to furniſh his imagination with ideas infinitely below it. And his eyes ſhould be like unto the wrong end of a proſpective glaſs, by which all the objects of nature are leſſened.

For example; when a true genius looks upon the Sky, he immediately catches the idea of a piece of blue lutestring, or a child's mantle.

[c] The Skies, whoſe ſpreading volumes ſcarce have room,
Spun thin, and wove in nature's fineſt loom,
The new-born world in their ſoft lap embrac'd,
And all around their ſtarry mantle caſt.

If he looks upon a Tempeſt, he ſhall have an age of a tumbled bed, and deſcribe a ſucceeding m in this manner.

The ocean joy'd to ſee the tempeſt fled,
New lays his waves, and ſmooths his ruffled bed.

The Triumphs and Acclamations of the Angels, the Creation of the Univerſe, preſent to his ima- ination "the Rejoicings of the Lord Mayor's Day;" and he beholds thoſe glorious beings lebrating the Creator, by huzzaing, making illu- nations, and flinging ſquibs, crackers and ſky- ckets.

Glorious illuminations, made on high
By all the Stars and planets of the ſky,
In juſt degrees, and ſhining order plac'd,
Spectators charm'd, and the bleſt dwelling grac'd.

[c] Prince Arthur, p. 41, 42. [d] P. 14.

N. B. In order to do Juſtice to theſe great Poets, our Cita- ns are taken from the beſt, the laſt, and moſt correct Edi- ns of their Works. That which we uſe of Prince Arthur, is Duodecimo, 1714. The fourth Edition reviſed. P.

[e] P. 50.

Thro' all th' enlighten'd air ſwift fire-works,
Which with repeated ſhouts glad Cherubs ti
Comets aſcended with their ſweeping train,
Then fell in ſtarry ſhow'rs and glittering ra
In air ten thouſand meteors blazing hung,
Which from th' eternal battlements were flu

If a man who is violently fond of Wit, crifice to that paſſion his friend or his God it not be a ſhame, if he who is ſmit with the the Bathos ſhould not ſacrifice to it all other tory regards? You ſhall hear a zealous Pr Deacon invoke a Saint, and modeſtly beſee to do more for us than Providence:

[f] Look down bleſs'd ſaint, with pity then look
Shed on this land thy kinder influence,
And guide us through the miſts of providence,
In which we ſtray.

Neither will he, if a goodly Simile come in h ſcruple to affirm himſelf an eye-witneſs of never yet beheld by man, or never in exiſten thus,

[g] Thus have I ſeen in Araby the bleſs'd,
A Phœnix couch'd upon her fun'ral neſt.

But to convince you that nothing is ſo

[f] A. Philips on the death of Queen Mary.
[g] Anon.

a marvellous genius, prompted by this laud-
:al, is not able to leſſen; hear how the moſt
e of all Beings is repreſented in the following
:

Firſt he is a PAINTER.

metimes the Lord of Nature in the air, reads forth his clouds, his ſable canvas, where is pencil, dipp'd in heav'nly colour bright, ints his fair rainbow, charming to the ſight.

Now he is a CHEMIST.

' Almighty Chemiſt does his work prepare,
urs down his waters on the thirſty plain,
igeſts his light'ning, and diſtils his rain.

Now he is a WRESTLER.

le in his griping arms th' Eternal took,
nd with ſuch mighty force my body ſhook,
hat the ſtrong graſp my members ſorely bruis'd,
roke all my bones, and all my ſinews loos'd.

Now a RECRUITING OFFICER.

r clouds, the ſun-beams levy freſh ſupplies, nd raiſe recruits of vapours, which ariſe
rawn from the ſeas, to muſter in the ſkies.

ck. opt. edit. duod. 1716. p. 172.
ckm. Pſ. civ. p. 263. k Page 75. l P. 170.

Now a peaceable GUARANTEE.

[m] In leagues of peace the neighbours did agree,
And to maintain them, God was Guarantee.

Then he is an ATTORNEY.

[n] Job, as a vile offender, God indites,
And terrible decrees againſt me writes.
God will not be my advocate,
My cauſe to manage or debate.

In the following Lines he is a GOLDBEATER.

[o] Who the rich metal beats, and then, with care,
Unfolds the golden leaves, to gild the fields of air.

Then a FULLER.

[p] th' exhaling reeks that ſecret riſe,
Born on rebounding ſun-beams thro' the ſkies,
Are thicken'd, wrought, and whiten'd, 'till grow
A heav'nly fleece.

A MERCER, or PACKER.

[q] Didſt thou one end of air's wide curtain hold,
And help the Bales of Æther to unfold;
Say, which cærulean pile was by thy hand unroll'

[m] P. 70. [n] P. 61. [o] P. 181. [p] P. [q] P. 174.

A BUTLER.

[r] He measures all the drops with wondrous skill,
Which the black clouds, his floating Bottles fill.

And a BAKER.

[s] God in the wilderness his table spread,
And in his airy Ovens bak'd their bread.

CHAP. VI.

Of the several Kinds of Genius's in the Profund, and the Marks and Characters of each.

I Doubt not but the reader, by this Cloud of examples, begins to be convinced of the truth of our assertion, that the Bathos is an Art; and that the Genius of no mortal whatever, following the mere ideas of Nature, and unassisted with an habitual, nay laborious peculiarity of thinking, could arrive at images so wonderfully low and unaccountable. The great author, from whose treasury we have drawn all these instances (the Father of the Bathos, and indeed the Homer of it) has, like that immortal Greek, confined his labours to the greater Poetry, and there-

[r] P. 131. [s] Blackm. Song of Moses, p. 218.

by left room for others to acquire a due ſhare praiſe in inferior kinds. Many painters who co never hit a noſe or an eye, have with felicity copi a ſmall-pox, or been admirable at a toad or a herring. And ſeldom are we without genius's f Still-life, which they can work up and ſtiffen wi incredible accuracy.

An univerſal Genius riſes not in an age; but wh
he riſes, armies riſe in him! he pours forth five or Epic Poems with greater facility, than five or ſix pag can be produced by an elaborate and ſervile copier ter Nature or the Ancients. It is affirmed by Qui tilian, that the ſame genius which made Germanic ſo great a General, would with equal application ha made him an excellent Heroic Poet. In like manne reaſoning from the affinity there appears between A and Sciences, I doubt not but an active catcher butterflies, a careful and fanciful pattern-drawer, induſtrious collector of ſhells, a laborious and tunef
bag-piper, or a diligent breeder of tame rabbits, mig ſeverally excel in their reſpective parts of the Bathc

I ſhall range theſe confined and leſs copious G nius's under proper claſſes, and (the better to gi their pictures to the reader) under the names of A mals of ſome ſort or other; whereby he will be en bled, at the firſt ſight of ſuch as ſhall daily come fort to know to what kind to refer, and with what a thors to compare them.

1. The Flying Fiſhes: Theſe are writers who now d then riſe upon their fins, and fly out of the Pro-ıd; but their wings are ſoon dry, and they drop wn to the bottom. G. S. A. H. C. G.

2. The Swallows are authors that are eternally mming and fluttering up and down, but all their ility is employed to catch flies. L. T. W. P. ırd H.

3. The Oſtridges are ſuch, whoſe heavineſs rarely rmits them to raiſe themſelves from the ground; ir wings are of no uſe to lift them up, and their ɔtion is between flying and walking; but then y run very faſt. D. F. L. E. The Hon. E. H.

4. The Parrots are they that repeat another's ırds, in ſuch a hoarſe odd voice, as makes them m their own. W. B. W. H. C. C. The Reve-ıd D. D.

5. The Didappers are authors that keep themves long out of ſight, under water, and come up w and then where you leaſt expected them. L. W. D. Eſq. The Hon. Sir W. Y.

6. The Porpoiſes are unweildy and big; they put their numbers into a great turmoil and tempeſt, whenever they appear in plain light (which is ſeldom) they are only ſhapeleſs and ugly monſters I. D. C. G. I. O.

7. The Frogs are ſuch as can neither walk nor fly but can leap and bound to admiration: They live generally in the bottom of a ditch, and make a great noiſe whenever they thruſt their heads above water R. W. I. M. Eſq; T. D. Gent.

8. The Eels are obſcure authors, that wrap themſelves up in their own mud, but are mighty nimble and pert. L. W. L. T. P. M. General C.

9. The Tortoiſes are ſlow and chill, and, like paſtoral writers, delight much in gardens: they have for the moſt part a fine embroidered Shell, and under neath it, a heavy lump. A. P. W. B. L. E. The Right Hon. E. of S.

Theſe are the chief Characteriſticks of the Bathos and in each of theſe kinds we have the comfort to be bleſſed with ſundry and manifold choice Spirits in this our Iſland.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Profund, when it conſiſts in the Thought.

WE have already laid down the Principles upon which our author is to proceed, and ıe manner of forming his Thought by familiarizing is mind to the loweſt objects; to which it may be ıdded, that Vulgar converſation will greatly contriute. There is no queſtion but the Garret or the rinter's boy may often be diſcerned in the compoitions made in ſuch ſcenes and company; and much f Mr. Curl himſelf has been inſenſibly infuſed into ıe works of his learned writers.

The Phyſician, by the ſtudy and inſpection of rine and ordure, approves himſelf in the ſcience; ıd in like ſort ſhould our author accuſtom and exciſe his imagination upon the dregs of nature.

This will render his thoughts truly and fundaıentally low, and carry him many fathoms beyond lediocrity. For, certain it is (tho' ſome lukewarm :ads imagine they may be ſafe by temporizing be:ween the extremes) that where there is not a Triti-lneſs or Mediocrity in the Thought, it can never : ſink into the genuine and perfect Bathos, by the moſt elaborate low Expreſſion. It can, at moſt, be only carefully obſcured, or metaphorically debaſed But 'tis the Thought alone that ſtrikes, and give the whole that ſpirit, which we admire and ſtare at For inſtance, in that ingenious piece on a lady' drinking the Bath-waters:

[t] She drinks! She drinks! Behold the matchleſs dame!
To her 'tis water, but to us 'tis flame:
Thus fire is water, water fire by turns,
And the ſame ſtream at once both cools and burns.

What can be more eaſy and unaffected than th Diction of theſe verſes? 'Tis the Turn of Though alone, and the Variety of Imagination, that charm and ſurprize us. And when the ſame lady goes int the Bath, the Thought (as in juſtneſs it ought) goe ſtill deeper.

[u] Venus beheld her, 'midſt her croud of ſlaves,
And thought herſelf juſt riſen from the waves.

How much out of the way of common ſenſe this reflection of Venus, not knowing herſelf fro the lady?

Of the ſame nature is that noble miſtake of frighted ſtag in a full chace, who (ſaith the Poet)

[t] Anon. [u] Idem.

Hears his own feet, and thinks they ſound like more;
And fears the hind feet will o'ertake the fore.

So aſtoniſhing as theſe are, they yield to the following, which is Profundity itſelf,

* None but Himſelf can be his Parallel.

Unleſs it may ſeem borrowed from the Thought of that Maſter of a Show in Smithfield, who writ in large letters, over the picture of his elephant,

This is the greateſt Elephant in the world, except Himſelf.

However our next inſtance is certainly an original: Speaking of a beautiful Infant,

So fair thou art, that if great Cupid be A child, as Poets ſay, ſure thou art he.
Fair Venus would miſtake thee for her own,
Did not thy eyes proclaim thee not her ſon.
There all the lightnings of thy Mother's ſhine,
And with a fatal brightneſs kill in thine.

Firſt he is Cupid, then he is not Cupid; firſt Venus would miſtake him, then ſhe would not miſtake him; next his Eyes are his Mother's, and laſtly they are not his Mother's, but his own.

Another author, deſcribing a Poet that ſhines forth midſt a circle of Critics,

* Theobald, Double Falſhood.

Thus Phœbus thro' the Zodiac takes his way,
And amid Monſters riſes into day.

What a peculiarity is here of invention? The A thor's pencil, like the wand of Circe, turns all in monſters at a ſtroke. A great Genius takes thin in the lump, without ſtopping at minute conſider tions: In vain might the ram, the bull, the goat, t lion, the crab, the ſcorpion, the fiſhes, all ſtand his way, as mere natural animals: much more mig it be pleaded that a pair of ſcales, an old man, a two innocent children, were no monſters: The were only the Centaur and the Maid that could l eſteemed out of nature. But what of that? with boldneſs peculiar to theſe daring genius's, what l found not monſters, he made ſo.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Profund, conſiſting in the Circum ſtances, and of Amplification and Periphra in general.

WHAT in a great meaſure diſtinguiſh other writers from ours, is their chuſi and ſeparating ſuch circumſtances in a deſcription ennoble or elevate the ſubject.

The circumſtances which are moſt natural are obvious, therefore not aſtoniſhing or peculiar. But thoſe that are far-fetched, or unexpected, or hardly compatible, will ſurpriſe prodigiouſly. Theſe therefore we muſt principally hunt out; but above all, preſerve a laudable Prolixity; preſenting the whole and every ſide at once of the image to view. For Choice and Diſtinction are not only a curb to the ſpirit, and limit the deſcriptive faculty, but alſo leſſen the book; which is frequently of the worſt conſequence of all to our author.

When Job ſays in ſhort, "He waſhed his feet in "butter," (a circumſtance ſome Poets would have ſoftened, or paſt over) now hear how this butter is ſpread out by the great Genius.

[y] With teats diſtended with their milky ſtore,
Such num'rous lowing herds, before my door,
Their painful burden to unload did meet,
That we with butter might have waſh'd our feet.

How cautious! and particular! He had (ſays our author) ſo many herds, which herds thrived ſo well, and thriving ſo well gave ſo much milk, and that milk produced ſo much butter, that, if he did not, he might have waſh'd his feet in it.

The enſuing deſcription of Hell is no leſs remarkable in the circumſtances, [y] Blackm. Job, p. 133.

[z] In flaming heaps the raging ocean rolls,
Whoſe livid waves involve deſpairing ſouls;
The liquid burnings dreadful colours ſhew,
Some deeply red and others faintly blue.

Could the moſt minute Dutch-painters have bee more exact? How inimitably circumſtantial is thi alſo of a war-horſe!

[a] His eye-balls burn, he wounds the ſmoaking plain,
And knots of ſcarlet ribbond deck his mane.

Of certain Cudgel-players:

[b] They brandiſh high in air their threatning ſtaves,
Their hands a woven guard of ozier ſaves,
In which they fix their hazle weapon's end.

Who would not think the Poet had paſt his whol life at Wakes in ſuch laudable diverſions? ſince h teaches us how to hold, nay how to make a Cud gel!

Periphraſe is another great aid to Prolixity; be ing a diffuſed circumlocutory manner of expreſſing known idea, which ſhould be ſo myſteriouſly couch'd as to give the reader the pleaſure of gueſſing what is that the author can poſſibly mean, and a ſtran ſurprize when he finds it.

z Pr. Arth. p. 89. a Anon. b Pr. Art p. 167.

The poet I laſt mentioned is incomparable in this gure.

[c] A waving ſea of heads was round me ſpread,
And ſtill freſh ſtreams the gazing deluge fed.

Here is a waving ſea of heads, which by a freſh ream of heads, grows to be a gazing deluge of eads. You come at laſt to find, it means a great rowd.

How pretty and how genteel is the following?

[d] Nature's confectioner,
Whoſe ſuckets are moiſt alchemy:
The ſtill of his refining mold
Minting the garden into gold.

What is this but a Bee gathering honey?

[e] Little Syren of the ſtage,
Empty warbler, breathing lyre,
Wanton gale of fond deſire,
Tuneful miſchief, vocal ſpell.

Who would think, this was only a poor gentlewoman that ſung finely?

We may define Amplification to be making the oſt of a Thought; it is the Spinning-wheel of the athos, which draws out and ſpreads it in the fineſt hread. There are Amplifiers who can extend half a dozen thin thoughts over a whole Folio; but for which, the tale of many a vaſt Romance, and the ſubſtance of many a fair volume might be reduced into the ſize of a primmer.

[c] Job, p. 78. [d] Cleveland. [e] A. Philips to Cuzzona.

In the book of Job are theſe words, "Haſt thou "commanded the morning, and cauſed the day "ſpring to know his place?" How is this extended by the moſt celebrated Amplifier of our age?

[f] Canſt thou ſet forth th' etherial mines on high,
Which the refulgent ore of light ſupply?
Is the celeſtial furnace to thee known,
In which I melt the golden metal down?
Treaſures, from whence I deal out light as faſt,
As all my ſtars and laviſh ſuns can waſte.

The ſame author hath amplified a paſſage in the civth Pſalm; "He looks on the earth, and it trem "bles. He touches the hills, and they ſmoke."

[g] The hills forget they're fix'd, and in their flight
Caſt off their weight, and eaſe themſelves for fright
The woods, with terror wing'd, out-fly the wind.
And leave the heavy, panting hills behind.

You here ſee the hills not only trembling, but ſhaking off the woods from their backs, to run the faſter: After this you are preſented with a foot-race of mountains and woods, where the woods diſtance

[f] Job, p. 108. [g] P. 267.

the mountains, that, like corpulent purſy fellows, come puffing and panting a vaſt way behind them.

CHAP. IX.

Of Imitation, and the Manner of imitating.

THAT the true authors of the Profund are to imitate diligently the examples in their own way, is not to be queſtioned, and that divers have by this means attained to a depth whereunto their own weight could never have carried them, is evident by ſundry inſtances. Who ſees not that De Foe was the poetical ſon of Withers, Tate of Ogilby, E. Ward of John Taylor, and E——n of Blackmore? Therefore when we ſit down to write, let us bring ſome great author to our mind, and aſk ourſelves this queſtion; How would Sir Richard have ſaid this? Do I expreſs myſelf as ſimply as Amb. Philips? Or flow my numbers with the quiet thoughtleſſneſs of Mr. Welſted?

But it may ſeem ſomewhat ſtrange to aſſert, that our Proficient ſhould alſo read the works of thoſe famous Poets who have excelled in the Sublime: Yet is not this a paradox? As Virgil is ſaid to have read Ennius, out of his dunghill to draw gold, ſo may our author read Shakeſpear, Milton, and Dryden for the contrary end, to bury their gold in his own dunghill. A true Genius, when he finds thing lofty or ſhining in them, will have the ſkil bring it down, take off the gloſs, or quite diſch the colour, by ſome ingenious circumſtance or P phraſe, ſome addition or diminution, or by ſom thoſe Figures, the uſe of which we ſhall ſhew in next chapter.

The book of Job is acknowledged to be infini ſublime, and yet has not the father of the Bathos duced it in every page? Is there a paſſage in Virgil more painted up and laboured than the ſcription of Ætna in the third Æneid?

Horrificis juxta tonat Ætna ruinis,
Interdumque atram prorumpit ad æthera nubem,
Turbine fumantem piceo et candente favilla,
Attollitque globos flammarum, et ſidera lambit.
Interdum ſcopulos avulſaque viſcera montis
Erigit eructans, liquefactaque ſaxa ſub auras
Cum gemitu glomerat, fundoque exæſtuat imo.

(I beg pardon of the gentle Engliſh reader, ſ ſuch of our writers as underſtand not Latin.) I how this is taken down by our Britiſh Poet, by ſingle happy thought of throwing the mountain i a fit of the colic.

[h] Ætna, and all the burning mountains, find
Their kindled ſtores with inbred ſtorms of wind

[h] Pr. Arthur, p. 75.

lown up to rage; and, roaring out, complain
r torn with inward gripes, and tort'ring pain:
th'ring, they caſt their dreadful vomit round,
nd with their melted bowels ſpread the ground.

race, in ſearch of the Sublime, ſtruck his head
t the Stars [1]; but Empedocles, to fathom the id, threw himſelf into Ætna. And who but imagine our excellent Modern had alſo been from this deſcription?

tation is of two ſorts; the firſt is when we
to our own purpoſes the Thoughts of others;
cond conſiſts in copying the Imperfections or ſhes of celebrated authors. I have ſeen a Play ſedly writ in the ſtyle of Shakeſpear; wherein ſemblance lay in one ſingle line, d ſo good morrow t'ye, good maſter Lieutenant.

undry poems in imitation of Milton, where he utmoſt exactneſs, and not ſo much as one ion, nevertheleſs was conſtantly nathleſs, em-r'd was broider'd, hermits were eremites, diſwas 'ſdain'd, ſhady umbrageous, enterprize em- pagan paynim, pinnions pennons, ſweet dulcet, ds orchats, bridge-work pontifical; nay, her was nd their was thir thro' the whole poem. And y deed, there is no other way by which the [1] Sublimi feriam ſidera vertice.

true modern poet could read, to any purpoſe, t works of ſuch men as Milton and Shakeſpear.

It may be expected, that, like other Critics, ſhould next ſpeak of the Paſſions: But as the m end and principal effect of the Bathos is to prod Tranquillity of Mind, (and ſure it is a better defi to promote ſleep than madneſs) we have little ſay on this ſubject. Nor will the ſhort bounds this diſcourſe allow us to treat at large of the Em lients and the Opiats of Poeſy, of the Cool, and t manner of producing it, or of the methods u by our authors in managing the Paſſions. I ſh but tranſiently remark, that nothing contributes much to the Cool, as the uſe of Wit in expreſſi paſſion: The true genius rarely fails of points, c ceits, and proper ſimiles on ſuch occaſions: T
we may term the Pathetic epigrammatical, in w
even puns are made uſe of with good ſuc Hereby our beſt authors have avoided thro themſelves or their readers into any indecent T ports.

But as it is ſometimes needful to excite th
ſions of our antagoniſt in the polemic way, th ſtudents in the law have conſtantly taken th thods from low life, where they obſerved, t move Anger, uſe is made of ſcolding and to move Love, of bawdry; to beget Fav Friendſhip, of groſs flattery; and to produ

miating an adverſary with crimes obnoxious tate. As for Shame, it is a ſilly paſſion, of s our authors are incapable themſelves, ſo uld not produce it in others.

CHAP X.

pes and Figures: And firſt of the varie-
, confounding, and reverſing Figures.

T we proceed to the Figures. We cannot o earneſtly recommend to our authors the the Abuſe of Speech. They ought to lay it a principle, to ſay nothing in the uſual
t (if poſſible) in the direct contrary. There-Figures muſt be ſo turn'd, as to manifeſt ricate and wonderful Caſt of Head which iſhes all writers of this kind; or (as I may refer exactly the Mold in which they were in all its inequalities, cavities, obliquities, nies, and diſtortions.
uld be endleſs, nay impoſſible to enumerate Figures; but we ſhall content ourſelves to e principal, which moſt powerfully contrithe Bathos, under three Claſſes.
e Variegating, Confounding, or Reverſing opes and Figures.

II. The Magnifying, and
III. The Diminiſhing.

We cannot avoid giving to theſe the Roman Names; but in tenderneſs to ou men and fellow writers, many of whom, exquiſite, are wholly ignorant of thoſe lang have alſo explained them in our mother to

I. Of the firſt ſort, nothing ſo much co the Bathos, as the CATACHRESIS.

A Maſter of this will ſay,

Mow the Beard,
Shave the Graſs, Pin the Plank,
Nail my Sleeve.

From whence reſults the ſame kind of pl the mind as to the eye, when we behold H trimming himſelf with a hatchet, hewing tree with a raſor, making his tea in a c and brewing his ale in a tea-pot, to the i ſatisfaction of the Britiſh ſpectator. Anoth of the Bathos is, the inverſion of Cauſes for Effects, of Inve Inventions, etc.

The METONYMY,

Laced in her [f] Cofins new appear'd the bride,
A [g] Bubble-boy and [h] Tompion at her ſide,
And with an air divine her [i] Colmar ply'd:
Then oh! ſhe cries, what ſlaves I round me ſee?
Here a bright Redcoat, there a ſmart [k] Toupee.

The SYNECDOCHE,

which conſiſts, in the uſe of a part for the whole. You may call a young woman ſometimes Pretty-face and Pigs-eyes, and ſometimes Snotty-noſe and Draggle-tail. Or of Accidents for Perſons; as a Lawyer is called Split-cauſe, a Taylor Prick-louſe, etc. Or of things belonging to a man, for the man himſelf; as a Sword-man, a Gown-man, a T-m-T-d-man: a White-ſtaff, a Turn-key, etc.

The APOSIOPESIS.

An excellent figure for the Ignorant, as, "What "ſhall I ſay?" when one has nothing to ſay: or I "can no more," when one really can no more. Expreſſions which the gentle reader is ſo good as never to take in earneſt.

The METAPHOR.

The firſt rule is to draw it from the loweſt things, which is a certain way to ſink the higheſt; as when you ſpeak of the Thunder of Heaven, ſay, [f] Stays. [g] Tweezer-caſe. [h] Watch. [i] Fan.

[k] A ſort of Perriwig: All words in uſe in this preſent Year 1727. P.

[l] The Lords above are angry and talk big.

If you would deſcribe a rich man refunding his treaſures, expreſs it thus,

[m] Tho' he (as ſaid) may Riches gorge, the Spoil
Painful in maſſy Vomit ſhall recoil,
Soon ſhall he periſh with a ſwift decay,
Like his own Ordure, caſt with ſcorn away.

The Second, that, whenever you ſtart a Metaphor, you muſt be ſure to run it down, and purſue it as far as it can go. If you get the ſcent of a State negotiation, follow it in this manner.

[n] The ſtones and all the elements with thee
Shall ratify a ſtrict confederacy;
Wild beaſts their ſavage temper ſhall forget,
And for a firm alliance with thee treat;
The finny tyrant of the ſpacious ſeas
Shall ſend a ſcaly embaſſy for peace;
His plighted faith the Crocodile ſhall keep,
And ſeeing thee, for joy ſincerely weep.

Or if you repreſent the Creator, denouncing war againſt the wicked, be ſure not to omit one circumſtance uſual in proclaiming and levying war.

[o] Envoys and Agents, who by my command
Reſide in Paleſtina's land,

[l] Lee Alex. [m] Blackm. Job, p. 91, 93. [n] Job, p. 22.
[o] Blackm. Iſa. c. xl.

To whom commiſſions I have given,
To manage there the intereſts of heaven:
Ye holy heralds, who proclaim
Or war or peace, in mine your maſter's name:
Ye pioneers of heaven, prepare a road,
Make it plain, direct and broad;
For I in perſon will my people head;
For the divine deliverer
Will on his march in majeſty appear,
And needs the aid of no confed'rate power.

Under the article of the Confounding, we rank

1. The MIXTURE OF FIGURES, which raiſes ſo many images, as to give you no image at all. But its principal beauty is when it gives an unexpected picture of Winter. Of this ſort is the following:

[p] The gaping clouds pour lakes of ſulphur down
Whoſe livid flaſhes ſickning ſunbeams drown.

What a noble Confuſion? clouds, lakes, brimſtone, flames, ſun-beams, gaping, pouring, ſickning, drowning! all in two lines.

2. The JARGON.

[q] Thy head ſhall riſe, tho' buried in the duſt,
And 'midſt the clouds his glittering turrets thruſt.

[p] Pr. Arthur. p. 37. [q] Job, p. 107.

Quære, What are the glittering turrets of a man's head?

[r] Upon the ſhore, as frequent as the ſand,
To meet the Prince, the glad Dimetians ſtand.

Quære, Where theſe Dimetians ſtood? and of what ſize they were? Add alſo to the Jargon ſuch as the following.

[s] Deſtruction's empire ſhall no longer laſt
And Deſolation lye for ever waſte.

[t] Here Niobe, ſad mother makes her moan,
And ſeems converted to a ſtone in ſtone.

But for Variegation nothing is more uſeful than

3. The PARANOMASIA, or PUN, where a Word, like the tongue of a jack-daw, ſpeaks twice as much by being ſplit: As this of Mr. Dennis [w],

Bullets that wound, like Parthians, as they fly;

or this excellent one of Mr. Welſted [x],

Behold the Virgin lye.
Naked, and only cover'd by the Sky.

To which thou may'ſt add,

To ſee her beauties no man needs to ſtoop,
She has the whole Horizon for her hoop.

[r] Pr. Arthur, p. 157. [s] Job, p. 89. [t] T. Cook, poems.
[w] Poems, 1663, p. 13. [x] Welſted, Poems, Acon and Lavia.

4. The ANTITHESIS, or SEE-SAW, whereby Contraries and Oppoſitions are ballanced in ſuch a way, as to cauſe a reader to remain ſuſpended between them, to his exceeding delight and recreation. Such are theſe, on a lady who made herſelf appear out of ſize, by hiding a young princeſs under her cloaths.

[y] While the kind nymph changing her faultleſs ſhape
Becomes unhandſome, handſomely to ſcape.

On the Maids of Honour in mourning:

[z] Sadly they charm, and diſmally they pleaſe.

His eyes ſo bright
[a] Let in the object and let out the light.
[b] The Gods look pale to ſee us look ſo red.

The [c] Fairies and their Queen
In mantles blue came tripping o'er the green.

[d] All nature felt a reverential ſhock,
The ſea ſtood ſtill to ſee the mountains rock.

y Waller. z Steel on Queen Mary. a Quarles.
b Lee, Alex. c Phil. Paſt. d Black. Job. p. 176.

CHAP. XI.

The Figures continued: Of the Magnifyin and Diminiſhing Figures.

A Genuine Writer of the Profund will take ca never to magnify any object without cloud it at the ſame time: His Thought will appear in true miſt, and very unlike what is in nature. It mu always be remember'd that Darkneſs is an eſſenti quality of the Profund, or, if there chance to be glimmering, it muſt be as Milton expreſſes it,

No light, but rather darkneſs viſible.

The chief Figure of this ſort is,

1. The HYPERBOLE, or Impoſſible.

For inſtance of a Lion;

[c] He roar'd ſo loud, and look'd ſo wond'rous grim,
His very ſhadow durſt not follow him.

Of a Lady at Dinner.

The ſilver whiteneſs that adorns thy neck,
Sullies the plate, and makes the napkin black.

[c] Vet. Aut.

Of the ſame.

Th' [f] obſcureneſs of her birth
Cannot eclipſe the luſtre of her eyes,
Which make her all one light.

Of a Bull-baiting.

[g] Up to the ſtars the ſprawling maſtives fly,
And add new monſters to the frighted ſky.

Of a Scene of Miſery.

[h] Behold a ſcene of miſery and woe!
Here Argus ſoon might weep himſelf quite blind,
Ev'n tho' he had Briareus' hundred hands
To wipe theſe hundred eyes.

And that modeſt requeſt of two abſent lovers.

Ye Gods! annihilate but Space and Time,
And make two lovers happy.

2. The PERIPHRASIS, which the Moderns call he Circumbendibus, whereof we have given examples n the ninth chapter, and ſhall again in the twelfth.

To the ſame claſs of the Magnifying may be re- erred the following, which are ſo excellently mo- dern, that we have yet no name for them. In de- cribing a country proſpect, [f] Theob. Double Falſhood. [g] Blackm. [h] Anon.

[i] I'd call them mountains, but can't call them ſo,
For fear to wrong them with a name too low;
While the fair vales beneath ſo humbly lie,
That even humble ſeems a term too high.

III. The third Claſs remains, of the Diminiſhing Figures: And 1. the ANTICLIMAX, where the ſecond line drops quite ſhort of the firſt, than which nothing creates greater ſurprize.

On the extent of the Britiſh Arms.

[k] Under the Tropicks is our language ſpoke,
And part of Flanders hath receiv'd our Yoke.

On a Warrior.

[l] And thou Dalhouſſy the great God of War,
Lieutenant Colonel to the Earl of Mar.

On the Valour of the Engliſh.

[m] Nor Art nor Nature has the force
To ſtop its ſteddy courſe,
Nor Alps nor Pyrenæans keep it out,
Nor fortify'd Redoubt.

At other times this figure operates in a larger extent; and when the gentle reader is in expectation of ſome great image, he either finds it ſurprizingly imperfect, or is preſented with ſomething low, or quite ridiculous. A ſurprize reſembling that of a

[i] Anon. [k] Wall. [l] Anon. [m] Denn. on Namur.

ous perſon in a cabinet of Antique Statues, who be-ls on the Pedeſtal the names of Homer, or Cato;
looking up, finds Homer without a head, and aing to be ſeen of Cato but his privy-member.
h are theſe lines of a Leviathan at ſea.

His motion works, and beats the oozy mud,
And with its ſlime incorporates the flood,
'Till all th' encumber'd, thick, fermenting ſtream
Does like one Pot of boiling Ointment ſeem.
Where'er he ſwims, he leaves along the lake,
Such frothy furrows, ſuch a foamy track,
That all the waters of the deep appear Hoary—with age, or grey with ſudden fear.

lut perhaps even theſe are excelled by the enſu-

Now the reſiſted flames and fiery ſtore,
By winds aſſaulted, in wide forges roar,
And raging ſeas flow down of melted Ore.
Sometimes they bear long Iron Bars remov'd,
And to and fro huge Heaps of Cinders ſhov'd.

2. The VULGAR,

ſo a Species of the Diminiſhing: By this a ſpear
g into the air is compared to a boy whiſtling as oes on an errand.

[a] Blackm. Job, p. 197. [b] Pr. Arthur. p. 157.

[p] The mighty Stuffa threw a maſſy ſpear,
Which, with its Errand pleas'd, ſung thro' the air.

A Man raging with grief to a Maſtiff Dog:

[q] I cannot ſtifle this gigantic woe,
Nor on my raging grief a muzzle throw.

And Clouds big with water to a woman in great neceſſity:

Diſtended with the Waters in 'em pent,
The clouds hang deep in air, but hang unrent.

3. The Infantine.

This is when a Poet grows ſo very ſimple, as to think and talk like a child. I ſhall take my examples from the greateſt Maſter in this way: Hear how he fondles, like a meer ſtammerer.

[r] Little Charm of placid mien,
Miniature of beauty's queen,
Hither, Britiſh muſe of mine,
Hither, all ye Græcian Nine,
With the lovely Graces Three,
And your pretty Nurſeling ſee.

When the meadows next are ſeen,
Sweet enamel, white and green,
When again the lambkins play,
Pretty Sportlings full of May.

[p] Pr. Arthur. [q] Job, p. 41. [r] Amh. Philips on Miſs Cuzzona.

Then the neck ſo white and round,
(Little Neck with brillants bound.)
And thy Gentleneſs of mind,
(Gentle from a gentle kind) etc.
Happy thrice, and thrice again,
Happieſt be of happy men, etc.

ıe reſt of thoſe excellent Lullabies of his comɔn.

w prettily he aſks the ſheep to teach him to
?

euch me to grieve with bleating moan, my ſheep.

ar how a babe would reaſon on his nurſe's
:

hat ever ſhe could die! Oh moſt unkind!
die, and leave poor Colinet behind?
nd yet,—Why blame I her?—

th no leſs ſimplicity does he ſuppoſe that ſhep-ſſes tear their hair and beat their breaſts, at their leaths :

e brighter maids, faint emblems of my fair,
ith looks caſt down, and with diſhevel'd hair, bitter anguiſh beat your breaſts, and moan
r death untimely, as it were your own.

[s] Philips's Paſtorals. [t] Ibid. [u] Ibid.

4. The INANITY, or NOTHINGNESS.

Of this the ſame author furniſhes us with ſ beautiful inſtances:

[y] Ah ſilly I, more ſilly than my ſheep,
(Which on the flow'ry plain I once did keep.)

[z] To the grave Senate ſhe could counſel give,
(What with aſtoniſhment they did receive.)

[a] He whom loud cannon could not terrify,
Falls (from the grandeur of his Majeſty.)

[b] Happy merry as a king,
Sipping dew, you ſip, and ſing.

The Noiſe returning with returning Light,
What did it?

[c] Diſpers'd the Silence, and diſpell'd the Night.

You eaſily perceive the Nothingneſs of every ſec Verſe.

[d] The glories of proud London to ſurvey,
The Sun himſelf ſhall riſe—by break of day.

5. The EXPLETIVE,

admirably exemplified in the Epithets of many thors.

Th' umbrageous ſhadow, and the verdant green,
The running current, and odorous fragrance
Chear my lone ſolitude with joyous gladneſs.

[y] Ibid. [z] Phil. on Q. Mary. [a] Ibid. [b] T. (on a Graſhopper. [c] Anon. [d] Autor. Vet.

etty drawling words like theſe,

en his tomb, all men his ſons adore,
his ſon's ſons till there ſhall be no more.
iſing ſun our grief did ſee,
e ſetting ſun did ſee the ſame,
: wretched we remembred thee,
O Sion, Sion, lovely name.

The MACROLOGY and PLEONASM
nerally coupled, as a lean rabbit with a fat · is it a wonder, the ſuperfluity of words and f ſenſe, being juſt the ſame thing. I am o ſee one of our greateſt adverſaries employ[f] e.

·owth of meadows, and the pride of fields ood of armies and ſupport of wars:
e of ſwords, and gleanings of a fight,
his numbers, and contract his hoſt.
e'er his friends retire, or foes ſucceed,
'd with Tempeſts, and in oceans drown'd.

hich the Perfection is

The TAUTOLOGY.

thro' the billows, and—divide the main nother numbers, and—in ſofter verſe.

ɔk, Poems. f Ibid. g Camp.
Miſc. 12° vol. iv. p. 291. 4th Edit.

[i] Divide—and part—the fever'd World—in two.-

With ten thouſand others equally muſical, an plentifully flowing thro' moſt of our celebrated m dern Poems.

CHAP. XII.

Of Expreſſion, and the ſeveral Sorts of Styl of the preſent Age.

THE Expreſſion is adequate, when it is propo tionably low to the Profundity of the Though It muſt not be always Grammatical, leſt it appear p dantic and ungentlemanly; nor too clear, for fear become vulgar; for obſcurity beſtows a caſt of t wonderful, and throws an oracular dignity upon piece which hath no meaning.

For example, ſometimes uſe the wrong Number The ſword and Peſtilence at once devours, inſtead of d vour. [k] Sometimes the wrong Caſe; And who mo fit to ſooth the God than thee? inſtead of thou: An rather than ſay, Thetis ſaw Achilles weep, ſhe hea him weep.

We muſt be exceeding careful in two things; fir in the Choice of low Words: ſecondly, in the ſober a

[i] Ibid. Vol. vi. p. 121. [k] Ti. Hom. Il. i.

orderly way of ranging them. Many of our Poets are naturally bleſſed with this talent, infomuch that they are in the circumſtance of that honeſt Citizen, who had made Proſe all his life without knowing it. Let verſes run in this manner, juſt to be a vehicle to the words: (I take them from my laſt cited author, who, tho' otherwiſe by no means of our rank, ſeemed once in his life to have a mind to be ſimple.)

[l] If not, a prize I will myſelf decree,
From him, or him, or elſe perhaps from thee.

[m] full of Days was he;
Two ages paſt, he liv'd the third to ſee.

[n] The king of forty kings, and honour'd more
By mighty Jove than e'er was king before.

[o] That I may know, if thou my pray'r deny,
The moſt deſpis'd of all the Gods am I.

[p] Then let my mother once be rul'd by me,
Tho' much more wiſe than I pretend to be.

Or theſe of the ſame hand.

[q] I leave the arts of poetry and verſe
To them that practiſe them with more ſucceſs:

[l] Ti. Hom. Il. i. p. 11. [m] Idem. p. 17. [n] Idem. p. 19. [o] P. 34. [p] P. 38. [q] Tonſ. Miſc. 12° vol. iv. p. 292. fourth Edit.

Of greater truths I now prepare to tell,
And ſo at once, dear friend and muſe, farewel.

Sometimes a ſingle Word will vulgariſe a poetical idea; as where a Ship ſet on fire owes all the Spirit of the Bathos to one choice word that ends the line.

[r] And his ſcorch'd ribs the hot Contagion fry'd.

And in that deſcription of a World in ruins,

[s] Should the whole frame of nature round him break,
He unconcern'd would bear the mighty Crack.

So alſo in theſe,

[t] Beaſts tame and ſavage to the river's brink
Come, from the fields and wild abodes—to drink.

Frequently two or three words will do it effectually,

[u] He from the clouds does the ſweet liquor ſqueeze,
That chears the Foreſt and the Garden trees.

It is alſo uſeful to employ Technical Terms, which eſtrange your ſtyle from the great and general ideas of nature: and the higher your ſubject is, the lower ſhould you ſearch into mechanicks for your expreſſion. If you deſcribe the garment of an angel, ſay that his [x] Linen was finely ſpun, and bleached on the [r] Pr. Arth. p. 151. [s] Tonſ. Miſc. vol. vi. p. 219.

[t] Job, 263. [u] Id. Job, 264. [x] Pr. Arthur, p. 19.

happy Plains, [y] Call an army of Angels, Angelic Cuiraſſiers, and, if you have occaſion to mention a number of misfortunes, ſtyle them

[z] Freſh Troops of Pains, and regimented Woes.

STYLE is divided by the Rhetoricians into the Proper and the Figured. Of the Figured we have already treated, and the Proper is what our authors have nothing to do with. Of Styles we ſhall mention only the Principal which owe to the moderns either their chief Improvement, or entire Invention.

1. The FLORID Style, than which none is more proper to the Bathos, as flowers, which are the Loweſt of vegetables, are moſt Gaudy, and do many times grow in great plenty at the bottom of Ponds and Ditches.

A fine writer in this kind preſents you with the following Poſie:

[a] The groves appear all dreſt with wreaths of flowers,
And from their leaves drop aromatic ſhowers,
Whoſe fragrant heads in myſtic twines above,
Exchang'd their ſweets, and mix'd with thouſand kiſſes,

[y] Ibid. p. 339. [z] Job, p. 86. [a] Behn's Poems, p. 2.

As if the willing branches ſtrove
To beautify and ſhade the grove,——

(which indeed moſt branches do.) But this is ſtill excelled by our Laureat,

[b] Branches in branches twin'd compoſe the grove,
And ſhoot and ſpread, and bloſſom into love.
The trembling palms their mutual vows repeat,
And bending poplars bending poplars meet.
The diſtant plantanes ſeem to preſs more nigh,
And to the ſighing alders, alders ſigh.

Hear alſo our Homer.

[c] His Robe of State is form'd of light refin'd,
An endleſs Train of luſtre ſpreads behind.
His throne's of bright compacted Glory made,
With Pearl celeſtial, and with Gems inlaid:
Whence Floods of joy, and Seas of ſplendor flow,
On all th' angelic gazing throng below.

2. The PERT Style.

This does in as peculiar a manner become the low in wit, as a pert air does the low in ſtature. Mr. Thomas Brown, the author of the London Spy, and all the Spies and Trips in general, are herein to be diligently ſtudied: In Verſe Mr. Cibber's Prologues.

[b] Guardian, 12° 127. [c] Black. Pſ. civ.

But the beauty and energy of it is never ſo conſpi-ious, as when it is employed in Modernizing and apting to the Taſte of the Times the works of the ncients. This we rightly phraſe Doing them into nglish, and Making them Engliſh; two expreſſions great Propriety, the one denoting our Neglect of e Manner how, the other the Force and Compulſion ith which it is brought about. It is by virtue of is Style that Tacitus talks like a Coffee-Houſe Po-ician, Joſephus like the Britiſh Gazetteer, Tully is ſhort and ſmart as Seneca or Mr. Aſgill, Marcus urelius is excellent at Snipſnap, and honeſt Thomas Kempis as Prim and Polite as any preacher at ourt.

3. The ALAMODE Style,

hich is fine by being new, and has this happineſs ttending it, that it is as durable and extenſive as the oem itſelf. Take ſome examples of it, in the deription of the Sun in a Mourning coach upon the eath of Queen Mary.

[d] See Phœbus now, as once for Phaeton,
Has maſk'd his face, and put deep Mourning on:
Dark clouds his ſable Chariot do ſurround,
And the dull Steeds ſtalk o'er the melancholy round.

[d] Amb. Philips.

Of Prince Arthur's Soldiers drinking.

[e] While rich Burgundian wine, and bright Champaign
Chaſe from their minds the terrors of the main.

(whence we alſo learn, that Burgundy and Champaign make a man on ſhore deſpiſe a ſtorm at ſea.)

Of the Almighty encamping his Regiments.

[f] He ſunk a vaſt capacious deep,
Where he his liquid Regiments does keep,
Thither the waves file off, and make their way,
To form the mighty body of the ſea;
Where they encamp, and in their ſtation ſtand, Entrench'd in Works of Rock, and Lines of Sand.

Of two Armies on the Point of engaging.

[g] Yon' armies are the Cards which both muſt play;
At leaſt come off a Saver if you may:
Throw boldly at the Sum the Gods have ſet;
Theſe on your ſide with all their fortunes bet.

All perfectly agreeable to the preſent Cuſtoms and beſt Faſhions of our Metropolis.

But the principal branch of the Alamode is the FRURIENT, a Style greatly advanced and honoured of late by the practice of perſons of the firſt

[e] Pr. Arthur, p. 16. [f] Blackm. Pſ. civ. p. 261.
[g] Lee, Sophon.

Quality; and by the encouragement of the Ladies, not unſucceſsfully introduced even into the Drawing-room. Indeed its incredible Progreſs and Conqueſts may be compared to thoſe of the great Seſoſtris, and are every where known by the ſame Marks, the images of the genital parts of men or women. It conſiſts wholly of metaphors drawn from two moſt fruitful ſources or ſprings, the very Bathos of the human body, that is to ſay, * * * and * * * Hiatus magnus lacrymabilis. * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

And ſelling of Bargains, and double Entendre, and Κλεϊσμος and Ὀλοφύλλισμος, all derived from the ſaid ſources.

4. The FINICAL Style, which conſiſts of the moſt curious, affected, mincing, metaphors, and partakes of the alamode.

As this, of a Brook dry'd by the Sun.

[h] Won by the ſummer's importuning ray,
Th' eloping ſtream did from her channel ſtray,
And with enticing ſun-beams ſtole away.

Of an eaſy Death.

[i] When watchful death ſhall on his harveſt look,
And ſee thee ripe with age, invite the hook;

[h] Blackm. Job, p. 26. [i] Ibid. p. 23.

He'll gently cut thy bending Stalk, and then Lay kindly in the Grave, his Granary.

Of Trees in a Storm.

[k] Oaks whoſe extended arms the winds defy,
The tempeſt ſees their ſtrength, and ſighs, and paſſes by.

Of Water ſimmering over the Fire.

[l] The ſparkling flames raiſe water to a Smile, Yet the pleas'd liquor pines, and leſſens all the while.

5. LASTLY, I ſhall place the CUMBROUS, which moves heavily under a load of metaphors, and drags after it a long train of words. And the BUSKIN or Stately, frequently and with great felicity mixes with the former. For as the firſt is the proper engine to depreſs what is high, ſo is the ſecond to raiſe what is baſe and low to a ridiculous Viſibility. When both theſe can be done at once, then is the Bathos in perfection; as when a man is ſet with his head downward, and his breech upright, his degradation is compleat: One end of him as big as ever, only that end is the wrong one. Will not every true lover of the Profund be delighted to behold the moſt vulgar and low actions of life exalted in the following manner?

[k] Denn. [l] Anon. Tonſ. Miſc. Part. vi. p. 224.

Who knocks at the Door?

r whom thus rudely pleads my loud-tongu'd gate,
at he may enter? ——

See who is there?

Advance the fringed curtains of thy eyes,
And tell me who comes yonder. ——

Shut the Door.

e wooden guardian of our privacy
ick on its axle turn.——

Bring my Cloaths.

ing me what Nature, taylor to the Bear,
Man himself deny'd: She gave me cold,
t would not give me Cloaths. ——

Light the Fire.

ing forth some remnant of Promethean theft,
ick to expand th' inclement air congeal'd Boreas' rude breath. ——

Snuff the Candle.

r' Luminary amputation needs,
us shall you save its half-extinguish'd life.

[m] Temp.

Open the Letter.

P Wax! render up thy truſt. ———

Uncork the Bottle, and chip the Bread.

Apply thine engine to the ſpungy door,
Set Bacchus from his glaſſy priſon free,
And ſtrip white Ceres of her nut-brown coat.

CHAP. XIII.

A Project for the Advancement of the Bathos.

THUS have I (my dear Countrymen) with incredible pains and diligence, diſcovered the hidden ſources of the Bathos, or, as I may ſay, broke open the Abyſſes of this Great Deep. And having now eſtabliſhed good and wholſome Laws, what remains but that all true moderns with their utmoſt might do proceed to put the ſame in execution? In order, whereto, I think I ſhall in the ſecond place highly deſerve of my Country, by propoſing ſuch a Scheme, as may facilitate this great end.

As our number is confeſſedly far ſuperior to that of the enemy, there ſeems nothing wanting but Uni-

P Theob. Double Falſhood.

nity among ourſelves. It is therefore humbly ered, that all and every individual of the Bathos enter into a firm aſſociation, and incorporate into e regular Body, whereof every member, even the aneſt, will ſome way contribute to the ſupport the whole; in like manner, as the weakeſt reeds, en joined in one bundle, become infrangible. which end our Art ought to be put upon the ne foot with other Arts of this Age. The vaſt provement of modern manufactures ariſeth from ir being divided into ſeveral branches, and parled out to ſeveral trades: For inſtance, in Clockking one artiſt makes the balance, another the ing, another the crown-wheels, a fourth the caſe, d the principal workman puts all together: To s oeconomy we owe the perfection of our modern tches, and doubtleſs we alſo might that of our dern Poetry and Rhetoric, were the ſeveral parts nched out in the like manner.

Nothing is more evident than that divers per-, no other way remarkable, have each a ſtrong poſition to the formation of ſome particular Trope Figure. Ariſtotle ſaith, that the Hyperbole is an ument fit for young Men of Quality; accordingly find in thoſe Gentlemen a wonderful propenſity ard it, which is marvellouſly improved by Tra-ing: Soldiers alſo and Seamen are very happy he ſame Figure. The Periphraſis or Circumlocu-

cution is the peculiar talent of Country Farm the Proverb and Apologue of old men at their cl the Ellipſis or Speech by half words, of Min and Politicians, the Apoſiopeſis of Courtiers, th totes or Diminution of Ladies, Whiſperers and I biters, and the Anadiploſis of common Cryers Hawkers, who, by redoubling the ſame words, ſuade people to buy their oyſters, green haſting
new ballads. Epithets may be found in great p at Billingſgate, Sarcaſm and Irony learned upo Water, and the Epiphonema or Exclamation frequ from the Beargarden, and as frequently from Hear him of the Houſe of Commons.

Now each man applying his whole time an nius upon his particular Figure, would doubtle tain to perfection; and when each became i porated and ſworn into the Society (as hath propoſed) a Poet or Orator would have no m do but to ſend to the particular Traders in Kind, to the Metaphoriſt for his Allegories, t
Simile-maker for his Compariſons, to the Ironiſt f Sarcaſms, to the Apothegmatiſt for his Sentence whereby a Dedication or Speech would be com in a moment, the ſuperior artiſt having noth do but to put together all the Materials.

I therefore propoſe that there be contrived
all convenient diſpatch, at the publick expen Rhetorical Cheſt of Drawers, conſiſting of thre es, the higheſt for the Deliberative, the middle r the Demonſtrative, and the loweſt for the Ju-cial. Theſe ſhall be divided into Loci, or Plas, being repoſitories for Matter and Argument the ſeveral kinds of oration or writing; and ery Drawer ſhall again be ſubdivided into Cells, ſembling thoſe of Cabinets for Rarities. The partment for Peace or War, and that of the Lirty of the Preſs, may in a very few days be fild with ſeveral arguments perfectly new; and e Vituperative Partition will as eaſily be reple-iſhed with a moſt choice collection, entirely of the rowth and manufacture of the preſent age. Every mpoſer will ſoon be taught the uſe of this Ca-inet, and how to manage all the Regiſters of it, hich will be drawn out much in the manner of oſe in an Organ.

The Keys of it muſt be kept in honeſt hands, by me Reverend Prelate, or Valiant Officer, of unqueſoned Loyalty and Affection to every preſent Eſta-liſhment in Church and State; which will ſuffici-ntly guard againſt any miſchief which might other-iſe be apprehended from it.

And being lodged in ſuch hands, it may be at diſ-etion let out by the Day, to ſeveral great Orators in oth Houſes; from whence it is to be hoped much rofit and Gain will alſo accrue to our Society.

CHAP. XIV.

How to make Dedications, Panegyrics, or Satires, and of the Colours of Honourable and Diſhonourable.

NOW of what neceſſity the foregoing Project may prove, will appear from this ſingle conſideration, that nothing is of equal conſequence to the ſucceſs of our Works, as Speed and Diſpatch. Great pity it is, that ſolid brains are not, like other ſolid bodies, conſtantly endowed with a velocity in ſinking, proportioned to their heavineſs: For it is with the flowers of the Bathos as with thoſe of Nature, which if the careful gardener brings not haſtily to market in the Morning, muſt unprofitably periſh and wither before Night. And of all our Productions none is ſo ſhort-lived as the Dedication and Panegyric, which are often but the Praiſe of a Day, and become by the next utterly uſeleſs, improper, indecent, and falſe. This is the more to be lamented, inaſmuch as theſe two are the ſorts whereon in a manner depends that Profit, which muſt ſtill be remembered to be the main end of our Writers and Speakers.

We ſhall therefore employ this chapter in ſhewing the quickeſt method of compoſing them; after which we will teach a ſhort Way to Epic Poetry. And theſe being confeſſedly the works of moſt importance and Difficulty, it is preſumed we may leave the reſt to each author's own learning or practice.

Firſt of Panegyric: Every man is honourable, who is ſo by Law, Cuſtom, or Title. The Publick are better judges of what is honourable than private Men. The Virtues of great Men, like thoſe of Plants, are inherent in them whether they are exerted or not; and the more ſtrongly inherent, the leſs they are exerted; as a man is the more rich, the leſs he ſpends. All great Miniſters, without either private or œconomical Virtue, are virtuous by their Poſts; liberal and generous upon the Publick Money, provident upon Publick Supplies, juſt by paying Publick Intereſt, couragious and magnanimous by the Fleets and Armies, magnificent upon the Publick Expences, and prudent by Publick Succeſs. They have by their Office, a right to a ſhare of the Publick Stock of Virtues; beſides they are by Preſcription immemorial inveſted in all the celebrated virtues of their Predeceſſors in the ſame ſtations, eſpecially thoſe of their own Anceſtors.

As to what are commonly called the Colours of Honourable and Diſhonourable, they are various in into a Hero.

The firſt and chief rule is the Golden Rule o formation, which conſiſts in converting Vi their bordering Virtues. A Man who is a thrift, and will not pay a juſt Debt, may Injuſtice transformed into Liberality; Co may be metamorphoſed into Prudence; I rance into good Nature and good-Fellowſhi ruption into Patriotiſm; and Lewdneſs into neſs and Facility.

The ſecond is the Rule of Contraries: It is the leſs a Man is endued with any Virtue, t need he has to have it plentifully beſtowed, e thoſe good qualities of which the world g believes he hath none at all: For who will Man for giving him that which he has?

The Patrons of theſe Projects will ſome

he government hath ſtripped; which is the real poetical Juſtice of this age. For a full collection of Topicks and Epithets to be uſed in the Praiſe and Diſpraiſe of Miniſterial and Unminiſterial Perſons, I refer to our Rhetorical Cabinet; concluding with an earneſt exhortation to all my brethren, to obſerve the Precepts here laid down, the neglect of which hath coſt ſome of them their Ears in a Pillory.

CHAP. XV.

A Receipt to make an Epic Poem.

AN Epic Poem, the Critics agree, is the greateſt work human nature is capable of. They have already laid down many mechanical rules for compoſitions of this ſort, but at the ſame time they cut off almoſt all undertakers from the poſſibility of ever performing them; for the firſt qualification they unanimouſly require in a Poet, is a Genius. I ſhall here endeavour (for the benefit of my countrymen) to make it manifeſt, that Epic Poems may be made without a Genius, nay without Learning or much Reading. This muſt neceſſarily be of great uſe to all thoſe who confeſs they never Read, and of whom the world is convinced they never Learn. Moliere obſerves of making a dinner, that any man can do it with Money, and if a profeſſed Cook cannot do it without, he has his Art for nothing; the ſame may be ſaid of making a Poem, 'tis eaſily brought about by him that has a Genius, but the ſkill lies in doing it without one. In purſuance of this end I ſhall preſent the reader with a plain and certain Recipe, by which any author in the Bathos may be qualified for this grand performance.

For the FABLE.

Take out of any old Poem, Hiſtory-book, Romance, or Legend (for inſtance, Geoffry of Monmouth, or Don Belianis of Greece) thoſe parts of ſtory which afford moſt ſcope for long Deſcriptions: Put theſe pieces together, and throw all the adventures you fanſy into one Tale. Then take a Hero, whom you may chuſe for the ſound of his name, and put him into the midſt of theſe adventures: There let him work for twelve books; at the end of which you may take him out, ready prepared to conquer or to marry; it being neceſſary that the concluſion of an Epic Poem be fortunate.

To make an EPISODE.

Take any remaining adventure of your former collection, in which you could no way involve your Hero; or any unfortunate accident that was too ood to be thrown away; and it will be of uſe, ap-ied to any other perſon, who may be loſt and eva-rate in the courſe of the work, without the leaſt amage to the compoſition.

For the MORAL and ALLEGORY.

Theſe you may extract out of the Fable after-ards, at your leiſure: Be ſure you ſtrain them ſuf-ciently.

For the MANNERS.

For thoſe of the Hero, take all the beſt qualities ou can find in the moſt celebrated Heroes of anti-uity; if they will not be reduced to a Conſiſtency, ıy them all on a heap upon him. But be ſure they re qualities which your Patron would be thought t⁹ ave; and to prevent any miſtake which the world ıay be ſubject to, ſelect from the alphabet thoſe ca-ital letters that compoſe his name, and ſet them at he head of a Dedication before your Poem. How-ver, do not abſolutely obſerve the exact quantity of heſe Virtues, it not being determined whether or no t be neceſſary for the Hero of a Poem to be an honeſt Man. For the Under-Characters, gather them from Homer and Virgil, and change the names as occa-ion ſerves.

For the MACHINES.

Take of Deities, male and female, as many as you can uſe: Separate them into two equal parts, and keep Jupiter in the middle: Let Juno put him in a ferment, and Venus mollify him. Remember on all occaſions to make uſe of volatile Mercury. If you have need of Devils, draw them out of Milton's Paradiſe, and extract your Spirits from Taſſo. The uſe of theſe Machines is evident; ſince no Epic Poem can poſſibly ſubſiſt without them, the wiſeſt way is to reſerve them for your greateſt neceſſities: When you cannot extricate your Hero by any human means, or yourſelf by your own wit, ſeek relief from Heaven, and the Gods will do your buſineſs very readily. This is according to the direct Preſcription of Horace in his Art of Poetry,

Nec Deus interſit, niſi dignus vindice Nodus Inciderit.——

That is to ſay, A Poet ſhould never call upon the Gods for their Aſſiſtance, but when he is in great Perplexity.

For the DESCRIPTIONS.

For a Tempeſt. Take Eurus, Zephyr, Auſter, Boreas, and caſt them together in one verſe: add theſe of Rain, Lightning and Thunder (the loudeſt you can) quantum ſufficit, mix your Clouds and Blows well together 'till they foam, and thicken cription here and there with a Quickſand. Brew r Tempeſt well in your head, before you ſet it a wing.

For a Battle. Pick a large quantity of Images d Deſcriptions from Homer's Iliads, with a ſpice two of Virgil, and if there remain any overplus, ou may lay them by for a Skirmiſh. Seaſon it well ith Similes, and it will make an excellent Battle.

For a Burning Town. If ſuch a Deſcription be neceſſary (becauſe it is certain there is one in Virgil) old Troy is ready burnt to your hands. But if you fear that would be thought borrowed, a Chapter or two of the Theory of the Conflagration, well circumſtanced and done into verſe, will be a good Succedaneum.

As for Similes and Metaphors, they may be found all over the Creation; the moſt ignorant may gather them, but the difficulty is in applying them. For this adviſe with your Bookſeller.

CHAP. XVI.

A Project for the Advancement of the Stage.

IT may be thought that we ſhould not wholly omit the Drama, which makes ſo great and ſo lucrative a part of Poetry. But this Province is ſo well taken care of, by the preſent Managers of the Theatre, that it is perfectly needleſs to ſuggeſt to them any other Methods than they have already practiſed for the advancement of the Bathos.

Here therefore, in the Name of all our Brethren, let me return our ſincere and humble Thanks to the moſt Auguſt Mr. Barton Booth, the moſt Serene Mr. Robert Wilks, and the moſt Undaunted Mr. Colly Cibber; of whom let it be known, when the People of this Age ſhall be Anceſtors, and to all the Succeſſion of our Succeſſors, that to this preſent Day they continue to Out-do even their own Out-doings: And when the inevitable Hand of ſweeping Time ſhall have bruſhed off all the Works of To-day, may this Teſtimony of a Co-temporary Critic to their Fame, be extended as far as To-morrow.

Yet, if to ſo wiſe an Adminiſtration it be poſſible any thing can be added, it is that more ample and comprehenſive Scheme which Mr. Dennis and

'. Gildon (the two greateſt critics and Reformers
:n living) made publick in the year 1720, in a Pro-t ſigned with their names, and dated the 2d of Feıary. I cannot better conclude than by preſent-
; the Reader with the Subſtance of it.

1. It is propoſed, That the two Theatres be inporated into one Company; that the Royal Acaty of Muſick be added to them as an Orcheſtra; and it Mr. Figg with his Prize-fighters, and Violante
:h the Rope-dancers, be admitted in Partnerſhip.

2. That a ſpacious Building be erected at the pub-expence, capable of containing at leaſt ten thou-d Spectators, which is become abſolutely neceſſary the great addition of Children and Nurſes to the ıdience, ſince the new Entertainments. That there a Stage as large as the Athenian, which was near ıety thouſand geometrical paces ſquare, and ſepa-
:e diviſions for the two Houſes of Parliament, my ɔrds the Judges, the honourable the Directors of : Academy, and the Court of Aldermen, who ſhall have their Places frank.

3. If Weſtminſter-Hall be not allotted to this ſervice hich by reaſon of its proximity to the two Cham-rs of Parliament above-mentioned, ſeems not alto-
:her improper;) it is left to the wiſdom of the Nan whether Somerſet-Houſe may not be demoliſhed, l a Theatre built upon that Side, which lies convenient to receive Spectators from the Co Surrey, who may be wafted thither by water-ca eſteemed by all Projectors the cheapeſt what To this may be added, tha[illegible]he river Thames

the readieſt manner convey thoſe eminent Perſ from Courts beyond the ſeas, who may be dra ther by Curioſity to behold ſome of our mo brated Pieces, or by Affection to ſee their C men, the Harlequins and Eunuchs; of which nient notice may be given, for two or three before, in the public Prints.

4. That the Theatre aboveſaid be environe a fair Quadrangle of Buildings, fitted for the modation of decayed Critics and Poets; out of Six of the moſt aged (their age to be compute the year wherein their firſt work was publiſhe be elected to manage the affairs of the ſociet vided nevertheleſs that the Laureat for the ti
ing, may be always one. The Head or Prefic prevent diſputes, but too frequent among the l ſhall be the moſt ancient Poet and Critic to b in the whole Iſland.

5. The Male-Players are to be lodged in t rets of the ſaid Quadrangle, and to attend the of the Poets, dwelling under them, by bruſhi apparel, drawing on their ſhoes, and the like Actreſſes are to make their beds, and waſh the

6. A large room ſhall be ſet apart for a Library which conſiſt of all the modern Dramatic Poems, and all the Criticiſms extant. In the midſt of this room ſhall be a round table for the Council of Six to ſit and deliberate on the Merits of Plays. The Majority ſhall determine the Diſpute; and if it ſhould happen that three and three ſhould be of each ſide, the Preſident ſhall have a caſting Voice, unleſs where the Contention may run ſo high as to require a deciſion by Single Combat.

7. It may be convenient to place the Counſel of Six in ſome conſpicuous ſituation in the Theatre, where after the manner uſually practiſed by compoſers in muſic, they may give Signs (before ſettled and agreed upon) of Diſlike or Approbation. In conſequence of theſe Signs the whole audience ſhall be required to clap or hiſs, that the Town may learn certainly when and how far they ought to be pleas'd?

8. It is ſubmitted whether it would not be proper to diſtinguiſh the Council of Six by ſome particular Habit or Gown of an honourable ſhape and colour, to which may be added a ſquare Cap and a white Wand.

9. That to prevent unmarried Actreſſes making away with their Infants, a competent proviſion be allowed for the nurture of them, who ſhall for that reaſon be deemed the Children of the ſociety; and that they may be educated according to the Genius of their parents, the ſaid Actreſſes ſhall declare upon Oath (as far as their memory will allow) the true names and qualities of their ſeveral fathers. A private Gentleman's Son ſhall at the public expence be brought up a Page to attend the Council of Six: A more ample proviſion ſhall be made for the ſon of a Poet; and a greater ſtill for the ſon of a Critic.

10. If it be diſcovered that any Actreſs is got with Child, during the Interludes of any Play wherein ſhe hath a Part, it ſhall be reckoned a neglect of her buſineſs, and ſhe ſhall forfeit accordingly. If any Actor for the future ſhall commit Murder, except upon the ſtage, he ſhall be left to the laws of the land; the like is to be underſtood of Robbery and Theft. In all other caſes, particularly in thoſe for Debt, it is propoſed that this, like the other Courts of Whitehall and St. James's, may be held a Place of Privilege. And whereas it has been found, that an obligation to ſatisfy paultry Creditors has been a Diſcouragement to Men of Letters, if any Perſon of Quality or others ſhall ſend for any Poet or Critic of this Society to any remote quarter of the town, the ſaid Poet or Critic ſhall freely paſs and repaſs without being liable to an Arreſt.

11. The forementioned Scheme in its ſeveral regulations may be ſupported by Profits ariſing from very Third-night throughout the year. And as it ould be hard to ſuppoſe that ſo many perſons could ve without any food (though from the former courſe f their lives, a very little will be deemed ſufficient) ie maſters of calculation will, we believe, agree, that ut of thoſe Profits, the ſaid perſons might be ſub-ſted in a ſober and decent manner. We will ven-ire to affirm further, that not only the proper ma-azines of Thunder and Lightning, but Paint, Diet-rinks, Spitting-pots, and all other Neceſſaries of Life, iay in like manner fairly be provided for.

12. If ſome of the Articles may at firſt view ſeem iable to Objections, particularly thoſe that give ſo aſt a power to the Council of Six (which is indeed arger than any entruſted to the great Officers of ſtate) his may be obviated, by ſwearing thoſe Six Perſons of his Majeſty's Privy Council and obliging them to paſs every thing of moment previouſly at that moſt ionourable Board.

CONTENTS

TO THE

ART OF SINKING IN POETRY.

CHAP.		Page.
I.	INTRODUCTION	99
II.	That the Bathos, or Profund, is the natural Taſte of Men, and in particular, of the preſent Age	102
III.	The Neceſſity of the Bathos, phyſically conſidered	104
IV.	That there is an Art of the Bathos or Profund	106
V.	Of the true Genius for the Profund, and by what it is conſtituted	108
VI.	Of the ſeveral Kinds of Genius in the Profund, and the Marks and Characters of each	115
VII.	Of the Profund, when it conſiſts in the Thought	119
VIII.	Of the Profund, conſiſting in the Circumſtance, and of Amplification and Periphraſe in general	122
IX.	Of Imitation, and the Manner of Imitating	127

CONTENTS.

CHAP. Page.

X. Of Tropes and Figures; and first of the variegating, confounding, and reverſing Figures 131

XI. The Figures continued: Of the magnifying and diminiſhing Figures 138

XII. Of Expreſſion, and the ſeveral Sorts of Style of the preſent Age 146

XIII. A Project for the Advancement of the Bathos 156

XIV. How to make Dedications, Panegyricks or Satires, and of the Colours of Honourable and Diſhonourable 160

XV. A Receipt to make an Epic Poem 163

XVI. A Project for the Advancement of the Stage 168

Virgilius Reſtauratus:

SEU

MARTINI SCRIBLERI,

Summi Critici.

Caſtigationum in Aeneidem

SPECIMEN.

AENEIDEM totam, Amice Lector, innumerabilibus poene mendis ſcaturientem, ad priſtinum ſenſum revocabimus. In ſingulis fere verſibus ſpuriae occurrunt lectiones, in omnibus quos unquam vidi codicibus, aut vulgatis aut ineditis, ad opprobrium uſque Criticorum, in hunc diem exiſtentes. Interea adverte oculos, et his paucis fruere. At ſi quae ſint in hiſce caſtigationibus, de quibus non ſatis liquet, ſyllabarum quantitates, προλεγόμενα noſtra Libro ipſi praefigenda, ut conſulas, moneo.

I. Specimen LIBRI PRIMI,

Ver. 1.

ARMA Virumque cano, Trojae qui primus ab oris
Italiam, fato profugus, Lavinaque venit
Littora. multum ille et terris jactatus et alto,
Vi ſuperûm ———

Arma Virumque cano, Trojae qui primus ab aris
Italiam, flatu profugus Latinaque venit
Littora. multum ille et terris vexatus et alto,
Vi ſuperûm——

Ab aris, nempe Hercaei Jovis. vide lib. ii. v. 512. 550.—Flatu, ventorum Aeoli, ut ſequitur—Latina certe littora cum Aeneas aderat, Lavina non niſi poſtea ab ipſo nominata, lib. xii. v. 193.—Jactatus terris non convenit.

II. Ver. 52.

Et quiſquis Numen Junonis adoret?
Et quiſquis Nomen Junonis adoret?

Longe melius, quam, ut antea, Numen. et procul dubio ſic Virgilius.

III. Ver. 86.

Venti, velut agmine facto,
Qua data porta ruunt

Venti, velut aggere fracto, ıa data porta ruunt.
ɔrrige, meo periculo.

IV. VER. 117.

Fidumque vehebat Orontem.

Fortemque vehebat Orontem.
fidum. quia Epitheton Achatae notiſſimum
i nunquam datur.

V. VER. 119.

Excutitur, pronuſque magiſter
lvitur in caput.

Excutitur: pronuſque magis ter
lvitur in caput.
Virgilium aliter non ſcripſiſſe, quod plane con-tur ex ſequentibus—Aſt illum ter fluctus ibidem et.

VI. VER. 122.

Apparent rari nantes in gurgite vaſto
Arma virûm.

Armi hominum: Ridicule antea Arma virûm,
ex ferro conflata, quomodo poſſunt natare?

VII. VER. 151.

ıue rotis ſummas leviter perlabitur undas.
ıue rotis ſpumas leviter perlabitur undas.
as, et leviter perlabi, pleonaſmus eſt. Mirifice altera lectio Neptuni agilitatem et celeritatem exprimit. simili modo Noster de Camilla, Æn. xi. Illa vel intactae segetis per summa volaret, etc. hyperbolice.

VIII. Ver. 154.

Jamque faces et saxa volant, furor arma ministrat:

Jam faeces et saxa volant, fugimusque ministri:

uti solent, instanti periculo——Faces facibus longe praestant; quid enim nisi faeces jactarent vulgus fordidum?

IX. Ver. 170.

Fronte sub adversa scopulis pendentibus antrum,
Intus aquae dulces, vivoque sedilia saxo.

Fronte sub adversa populis prandentibus antrum. Sic malim, longe potius quam scopulis pendentibus: Nugae! nonne vides versu sequenti dulces aquas ad potandum et sedilia ad discumbendum dari? In quorum usum? quippe prandentium.

X. Ver. 189.

Tres littore cervos
Prospicit errantes: hos tota armenta sequuntur
A tergo——

Tres littore cervos
Aspicit errantes: hos agmina tota sequuntur
A tergo——

vi, lectio vulgata, abſurditas notiſſima: haec anilia in Africa non inventa, quis neſcit? At motus et ulandi ritus Corvorum, quis non agnorit hoc loco? ore, locus ubi errant Cervi, uti Noſter alibi,

Et ſola in ſicca ſecum ſpatiatur arena.

ien praeclariſſimum, immo et agminibus militum quenter obſervatum, ut patet ex Hiſtoricis.

XI. VER. 748.

Arcturum, pluviaſque Hyades, geminoſque Triones.
or graviſſimus. Corrigo.——ſeptemque Triones.

XII. VER. 631.

Quare agite, o juvenes, tectis ſuccedite noſtris.
tis potius dicebat Dido, polita magis oratione, et e unica voce et torum et menſam exprimebat. nc lectionem probe confirmat appellatio o juvenes! plicem hunc ſenſum alibi etiam Maro lepide in-:, Æn. iv. ver. 19.

Iuic uni forſan potui ſuccumbere culpae:
Inna! fatebor enim——

corriges,

Iuic uni [viro ſcil.] potui ſuccumbere; culpas, Inna? fatebor enim, etc.

ſuccumbere quam eleganter ambigua!

LIBER SECUNDUS.

VER. I.

CONTICUERE omnes, intentique ora tenebant;
Inde toro Pater Aeneas ſic orſus ab alto;
Concubuere omnes, intenteque ora tenebant;
Inde toro ſatur Aeneas ſic orſus ab alto.

Concubuere, quia toro Aeneam vidimus accumbente quin et altera ratio, ſcil. conticuere et ora teneba tautologice dictum. In manuſcripto perquam ra ſimo in patris muſeo legitur, ore gemebant; ſed ma ingenioſe quam vere. Satur Aeneas, quippe jamjam a prandio ſurrexit: pater nihil ad rem.

II. VER. 3.

Infandum, Regina, jubes renovare dolorem.
Infantum, Regina, jubes renovare dolorem.

Sic haud dubito veterrimis codicibus ſcriptum fuiſ quod ſatis conſtat ex perantiqua illa Britanor cantilena vocata Chevy Chace, cujus autor hunc l cum ſibi aſcivit in haec verba,

The Child may rue that is unborn.

III. VER. 4.

Trojanas ut opes, et lamentabile regnum Eruerint Danaï.

)janas ut oves, et lamentabile regnum Diruerint llem oves potius quam opes, quoniam in anti- nis illis temporibus oves et armenta divitiae re- uere. Vel fortaſſe oves Paridis innuit, quas ſu- lam nuperrime paſcebat, et jam in vindictam elenae raptu, a Menelao, Ajace, [vid. Hor. . 3.] aliiſque ducibus, merito occiſas.

IV. VER. 5.

Quaeque ipſe miſerrima vidi,
quorum pars magna fui.

Quaeque ipſe miſerrimus audi,
quorum pars magna fui———
a tam audita quam viſa recta diſtinctione enar- ic Aeneas profitetur: multa, quorum nox ea fa- la conſcia fuit, vir probus et pius tanquam viſa : non potuit.

V. VER. 7.

Quis talia fando
nperet a lacrymis?

Quis talia flendo
nperet in lacrymis?———
enim doloris indicatio, abſque modo lacry- quam ſolummodo a lacrymis non temperare.

VI. VER. 9.

Et jam nox humida coelo
pitat, ſuadentque cadentia ſidera ſomnos.

Et jam nox humida coelo
Praecipitat, suadentque latentia sidera somnos.

Lectio, humida, vespertinum rorem solum innuere v detur, magis mi arridet lumina, quae latentia postqua praecipitantur, Aurorae adventum annunciant.

Sed si tantus amor casus cognoscere nostros,
Et breviter Trojae supremum audire laborem.

Sed si tantus amor curas cognoscere noctis,
Et breve ter Trojae superumque audire labores.

Curae noctis (scilicet noctis excidii Trojani) ma compendiose (vel, ut dixit ipse, breviter) totam be catastrophen denotat, quam diffusa illa et indeterm nata lectio, casus nostros. Ter audire gratum fui Didoni patet ex libro quarto, ubi dicitur, Iliacosq iterum demens audire labores exposcit: Ter enim p saepe usurpatur. Trojae, superumque labores, rect quia non tantum homines sed et Dii sese his laborib immiscuerunt. Vide Æn. ii. ver. 610, etc.

Quanquam animus meminisse horret, luctuque r fugit, Incipiam.———
Quamquam animus meminisse horret, luctusque r surgit,

Resurgit multo proprius dolorem renascentem nota quam, ut hactenus, refugit.

—

VII. VER. 19.

Fracti bello, fatiſque repulſi
Ductores Danaûm, tot jam labentibus annis, Inſtar montis Equum, divina Palladis arte, Aedificant——etc.

Tracti bello, fatiſque repulſi.

Tracti et repulſi, Antitheſis perpulchra! Fracti frigide et vulgariter.

Equum jam Trojanum (ut vulgus loquitur) adeamus; quem ſi Equam Graecam vocabis, lector, minime pecces; ſolae enim ſemellae utero geſtant. Uterumque armato milite complent—Uteroque recuſſo Inſonuere cavae—Atque utero ſonitum quater arma dederc—Incluſos utero Danaos, etc. Vox foeta non convenit maribus, —Scandit fatalis machina muros, Foeta armis—Palladem virginem, equo mari fabricando invigilare decuiſſe, quis putet? Incredibile prorſus! quamobrem exiſtimo veram equae lectionem paſſim reſtituendam, niſi ubi forte, metri cauſſa, equum potius quam equam, genus pro ſexu, dixit Maro. Vale! dum haec paucula corriges, majus opus moveo.

A

PECIMEN

OF

:RIBLERUS's REPORTS.

Stradling verſus Stiles.

Report del Caſe argue en le commen Banke dent touts les Juſtices de meſme le Banke, en le art an du raygne de Roy Jacques, entre Matthew radling, Plant. et Peter Stiles, Def. en un Action opter certos Equos coloratos, Anglicè, Dyed ozſes, poſt. per le dit Matthew vers le dit Peter.

citel SIR John Swale, of Swale-Hall in aſe. Swale-Dale faſt by the River Swale, made his Laſt Will and Teſtament: In h, among other Bequeſts was this, viz. of the kind Love and Reſpect that I bear unto uch honoured and good Friend Mr. Matthew ling, Gent. I do bequeath unto the ſaid Mat- Stradling, Gent. all my black and white Horſes,

The Teſtator had ſix black Horſes, ſix white Horſes, and ſix pyed Horſes.

The Debate thereforе was, Whether or no the ſaid Matthew Stradling ſhould have the ſaid pyed Horſes by Virtue of the ſaid Bequeſt.

Le Point.

Pour le Pl. Atkins Apprentice pour le Pl. moy ſemble que le Pl. recovera.

And firſt of all it ſeemeth expedient to conſider what is the Nature of Horſes, and alſo what is the Nature of Colours; and ſo the Argument will conſequently divide itſelf in a twofold way, that is to ſay, the Formal Part and Subſtantial Part. Horſes are the Subſtantial Part, or thing bequeathed: Black and White the Formal or deſcriptive Part.

Horſe, in a phyſical Senſe, doth import a certain Quadrupede or four-footed Animal, which by the apt and regular Diſpoſition of certain proper and convenient Parts, is adapted, fitted and conſtituted for the Uſe and Need of Man. Yea, ſo neceſſary and conducive was this Animal conceived to be to the Behoof of the Commonweal, that ſundry and divers Acts of Parliament have from time to time been made in Favour of Horſes.

1ſt Edward VI. Makes the Tranſporting of Horſes out of the Kingdom, no leſs a Penalty than the Forfeiture of 40l.

3d Edward VI. Takes from Horſe-Benefit of their Clergy.

Statutes of the 27th and 32d of Henry deſcend ſo far as to take Care of their d: Theſe our wiſe Anceſtors pru-eſeeing, that they could not better take ir own Poſterity, than by alſo taking at of their Horſes.

So great eſteem are Horſes in the Eye of non Law, that when a Knight of the mitteth any great and enormous is Puniſhment is to have his Spurs ith a Clever, bring, as Maſter Bracton beth, unworthy to ride on a Horſe.

2, Sect. 315. ſaith, If Tenants in Come a Leaſe reſerving for Rent a Horſe, have but one Aſſize, becauſe, ſaid the Law will not ſuffer a Horſe to be ſeverther Argument of what high Eſtima-Law maketh of an Horſe.

the great difference ſeemeth not to be touching the ſubſtantial Part, Horſes, ceed to the formal or deſcriptive Part,
at Horſes they are that come within ueſt.

s are commonly of various Kinds and orts; of which White and Black are the intend whatſoever is contained between then deviſed ſo.

But the preſent Caſe is ſtill ſtronger, c not only within the Intendment, but a very Letter of the Words.

By the Word Black, all the Horſes th black are deviſed; by the Word White, are d thoſe that are White; and by the ſame with the Conjunction Copulative, And, be them, the Horſes that are Black and White, t
to ſay, Pyed, are deviſed alſo.

Whatever is Black and White is Pyed and whatever is Pyed is Black and White;
Black and White is Pyed, and, vice verſa, P
Black and White.

ur le Catlyne Serjeant, Por ſemble al'con-
:fend. trary. The Plaintiff ſhall not have the Pyed Horſes by Intendment; for if by the biſe of Black and White Horſes, not only black d white Horſes, but Horſes of any Colour, tween theſe two Extremes may paſs, then : only Pyed and Grey Horſes, but alſo Red or Bay rſes would paſs likewiſe, which would be abſurd, l againſt Reaſon. And this is another ſtrong gument in Law, Nihil, quod eſt contra rationem, licitum; for Reaſon is the Life of the Law, nay ; common Law is nothing but Reaſon: which is be underſtood of artificial Perfection and Reaſon tten by long Study, and not of Man's natural aſon; for nemo naſcitur artifex, and legal Reaſon ſumma ratio; and therefore if all the Reaſon it is diſperſed into ſo many different Heads, re united into one, he could not make ſuch a w as the Law of England; becauſe by many ucceſſions of Ages it has been fixed and re-ed by grave and learned Men; ſo that the old ule may be verified in it, Neminem oportet eſſe bus ſapientiorem.

Is therefore pyed Horſes do not come within Intendment of the Bequeſt, ſo neither do y within the Letter of the Words.

A pyed Horſe is not a white Horſe, neither i pyed a black Horſe; how then can pyed Ho come under the words of black and white Hor

Beſides, where Cuſtom hath adapted a tain determinate Name to any one thing, in Deviſes, Feofments, and Grants, that ce Name ſhall be made uſe of, and no uncertain cumlocutory Deſcriptions ſhall be allowed; for taintꝝ is the Father of Right, and the Mo of Juſtice.

Le reſte del Argument jeo ne pouvois oyer, jeo fui diſturb en mon place.

Le Court fuit longement en doubt' de Matter; et apres grand deliberation eu,

Judgment fuit donne pour le Pl. niſi cau

Motion in Arreſt of Judgment, that the p Horſes were Mares; and thereupon an Inſpec was prayed.

Et ſur ceo le Court adviſare vult.

MEMOIRS of P. P.

CLERK of this PARISH.

ADVERTISEMENT.

The Original of the following extraordinary Treatiſe conſiſted of two large Volumes in Folio; which might juſtly be entitled. The importance of a Man to himſelf: But, as it can be of very little to any body beſides, I have contented myſelf to give only this ſhort Abſtract of it, as a Taſte of the true Spirit of Memoir-Writers.

IN the name of the Lord. Amen. I, P. P. by the Grace of God, Clerk of this Pariſh, writeth this Hiſtory.

Ever ſince I arrived at the age of diſcretion, I had a call to take upon me the function of a Pariſh-clerk; and to that end, it ſeemed unto me meet and profitable to aſſociate myſelf with the Pariſh-clerks of this Land; ſuch I mean, as were right worthy in their calling, men of a clear and ſweet voice, and of becoming gravity.

Now it came to paſs, that I was born in the year of our Lord Anno Domini 1655, the year wherein our worthy benefactor, Eſquire Bret, did add one Bell to the ring of this Pariſh. So that it hath been wittily ſaid, "That one and the ſame day did give "to this our Church two rare gifts, its great Bell "and its Clerk."

Even when I was at ſchool, my miſtreſs did ever extol me above the reſt of the youth, in that I had a laudable voice. And it was further-more obſerved, that I took a kindly affection unto that Black letter in which our Bibles are printed. Yea, often did I exerciſe myſelf in ſinging godly ballads, ſuch as The Lady and Death, The Children in the Wood, and Chevy Chace; and not like other children, in lewd and trivial ditties. Moreover, while I was a boy, I always adventured to lead the Pſalm next after Maſter William Harris, my predeceſſor, who (it muſt be confeſſed to the Glory of God) was a moſt excellent Pariſh-clerk in that his day.

Yet be it acknowledged, that at the age of ſixteen I became a Company-keeper, being led into idle converſation by my extraordinary love to Ringing; inſomuch, that in a ſhort time I was acquainted with every ſet of bells in the whole country: Neither could I be prevailed upon to abſent myſelf from Wakes, being called thereunto by the harmony of the ſteeple. While I was in theſe ſocie-

I gave myſelf up to unſpiritual paſtimes, ſuch reſtling, dancing, and cudgel-playing; ſo that en returned to my father's houſe with a broken . I had my head broken at Milton by Tho- Wyat, as we played a bout or two for an Hat, was edged with ſilver galloon. But in the year wing I broke the head of Henry Stubbs, and ined an hat not inferior to the former. At erton I encountered George Cummins, Weaver, behold my head was broken a ſecond time! he wake of Waybrook I engaged William Sim-, Tanner, when lo! thus was my head broken rd time, and much blood trickled therefrom. I adminiſtred to my comfort, ſaying within my- "What man is there, howſoever dextrous in y craft, who is for aye on his guard?" A week I had a baſe-born child laid unto me; for in the of my youth I was looked upon as a follower nereal fantaſies: Thus was I led into ſin by the lineſs of Suſannah Smith, who firſt tempted me then put me to ſhame; for indeed ſhe was a en of a ſeducing eye, and pleaſant feature. I oled myſelf before the Juſtice, I acknowledged rime to our Curate; and to do away mine of- s and make her ſome atonement, was joined to holy wedlock on the ſabbath day following. ow often do thoſe things which ſeem unto us rtunes, redound to our advantage! For the

Miniſter who had long looked on Suſanna as t moſt lovely of his pariſhioners) liked ſo well of n demeanour, that he recommended me to the hono of being his Clerk, which was then become vacā
by the deceaſe of good Maſter William Harris.

Here ends the firſt chapter; after which follow fi or ſixty pages of his amours in general, and that part cular one with Suſanna his preſent wife; but I proce to chapter the ninth.

No ſooner was I elected into mine office, but laid aſide the powder'd gallantries of my youth, a became a new man. I conſidered myſelf as in ſom wife of eccleſiaſtical dignity, ſince by wearing a ban which is no ſmall part of the ornament, of o Clergy, I might not unworthily be deemed, as it wer
a ſhred of the linnen veſtment of Aaron.

Thou may'ſt conceive, O reader, with what con cern I perceived the eyes of the congregation fixe upon me, when I firſt took my place at the feet o
the Prieſt. When I raiſed the pſalm, how did m voice quaver for fear! and when I arrayed th ſhoulders of the Miniſter with the ſurplice, how di my joints tremble under me! I ſaid within myſelf
"Remember, Paul, thou ſtandeſt before men of high
"worſhip, the wife Mr. Juſtice Freeman, the grav
"Mr. Juſtice Tonſon, the good Lady Jones, an

"the two virtuous gentlewomen her daughters, nay, "the great Sir Thomas Truby, Knight and Baronet, "and my young maſter the Eſquire, who ſhall one "day be Lord of this Manor:" Notwithſtanding which, it was my good hap to acquit myſelf to the good liking of the whole congregation; but the Lord forbid I ſhould glory therein.

The next chapter contains an account how he diſcharged the ſeveral duties of his office: in particular he inſiſts on the following:

I was determined to reform the manifold Corruptions and Abuſes which had crept into the Church.

Firſt, I was eſpecially ſevere in whipping forth dogs from the Temple, all excepting the lap-dog of the good widow Howard, a ſober dog which yelped not, nor was there offence in his mouth.

Secondly, I did even proceed to moroſeneſs, tho' ſore againſt my heart, unto poor babes, in tearing from them the half-eaten apples which they privily munch'd at Church. But verily it pity'd me, for I remember'd the days of my youth.

Thirdly, With the ſweat of my own hands, I did make plain and ſmooth the dogs-ears throughout our great Bible.

Fourthly, The pews and benches which were formerly ſwept but once in three years, I cau'd every Saturday to be ſwept with a beſom and trimmed.

Fifthly and laſtly, I cauſed the ſurplice to be neatly darned, waſhed, and laid in freſh lavender, (yea, and ſometimes to be ſprinkled with roſe-water) and I had great laud and praiſe from all the neighbouring Clergy, foraſmuch as no pariſh kept the Miniſter in cleaner linnen.

Notwithſtanding theſe his publick cares, in the eleventh chapter he informs us he did not neglect his uſual occupations as a handy craftſman.

Shoes, ſaith he, did I make, (and if intreated, mend) with good approbation. Faces alſo did I ſhave, and I clipped the hair. Chirurgery alſo I practiſed in the worming of Dogs; but to bleed adventured I not, except the poor. Upon this my twofold profeſſion, there paſſed among men a merry tale delectable enough to be rehearſed: How that being overtaken with liquor on Saturday evening, I ſhav'd the Prieſt with Spaniſh blacking for ſhoes inſtead of a waſh-ball, and with lamp-black Powder'd his perriwig. But theſe were ſayings of men, delighting in their own conceits more than in the truth. For it is well known, that great was my care and ſkill in theſe my crafts; yea, I once had the honor of trimming Sir Thomas himſelf, without fetching blood. Furthermore, I was ſought to to geld the Lady Frances her ſpaniel, which is wont to go aſtray: He was called Toby, that to ſay, Tobias: And 3dly, I was entruſted with gorgeous pair of ſhoes of the ſaid Lady, to ſet an el-piece thereon; and I received ſuch praiſe there-re, that it was ſaid all over the pariſh, I ſhould be commended unto the King to mend ſhoes for his ajeſty: whom God preſerve! Amen.

The reſt of this chapter I purpoſely omit, for it muſt be med that when he ſpeaks as a Shoemaker he is very ſurd. He talks of Moſes's pulling off his ſhoes, of tan-ig the hides of the Bulls of Baſan, of Simon the Tan-r, etc. and takes up four or five pages to prove, that hen the Apoſtles were inſtructed to travel without oes, the precept did not extend to their ſucceſſors.

The next chapter relates how he diſcovered a Thief with ible and key, and experimented verſes of the Pſalms it had cured Agues.

I paſs over many others which inform us of pariſh af-rs only, ſuch as of the Succeſſion of Curates; a liſt of weekly Texts; what Pſalms he choſe on proper oc-ions; and what children were born and buried: the of which articles he concludes thus:

That the ſhame of women may not endure, I ak not of Baſtards; neither will I name the Mothers, although thereby I might delight many grave women of the parish: Even her who hath done penance in the sheet will I not mention, forasmuch as the church hath been witness of her disgrace: Let the father who hath made due composition with the Churchwardens to conceal his infirmity, rest in peace; my pen shall not bewray him, for I also have sinned.

The next chapter contains what he calls a great Revolution in the Church, part of which I transcribe.

Now was the long expected time arrived, when the psalms of king David should be hymn'd unto the same tunes to which he played them upon his harp: (so was I informed by my Singing-master, a man right cunning in Psalmody:) Now was our over-abundant quaver and trilling done away, and in lieu thereof was instituted the Sol-fa, in such guise as is sung in his Majesty's Chapel. We had London singing masters sent into every parish, like unto Excise-men; and I also was ordained to adjoin myself unto them, though an unworthy disciple, in order to instruct my fellow-parishioners in this new manner of Worship. What tho' they accused me of humming through the nostril, as a Sackbut? yet would I not forego that harmony, it having been agreed by the worthy parish-clerks

f London ſtill to preſerve the ſame. I tutored the oung men and maidens to tune their voices as it ere a pſaltery, and the Church on the Sunday was lled with theſe new Hallelujahs.

Then follow full ſeventy chapters, containing an exact tail of the Law-ſuits of the Parſon and his Pariſhio-rs concerning tythes, and near a hundred pages left lank, with an earneſt deſire that the hiſtory might be ompleated by any of his ſucceſſors, in whoſe time eſe ſuits ſhould be ended.

The next chapter contains an account of the Briefs read the church, and the ſums collected upon each. For e reparation of nine churches, collected at nine ſe-ral times, 2 s. and 7 d. ¾. For fifty families ruined r fire, 1 s. ½. For an inundation, a King Charles's oat given by Lady Frances, etc.

In the next he laments the diſuſe of Wedding-ſermons, d celebrates the benefits ariſing from thoſe at Funerals, ncluding with theſe Words: Ah! let not the relations the deceaſed grudge the ſmall expence of an hat-nd, a pair of gloves, and ten ſhillings, for the ſatis-ction they are ſure to receive from a pious Divine, at their father, brother, or boſom wife, are certainly heaven.

In another, he draws a panegyrick on one Mrs. Mar-ret Wilkins, but after great encomiums concludes, that,

Animals might have rational, nay, immort but how he was again comforted with the
that, if ſo, they might be allowed chriſtia and greatly augment the fees of the pariſh.

In the two following chapters he is overpowe Vanity. We are told, how he was conſtantly to all the feaſts and banquets of the Church-offi
the ſpeeches he there made for the good of th
How he gave hints to young Clergymen to pre above all, how he gave a Text for the 30*th of* which occaſioned a moſt excellent ſermon, the which he takes entirely to himſelf. He gives a of a conference he had with the Vicar concernin of Texts. Let a preacher (ſaith he) conſide ſembly before whom he preacheth, and un adapt his text. Micah the iii[d] and 11[th] a appoint a preacher before the Houſe of Commons, would not he be wiſe to make choice of theſe words? Give, and it ſhall be given unto ye. Or before the Lords, Giving no offence, that the Miniſtry be not blamed, 2 Cor. vi. 3. Or praiſing the warm zeal of an Adminiſtration, Who maketh his Miniſters a flaming fire, Pſalm civ. 4. We omit many other of his texts, as too tedious.

From this period, the ſtyle of the book riſes extremely. Before the next chapter was paſted the Effigies of Dr. Sacheverel, and I found the oppoſite page all on a foam with Politicks.

We are now (ſays he) arrived at that celebrated year, in which the Church of England was tried in the perſon of Dr. Sacheverel. I had ever the intereſt of our High-Church at heart, neither would I at any ſeaſon mingle myſelf in the ſocieties of Fanaticks, whom I from my Infancy abhorred, more than the Heathen or Gentile. It was in theſe days I bethought myſelf, that much profit might accrue unto our Pariſh, and even unto the Nation, could there be aſſembled together a number of choſen men of the right ſpirit, who might argue, refine and define, upon high and great matters. Unto this purpoſe, I did inſtitute a weekly Aſſembly of divers worthy men at the Roſe and Crown Alehouſe, over whom myſelf (though unworthy) did preſide. Yea,

I did read unto them the Poſt-Boy of Mr. Roper, and the written letter of Mr. Dyer, upon which we communed afterwards among ourſelves. Our ſociety was compoſed of the following Perſons; Robert Jenkins, Farrier; Amos Turner, Collar-maker; George Pilcocks, late Exciſeman; Thomas White, Wheel-wright; and myſelf. Firſt, of the firſt, Robert Jenkins.

He was a man of bright parts and ſhrewd conceit, for he never ſhoed an horſe of a Whig or a Fanatick, but he lamed him ſorely.

Amos Turner, a worthy perſon, rightly eſteemed among us for his ſufferings, in that he had been honoured in the ſtocks for wearing an Oaken bough.

George Pilcocks, a ſufferer alſo; of zealous and laudable freedom of Speech, inſomuch that his occupation had been taken from him.

Thomas White, of good repute likewiſe, for that his uncle, by the Mother's ſide, had, formerly, been ſervitor at Maudling college, where the glorious Sacheverel was educated.

Now were the eyes of all the pariſh upon theſe our weekly councils. In a ſhort ſpace, the Miniſter came among us; he ſpake concerning us and our councils to a multitude of other Miniſters at the Viſitation, and they ſpake thereof unto the Miniſters at London, ſo that even the Biſhops heard and marvelled thereat. Moreover Sir Thomas, member f Parliament, ſpake of the ſame to other members f Parliament; who ſpake thereof unto the Peers of he Realm. Lo! thus did our counſels enter into the earts of our Generals and our Law-givers; and from enceforth, even as we deviſed, thus did they.

After this, the whole book is turned on a ſudden, from 's own Life, to a Hiſtory of all the publick Tranſactions Europe, compiled from the News-papers of thoſe times. could not comprehend the meaning of this, till I per-ived at laſt (to my no ſmall Aſtoniſhment) that all the leaſures of the four laſt years of the Queen, together ith the peace at Utrecht which have been uſually at-ibuted to the E—— of O——, D—— of O——, rds H—— and B——, and other great men; do here oft plainly appear, to have been wholly owing to Robert enkins, Amos Turner, George Pilcocks, Thomas White, t above all, to P. P.

The reader may be ſure I was very inquiſitive after is extraordinary writer, whoſe work I have here ab-acted. I took a journey into the Country on purpoſe; t could not find the leaſt trace of him: till by accident met an old Clergyman, who ſaid he could not be poſitive, t thought it might be one Paul Philips, who had been ad about twelve years. And upon enquiry, all he could rn of that perſon from the neighbourhood, was, That had been taken notice of for ſwallowing Loaches, and remembered by ſome people by a black and white C with one Ear, that conſtantly followed him.

In the Church-yard, I read his Epitaph, ſaid to written by himſelf.

O Reader, if that thou canſt read,
Look down upon this Stone;
Do all we can, Death is a man,
That never ſpareth none.

OF THE

ET LAUREATE.

November 19, 1729.

E time of the election of Poet Laureate beg now at hand, it may be proper to give )unt of the rites and ceremonies anciently uſed )lemnity, and only diſcontinued through the rid degeneracy of later times. Theſe we acted from an hiſtorian of undoubted cre-verend biſhop, the learned Paulus Jovius;
he ſame that were practiſed under the pon-Leo X. the great reſtorer of learning.
now ſee an age and a court, that for the en-ent of poetry rivals, if not exceeds, that of us Pope, we cannot but wiſh a reſtoration honours to poeſy; the rather, ſince there are )arallel circumſtances in the perſon who was )ured with the laurel, and in him, who (in )ility) is now to wear it.
tranſlate my author exactly as I find it in hapter of his Elogia Vir. Doct. He be-the character of the poet himſelf, who was the original and father of all Laureates, and called Camillo. He was a plain country-man of Apulia, (whether a ſhepherd or threſher, is not material. "This man (ſays Jovius) excited by the fame of the "great encouragement given to poets at court, and "the high honour in which they were held, came to "the city, bringing with him a ſtrange kind of lyre "in his hand, and at leaſt ſome twenty thouſand of "verſes. All the wits and critics of the court flocked "about him, delighted to ſee a clown, with a ruddy "hale complexion, and in his own long hair, ſo top "full of poetry; and at the firſt ſight of him all a "greed he was born to be Poet Laureate[a]. He had "a moſt hearty welcome in an iſland of the river "Tiber (an agreeable place, not unlike our Richmond) where he was firſt made to eat and drink "plentifully, and to repeat his verſes to every body. "Then they adorned him with a new and elegant "garland, compoſed of vine-leaves, laurel, and braſſica (a ſort of cabbage) ſo compoſed, ſays my author, emblematically, Ut tam ſales quam lepide ejus "temulentia, braſſicæ remedio cohibenda, notaretur. "He was then ſaluted by common conſent with the "title of archi-poeta, or arch-poet, in the ſtyle of thoſe "days, in ours, Poet Laureate. This honour the "poor man received with the moſt ſenſible demon-

a Apulus præpingui vultu alacer, et prolixe comatus, omnino dignus feſta laurea videretur.

ſtrations of joy, his eyes drunk with tears and gladneſs [b]. Next, the public acclamation was expreſſed in a canticle, which is tranſmitted to us, as follows:

Salve, braſſicea virens corona,
Et lauro, archipoeta, pampinoque!
Dignus principis auribus Leonis.

All hail, arch-poet, without peer!
Vine, bay, or cabbage, fit to wear,
And worthy of the prince's ear.

m hence he was conducted in pomp to the Cal of Rome, mounted on an elephant, thro' the uts of the populace, where the ceremony ended. The hiſtorian tells us further, "That at his introduction to Leo, he not only poured forth verſes, innumerable, like a torrent, but alſo ſung them ith open mouth. Nor was he only once introduced, or on ſtated days (like our Laureates) but ade a companion to his maſter, and entertained as ne of the inſtruments of his moſt elegant pleaſures. Vhen the prince was at table, the poet had his lace at the window. When the prince had [c] half aten his meat, he gave with his own hands the eſt to the poet. When the poet drank, it was [b] Manantibus præ gaudio oculis. [c] Semeſis opſoniis.

" out of the prince's own flaggon, inſomuch (ſay
" the hiſtorian) that thro' ſo great good eating an
" drinking he contracted a moſt terrible gout."
Sorry I am to relate what follows, but that I can not leave my reader's curioſity unſatisfied in the ca taſtrophe of this extraordinary man. To uſe my au thor's words, which are remarkable, mortuo Leon profligatiſque poetis, etc. " When Leo died, and poet
" were no more." (for I would not underſtan profligatis literally, as if poets then were profligati
this unhappy Laureate was forthwith reduced t return to his country, where, oppreſſed with o age and want, he miſerably periſhed in a comm hoſpital.

We ſee from this ſad concluſion (which may b of example to the poets of our time) that it wer happier to meet with no encouragement at all, t remain at the plough, or other lawful occupatio than to be elevated above their condition, and take out of the common means of life, without a ſur ſupport than the temporary, or at beſt, mortal favou of the great. It was doubtleſs for this conſider tion, that when the Royal Bounty was lately exten
ed to a rural genius, care was taken to ſettle it up him for life. And it hath been the practice of o
Princes, never to remove from the ſtation of Po
Laureate any man who hath once been choſen, th never ſo much greater Genius's might ariſe in h

time. A noble inſtance, how much the charity of our monarchs hath exceeded their love of fame.

To come now to the intent of this paper. We have here the whole ancient ceremonial of the Laureate. In the firſt place the crown is to be mixed with vine-leaves, as the vine is the plant of Bacchus, and full as eſſential to the honour, as the but of ſack to the ſalary.

Secondly, the braſſica muſt be made uſe of as a qualifier of the former. It ſeems the cabbage was antiently accounted a remedy for drunkenneſs; a power the French now aſcribe to the onion, and ſtyle a ſoup made of it, ſoupe d'Yvrogne. I would recommend a large mixture of the braſſica, if Mr. DENNIS be choſen; but if Mr. TIBBALD, it is not ſo neceſſary, unleſs the cabbage be ſuppoſed to ſignify the ſame thing with reſpect to poets as to taylors, viz. ſtealing. I ſhould judge it not amiſs to add another plant to this garland, to wit, ivy: Not only as it anciently belonged to poets in general; but as it is emblematical of the three virtues of a court poet in particular; it is creeping, dirty, and dangling.

In the next place, a canticle muſt be compoſed and ſung in laud and praiſe of the new poet. If Mr. CIBBER be laureated, it is my opinion no man can write this but himſelf: And no man, I am ſure can ſing it ſo affectingly. But what this canticle ſhould be, either in his or the other candidate's caſe, I ſhall not pretend to determine.

Thirdly, there ought to be a public ſhow, or entry of the poet: To ſettle the order or proceſſion of which, Mr. ANSTIS and Mr. DENNIS ought to have a conference. I apprehend here two difficulties; one, of procuring an elephant; the other of teaching the poet to ride him: Therefore I ſhould imagine the next animal in ſize or dignity would do beſt: either a mule or a large aſs; particularly if that noble one could be had, whoſe portraiture makes ſo great an ornament of the Dunciad, and which (unleſs I am miſinformed) is yet in the park of a nobleman near this city.:—Unleſs Mr. CIBBER be the man; who may, with great propriety and beauty, ride on a dragon, if he goes by land; or if he chooſe the water, upon one of his own ſwans from Cæſar in Egypt.

We have ſpoken ſufficiently of the ceremony; let us now ſpeak of the qualifications and privileges of the Laureate. Firſt, we ſee he muſt be able to make verſes extempore, and to pour forth innumerable, if required. In this I doubt Mr. TIBBALD. Secondly, he ought to ſing, and intrepidly, patulo ore: Here I confeſs the excellency of Mr. CIBBER. Thirdly, he ought to carry a lyre about with him: If a large one be thought too cumberſome, a ſmall one may be contrived to hang about the neck, like an order; and be very much a grace to the perſon. Fourthly, he ht to have a good ſtomach, to eat and drink what- his betters think fit; and therefore it is in this i office as in many others, no puny conſtitution diſcharge it. I do not think CIBBER or TIB- D here ſo happy: but rather a ſtanch, vigorous, on'd, and dry old gentleman, whom I have in my could alſo wiſh at this juncture, ſuch a perſon as uly jealous of the honour and dignity of poetry; oker, or trifler; but a bard in good earneſt; nay, amiſs if a critic, and the better if a little obſti-. For when we conſider what great privileges e been loſt from this office (as we ſee from the cited authentick record of Jovius) namely thoſe eeding from the prince's table, drinking out of his flaggon, becoming even his domeſtick and compa-; it requires a man warm and reſolute, to be to claim and obtain the reſtoring of theſe high ours. I have cauſe to fear, moſt of the candi- s would be liable, either through the influence iniſters, or for rewards or favours, to give up glorious rights of the Laureate: Yet I am not out hopes, there is one, from whom a ſerious and y aſſertion of theſe privileges may be expected; if there be ſuch a one, I muſt do him the juſ- to ſay, it is Mr. DENNIS the worthy preſident ur ſociety.

GUARDIANS.

No. 4. March 16, 1713.

THOUGH moſt things which are wrong in their own nature are at once confeſſed and abſolved in that ſingle word, the Cuſtom; yet there are ſome, which as they have a dangerous tendency, a thinking man will the leſs excuſe on that very account. Among theſe I cannot but reckon the common practice of Dedications which is of ſo much the worſe conſequence as 'tis generally uſed by people of politeneſs, and whom a learned education for the moſt part ought to have inſpired with nobler and juſter ſentiments. This proſtitution of Praiſe is not only a deceit upon the groſs of mankind, who take their notion of characters from the Learned; but alſo the better ſort muſt by this means loſe ſome part at leaſt of that deſire of Fame which is the incentive to generous actions, when they find it promiſcuouſly beſtowed on the meritorious and undeſerving. Nay the author himſelf, let him be ſuppoſed to have ever ſo true a value for the patron, can find no terms to expreſs it, but what have been already uſed, and rendered ſuſpected by flatterers. Even Truth itſelf in a Dedication is like an honeſt man in a diſguiſe or Vizor-Maſque, and will appear a Cheat by being dreſt ſo like one. Though the merit of the perſon is beyond diſpute, I ſee no reaſon, that becauſe one man is eminent, therefore another has a right to be impertinent, and throw praiſes in his face. 'Tis juſt the reverſe of the practice of the ancient Romans, when a perſon was advanced to triumph for his ſervices: they hired people to rail at him in that Circumſtance, to make him as humble as they could; and we have fellows to flatter him, and make him as proud as they can. Suppoſing the writer not to be mercenary, yet the great man is no more in reaſon obliged to thank him for his picture in a Dedication, than to thank the painter for that on a ſign-poſt; except it be a leſs injury to touch the moſt ſacred part of him, his character, than to make free with his countenance only. I ſhould think nothing juſtified me in this point, but the patron's permiſſion beforehand, that I ſhould draw him as like as I could; whereas moſt authors proceed in this affair juſt as a dawber I have heard of, who not being able to draw portraits after the life, was uſed to paint faces at random, and look out afterwards for people whom he might perſuade to be like them. To expreſs my notion of the thing in a word: to ſay more to a man than one thinks, with a proſpect of intereſt, is diſhoneſt; and without it, fooliſh. And whoever has had ſucceſs in ſuch an undertaking, muſt of neceſſity at once think himſelf in his heart a knave for having done it, and his patron a fool for having believed it.

I have ſometimes been entertained with conſidering Dedications in no very common light. By obſerving what qualities our writers think it will be moſt pleaſing to others to compliment them with, one may form ſome judgment which are moſt ſo to themſelves; and, in conſequence, what ſort of people they are. Without this view one can read very few Dedications, but will give us cauſe to wonder, either how ſuch things came to be ſaid at all, or how they were ſaid to ſuch perſons. I have known an Hero complimented upon the decent majeſty and ſtate he aſſumed after a victory; and a nobleman of a different character applauded for his condeſcenſion to inferiors. This would have ſeemed very ſtrange to me but that I happened to know the authors: He who made the firſt compliment was a lofty gentleman, whoſe air and gait diſcovered when he had publiſhed a new book; and the other tippled every night with the fellows who laboured at the preſs while his own writings were working off. 'Tis obſervable of the female poets and ladies dedicatory, that there (as elſewhere) they far exceed us in any ſtrain or rant. As beauty the thing that ſex are piqu'd upon, they ſpeak of generally in a more elevated ſtyle than is uſed by e men. They adore in the ſame manner as they ould be adored. So when the authoreſs of a faious modern romance begs a young Nobleman's ermiſſion to pay him her kneeling adorations, I am far om cenſuring the expreſſion, as ſome Critics would o, as deficient in grammar or ſenſe; but I reflect, iat adorations paid in that poſture are what a lady ight expect herſelf, and my wonder immediately eaſes. Theſe, when they flatter moſt, do but as they ould be done unto; for as none are ſo much conrned at being injured by calumnies, as they who re readieſt to caſt them upon their neighbours; ſo, is certain none are ſo guilty of flattery to others, as oſe who moſt ardently deſire it themſelves.

What led me into theſe thoughts, was a Dedicaon I happened upon, this morning. The reader uſt underſtand that I treat the leaſt inſtances or reiains of ingenuity with reſpect, in what places ſover found, or under whatever circumſtances of diſdvantage. From this love to letters I have been ſo appy in my ſearches after knowledge, that I have ound unvalued repoſitories of learning in the lining f bandboxes. I look upon theſe paſteboard edices, adorned with the fragments of the ingenious, ith the ſame veneration as antiquaries upon ruined uildings, whoſe walls preſerve divers inſcriptions and names, which are no where elſe to be foun world. This morning, when one of Lady I daughters was looking over ſome hoods and brought by her tirewoman, with great care a gence, I employed no leſs in examining which contained them; it was lined with ſcenes of a tragedy, written (as appeared by the title there extant) by one of the fair ſex.

was moſt legible was the Dedication; which,
ſon of the largeneſs of the characters, was l faced by thoſe Gothic ornaments of flouriſ foliage, wherewith the compilers of theſe ſtructures do often induſtriouſly obſcure the the learned. As much of it as I could read eaſe, I ſhall communicate to the reader, as
 "Though it is a kind of prophanatio
"proach your Grace with ſo poor an offer
"when I reflect how acceptable a ſacrifice
"fruits was to Heaven, in the earlieſt an
"ages of religion, that they were honour'd
"lemn feaſts, and conſecrated to altars by a "command; Upon that conſideration, a "gument of particular zeal, I dedicate ***
"poſſible to behold you without adoring;
"zled and aw'd by the glory that ſurroun
"men feel a ſacred power, that refines their
"and renders them pure as thoſe we ought "to the Deity. * The ſhrine is worthy t hat inhabits it. In your Grace we ſee what an was before ſhe fell, how nearly allied to purity and perfection of Angels. And we e and bleſs the glorious work!"

doubtedly theſe, and other periods of this moſt Dedication, could not but convince the Du- of what the eloquent authoreſs aſſures her at the that ſhe was her ſervant with moſt ardent devo-

I think this a pattern of a new ſort of ſtyle, not taken notice of by the Criticks, which is above ſublime, and may be called the celeſtial; that is, en the moſt ſacred praiſes appropriated to the ho- ar of the deity, are applied to a mortal of good ality. As I am naturally emulous, I cannot but deavour, in imitation of this Lady, to be the in- ntor, or, at leaſt, the firſt producer of a new kind f Dedication, very different from hers and moſt thers, ſince it has not a word but what the author eligiouſly thinks in it. It may ſerve for almoſt any ook either Proſe or Verſe, that has, is, or ſhall be ubliſhed; and might run in this manner.

The AUTHOR to Himſelf.

Moſt Honoured Sir,

THESE labours, upon many conſiderations, ſo properly belong to none as to you: firſt, that it was your moſt earneſt deſire alone that could prevail upon me to make them publick: then, as I am ſecure (from that conſtant indulgence you have ever ſhown to all which is mine) that no man will ſo readily take them into protection, or ſo zealouſly defend them. Moreover, there's none can ſo ſoon diſcover the beauties; and there are ſome parts, which 'tis poſſible few beſides yourſelf are capable of underſtanding. Sir, the honour, affection, and value I have for you are beyond expreſſion; as great, I am ſure, or greater, than any man elſe can bear you. As for any defects which others may pretend to diſcover in you, I do faithfully declare I was never able to perceive them; and doubt not but thoſe perſons are actuated purely by a ſpirit of malice or envy, the inſeparable attendants on ſhining merit and parts, ſuch as I have always eſteemed yours to be. It may perhaps be looked upon as a kind of violence to modeſty, to ſay this to you in publick; but you may believe me, 'tis no more than I have a thouſand times thought of you in private. Might I follow the im-

of my ſoul, there is no ſubject I could launch with more pleaſure than your panegyrick: But ſomething is due to modeſty, let me conclude ing you, that there's nothing I ſo much deſire now you more thoroughly than I have yet the neſs of doing. I may then hope to be capable you ſome real ſervice; but, 'till then, can only you, that I ſhall continue to be, as I am more ny man alive,

Deareſt SIR,

Your Affectionate Friend, and

The greateſt of your Admirers.

N° 11. Tueſday, March 24.

Huc propiùs me,
Dum doceo inſanire omnes, vos ordine adite.
Hor. Sat. iii. lib. ii. v. 80.

To the GUARDIAN.

SIR,

" AS you profeſs to encourage all thoſe who
" any way contribute to the Publick Good,
" flatter myſelf I may claim your Countenance and " Protection. I am by Profeſſion a Mad Doctor
" but of a peculiar Kind, not of thoſe whoſe Aim " is to remove Phrenzies, but one who make it my
" buſineſs to confer an agreeable Madneſs on my " Fellow-Creatures for their mutual Delight and " Benefit. Since it is agreed by the Philoſophers " that Happineſs and Miſery conſiſt chiefly in the " Imagination, nothing is more neceſſary to Man
" kind in general than this pleaſing Delirium, which " renders every one ſatisfied with himſelf, and per
" ſuades him that all others are equally ſo.

" I have for ſeveral Years, both at home and abroad, made this Science my particular Study, which I may venture to ſay I have improved in almoſt all the Courts of Europe; and have reduced it into ſo ſafe and eaſy a Method, as to practiſe it on both Sexes, of what Diſpoſition Age, or Quality ſoever, with Succeſs. What enables me to perform this great Work, is the Uſe of my Obſequium Catholicon, or the Grand Elixir, to ſupport the Spirits of human Nature. This Remedy is of the moſt grateful Flavour in the World, and agrees with all Taſtes whatever. 'Tis delicate to the Senſes, delightful in the Operation, may be taken at all Hours without Confinement, and is as properly given at a Ball or Play-houſe, as in a private Chamber. It reſtores and vivifies the moſt dejected Minds, corrects and extracts all that is painful in the Knowledge of a Man's ſelf. One Doſe of it will inſtantly diſperſe itſelf through the whole Animal Syſtem, diſſipate the firſt Motions of Diſtruſt ſo as never to return, and ſo exhilarate the Brain and rarify the Gloom of Reflection, as to give the Patients a new flow of Spirits, a Vivacity of Behaviour, and a pleaſing Dependence upon their own Capacities.

" Let a Perſon be never ſo far gone, I adviſe him not to deſpair; even though he has been troubled many Years with reſtleſs Reflections,

" which by long Neglects have hardened into
" tled Conſideration. Thoſe that have been ſ
" with Satire may here find a certain Anti " which infallibly diſperſes all the Remains of " ſon that has been left in the Underſtanding by " Cures. It fortifies the Heart againſt the Ran
" of Pamphlets, the Inveteracy of Epigrams,
" the Mortification of Lampoons; as has been " experienced by ſeveral Perſons of both ſexes,
" ing the Seaſons of Tunbridge, and the Bath.

" I could, as further Inſtances of my Suc
" produce Certificates and Teſtimonials from " Favourites and Ghoſtly Fathers of the moſt
" nent Princes of Europe; but ſhall content m
" with the Mention of a few Cures, which I h
" performed by this my Grand Univerſal Reſtora
" during the Practice of one Month only ſince I c
" to this City.

Cures in the Month of February, 1713.

" George Spondee, Eſq; Poet, and Inmate
" the Pariſh of St. Paul's Covent-Garden, fell
" to violent Fits of the Spleen upon a thin Th
" Night. He had been frighted into a Vertigo
" the Sound of Cat-calls on the Firſt Day;

requent Hiſſings on the Second made him le to endure the bare Pronunciation of the er S. I ſearched into the Cauſes of his Diſ- er; and by the Preſcription of a Doſe of Obſequium, prepared ſecundum Artem, recover- im to his natural State of Madneſs. I caſt proper Intervals the Words, Ill taſte of own, Envy of Criticks, bad Performance of the s, and the like. He is ſo perfectly cured, he has promiſed to bring another Play upon tage next Winter.

Lady of profeſſed Virtue of the Pariſh of ames's, Weſtminſter, who hath deſired her e may be concealed, having taken Offence Phraſe of double Meaning in Converſation, ſcovered by any other in the Company, ſud- fell into a cold Fit of Modeſty. Upon a Application of Praiſe of her Virtue, I threw ady into an agreeable waking Dream, ſet- the Fermentation of her Blood into a warm ity ſo as to make her look with Patience on ery Gentleman that offended.

ilaria, of the Pariſh of St. Giles's in the s, a Coquette of long Practice, was by the imand of an old Maiden reduced to look e in Company, and deny herſelf the Play e Fan. In ſhort, ſhe was brought to ſuch ncholy circumſtances, that ſhe would ſome-

" times unawares fall into Devotion at Churc
" adviſed her to take a few innocent Freedom
" occaſional Kiſſes, preſcribed her the Exerciſe
" Eyes, and immediately raiſed her to her f
" State of Life. She on a ſudden recover
" Dimples, furled her Fan, threw round her
" ces, and for theſe two Sundays laſt paſt h
" once been ſeen in an attentive Poſture. Th
" Church-Wardens are ready to atteſt upon C

" Andrew Terror, of the Middle-Temple,
" hock, was almoſt induced by an aged Benc
" the ſame Houſe, to leave off bright Converſ
" and pore over Coke upon Littleton. He was
" that his Hat began to flap, and he was ſee
" Day in the laſt term at Weſtminſter-Hall.
" Patient had quite loſt his Spirit of Contradi
" I, by the Diſtillation of a few of my viv
" Drops in his Ear, drew him from his Leth
" and reſtored him to his uſual vivacious M
" derſtanding. He is at preſent very eaſy i " Condition.

" I will not dwell upon the Recital of the
" merable Cures I have performed within Tw
" Days laſt paſt; but rather proceed to exho
" Perſons of whatever Age, Complexion, or " lity, to take as ſoon as poſſible of this my
" lectual Oil; which applied at the Ear ſeiz
" the ſenſes with a moſt agreeable Tranſport,

:overs its Effects, not only to the Satisfaction the Patient, but all who converſe with, attend on, or any way relate to him or her that receives : kindly infection. It is often adminiſtred by amber-Maids, Valets, or any the moſt igno- t Domeſtic; it being one peculiar Excel- ce of this my Oil, that 'tis moſt prevalent, the re unſkilful the Perſon is, or appears, who ap- es it. It is abſolutely neceſſary for Ladies to e a Doſe of it juſt before they take Coach to a viſiting.

But I offend the publick, as Horace ſaid, when reſpaſs on any of your Time. Give me leave n, Mr. Ironſide, to make you a preſent of a ichm or two of my Oil; though I have cauſe fear my preſcriptions will not have the effect on you I could wiſh. Therefore I do not en- avour to bribe you in my Favour by the Pre- t of my Oil, but wholly depend upon your blick Spirit and Generoſity; which I hope, l recommend to the World the uſeful endea- urs of, ur moſt Obedient, moſt Faithful, moſt Devoted, moſt Humble Servant and Admirer,

S I R,

GNATHO.

Beware of Counterfeits, for ſuch are abroad.

" N. B. I teach the Arcana of my Art at rea
" able rates to Gentlemen of the Univerſities,
" deſire to be qualified for writing Dedications;
" to young Lovers and Fortune-hunters, to be " at the day of Marriage. I inſtruct perſon
" bright Capacities to flatter others, and thoſe o
" meaneſt to flatter themſelves.

" I was the firſt Inventor of Pocket Look " Glaſſes.

N° 40. Monday, April 27, 1713.

Being a Continuation of ſome former Papers on the ject of PASTORALS.

Compulerantque greges Corydon et Thyrſis in un
Ex illo Corydon, Corydon eſt tempore nobis.

---

1. I Deſigned to have troubled the reader wit further diſcourſes of Paſtoral; but bein formed that I am taxed of partiality in not men ing an Author whoſe Eclogues are publiſhed i ſame volume with Mr. Philips's, I ſhall employ paper in Obſervations upon him, written in the Spirit of Criticiſm, and without any apprehe of offending that Gentleman, whoſe character that he takes the greateſt care of his works b hey are publiſhed, and has the leaſt concern for hem afterwards.

2. I have laid it down as the firſt rule of Paſtoral, hat its idea ſhould be taken from the manners of he Golden Age, and the Moral formed upon the epreſentation of Innocence; 'tis therefore plain that ny deviations from that deſign degrade a Poem rom being truly paſtoral. In this view it will ap-ear, that Virgil can only have two of his Eclogues llowed to be ſuch: his firſt and ninth muſt be re-ected, becauſe they deſcribe the ravages of armies, nd oppreſſions of the innocent; Corydon's crimi-al paſſion for Alexis throws out the ſecond; the alumny and railing in the third are not proper to hat ſtate of concord; the eighth repreſents unlaw-ful ways of procuring love by inchantments, and in-troduces a ſhepherd whom an inviting precipice tempts to ſelf-murder: As to the fourth, ſixth, and tenth, they are given up by [b] Heinſius, Salmaſius, Rapin, and the criticks in general. They likewiſe obſerve but eleven of all the Idyllia of Theocritus are to be admitted as paſtorals: and even out of that number the greater part will be excluded for one or other of the reaſons above-mentioned. So that when I remarked in a former paper, that Virgil's eclogues, taken all together, are rather ſelect Poems than Paſtorals; I might have ſaid the ſame thing with no

[b] See Rapin de Carm. Par. iii.

leſs truth of Theocritus. The reaſon of thi to be yet unobſerved by the criticks, viz. T ver meant them all for paſtorals.

Now it is plain Philips hath done this, and particular excelled both Theocritus and Virg

3. As ſimplicity is the diſtinguiſhing cha tic of Paſtoral, Virgil hath been thought g too courtly a ſtyle; his language is perfect and he often forgets he is among peaſants.
frequently wondered, that ſince he was ſo ſant in the writings of Ennius, he had not i the ruſticity of the Doric as well by the hel old obſolete Roman language, as Philips hath antiquated Engliſh: For example, might have ſaid quoi inſtead of cui; quoijum for cuju for vult, etc. as well as our modern hath welk
alas, whileome for of ola, make mock for deri witleſs younglings for ſimple lambs, etc. by whicl
he had attained as much of the air of Th
as Philips hath of Spencer.

4. Mr. Pope hath fallen into the ſame err Virgil. His clowns do not converſe in all t plicity proper to the country: His names rowed from Theocritus and Virgil, which proper to the ſcene of his paſtorals. He int Daphnis, Alexis, and Thyrſis on Britiſh pl
Virgil had done before him on the M
Whereas Philips, who hath the ſtricteſt re

/

priety, makes choice of names peculiar to the intry, and more agreeable to a reader of delica- ; ſuch as Hobbinol, Lobbin, Cuddy and Colin out.

5. So eaſy as paſtoral writing may ſeem (in the plicity we have deſcribed it) yet it requires great ding both of the ancients and moderns, to be a ſter of it. Philips hath given us manifeſt proofs his knowlege of books. It muſt be confeſſed his petitor hath imitated ſome ſingle thoughts of the cients well enough (if we conſider he had not the opineſs of an Univerſity education) but he hath perſed them here and there, without that order d method which Mr. Philips obſerves, whoſe whole rd paſtoral is an inſtance how well he hath ſtu- d the fifth of Virgil, and how judiciouſly reduced rgil's thoughts to the ſtandard of Paſtoral; as his ntention of Colin Clout and the Nightingale ſhows h what exactneſs he hath imitated every line in ada.

6. When I remarked it as a principal fault, to in- duce fruits and flowers of a foreign growth, in de- iptions where the ſcene lies in our own country, I l not deſign that obſervation ſhould extend alſo to imals, or the ſenſitive life; for Mr. Philips hath h great judgment deſcribed Wolves in England his firſt paſtoral. Nor would I have a poet ſlav- ly confine himſelf (as Mr. Pope hath done) to one particular Seaſon of the year, one certain Time of the day, and one unbroken Scene in each eclogue. 'Tis plain Spencer neglected this pedantry, who in his paſtoral of November mentions the mournful Song of the Nightingale,

Sad Philomel her ſong in tears doth ſteep.

And Mr. Philips, by a poetical creation, hath raiſed up finer beds of flowers than the moſt induſtrious gardener; his roſes, endives, lilies, king-cups, and daffidils, blow all in the ſame ſeaſon.

7. But the better to diſcover the merits of our two contemporary Paſtoral writers, I ſhall endeavour to draw a parallel of them, by ſetting ſeveral of their particular thoughts in the ſame light, whereby it will be obvious how much Philips hath the advantage.

With what ſimplicity he introduces two ſhepherds ſinging alternately?

Hobb. Come, Roſalind, O come, for without thee
What pleaſure can the country have for me?
Come, Roſalind, O come; my brinded kine,
My ſnowy ſheep, my farm and all, is thine.

Lanq. Come, Roſalind, O come; here ſhady bowers,
Here are cool fountains, and here ſpringing flowers,
Come, Roſalind; here ever let us ſtay,
And ſweetly waſte our live-long time away.

ur other paſtoral writer, in expreſſing the ſame ht, deviates into downright Poetry:

ɔh. In Spring the fields, in Autumn hills I love,
At morn the plains, at noon the ſhady grove,
But Delia always; forc'd from Delia's ſight,
Nor plains at morn, nor groves at noon delight.

h. Sylvia's like Autumn ripe, yet mild as May,
More bright than noon, yet freſh as early day;
Ev'n ſpring diſpleaſes, when ſhe ſhines not here,
But bleſt with her, 'tis Spring throughout the year.

ı the firſt of theſe authors, two ſhepherds thus cently deſcribe the behaviour of their miſ- ɛs:

ɔb. As Marian bath'd, by chance I paſſed by,
She bluſh'd, and at me caſt a ſide-long eye:
Then ſwift beneath the cryſtal wave ſhe try'd
Her beauteous form, but all in vain, to hide.

ɟ. As I to cool me bath'd one ſultry day,
Fond Lydia lurking in the ſedges lay.
The wanton laugh'd, and ſeem'd in haſte to fly;
Yet often ſtopp'd, and often turn'd her eye.

he other modern (who it muſt be confeſſed hath ack of verſifying) hath it as follows:

Streph. Me gentle Delia beckons from the plain,
Then, hid in ſhades, eludes her eager ſwain
But feigns a Laugh, to ſee me ſearch aroun
And by that Laugh the willing fair is foun

Daph. The ſprightly Sylvia trips along the green,
She runs, but hopes ſhe does not run unſeen,
While a kind glance at her purſuer flies,
How much at variance are her feet and y

There is nothing the writers of this kind of po are fonder of than deſcriptions of paſtoral Preſe Philips ſays thus of a Sheep-hook.

Of ſeaſon'd elm; where ſtuds of braſs appear,
To ſpeak the giver's name, the month and year;
The hook of poliſh'd ſteel, the handle turn'd,
And richly by the graver's ſkill adorn'd.

The other of a bowl emboſſed with figures:

where wanton ivy twines,
And ſwelling cluſters bend the curling vines;
Four figures riſing from the work appear,
The various ſeaſons of the rolling year;
And what is that which binds the radiant ſky,
Where twelve bright ſigns in beauteous order lie?

The ſimplicity of the ſwain in this place, who f gets the name of the Zodiack, is no ill imitation

Virgil: but how much more plainly and unaffectedly would Philips have dreſſed this thought in his Doric?

And what that hight, which girds the welkin ſheen,
Where twelve gay ſigns in meet array are ſeen?

If the reader would indulge his curioſity any further in the compariſon of particulars, he may read the firſt paſtoral of Philips with the ſecond of his contemporary, and the fourth and ſixth of the former with the fourth and firſt of the latter; where ſeveral parallel places will occur to every one.

Having now ſhown ſome parts, in which theſe two writers may be compared, it is a juſtice I owe to Mr. Philips to diſcover thoſe in which no man can compare with him. Firſt, That beautiful ruſticity, of which I ſhall only produce two inſtances out of a hundred not yet quoted:

O woful day! O day of woe! quoth he,
And woful I, who live the day to ſee!

The ſimplicity of diction, the melancholy flowing of the numbers, the ſolemnity of the ſound, and the eaſy turn of the words in this Dirge (to make uſe of our author's expreſſion) are extremely ele-

In another of his paſtorals, a ſhepherd utter Dirge not much inferior to the former, in the lowing lines:

Ah me the while! ah me! the luckleſs day,
Ah luckleſs lad! the rather might I ſay;
Ah ſilly I! more ſilly than my ſheep,
Which on the ſlow'ry plains I once did keep.

How he ſtill charms the ear with theſe artful r titions of the epithets; and how ſignificant is laſt verſe! I defy the moſt common reader to peat them, without feeling ſome motions of c paſſion.

In the next place I ſhall rank his Proverbs which I formerly obſerved he excels: For ex ple:

A rolling ſtone is ever bare of moſs;
And, to their coſt, green years old proverbs croſs.

—He that late lies down, as late will riſe.
And ſluggard-like, till noon-day ſnoaring lies.

—Againſt Ill-luck all cunning foreſight fails;
Whether we ſleep or wake, it naught avails.

—Nor fear, from upright ſentence, wrong.

Laſtly, his elegant Dialect, which alone n prove him the eldeſt born of Spencer, and our true Arcadian. I ſhould think it proper for the ſeveral writers of Paſtoral, to confine themſelves to their ſeveral Counties. Spencer ſeems to have been of this opinion: for he hath laid the ſcene of one of his Paſtorals in Wales; where with all the ſimplicity natural to that part of our iſland, one ſhepherd bids the other good morrow, in an unuſual and elegant manner:

Diggon Davy, I bid hur God-day:
Or Diggon hur is, or I miſ-ſay.

Diggon anſwers:

Hur was hur, while it was day-light;
But now hur is a moſt wretched wight, etc.

But the moſt beautiful example of this kind that I ever met with, is in a very valuable piece which I chanced to find among ſome old manuſcripts, entituled, A Paſtoral Ballad: which I think, for its nature and ſimplicity, may (notwithſtanding the modeſty of the title) be allowed a perfect Paſtoral. It is compoſed in the Somerſetſhire dialect, and the names ſuch as are proper to the country people. It may be obſerved as a further beauty of this Paſtoral, the words Nymph, Dryad, Naiad, Fawn, Cupid, or Satyr, are not once mentioned throughout the whole. I ſhall make no apology for inſerting ſome few lines of this excellent piece. Cicily breaks thus into the ſubject, as ſhe is going a milking:

Cicily. Rager, ga vetch tha[a] Kee, or elſe tha Zun
Will quite be go, bevore c'have half a don.

Roger. Thou ſhouldſt not ax ma tweece, but I've a bet
To dreve our bull to bull tha Parſon's Kee.

It is to be obſerved, that this whole dialogue is formed upon the paſſion of Jealouſy; and his mentioning the Parſon's Kine naturally revives the jealouſy of the ſhepherdeſs Cicily, which ſhe expreſſes as follows:

Cicily. Ah Rager, Rager, ches was zore avraid,
When in yon Vield you kiſs'd the Parſon's maid:
Is this the love that once to me you zed,
When from the Wake thou brought'ſt me gingerbread?

Roger. Cicily, thou charg'ſt me valſe,——I'll zwear to thee,
Tha Parſon's maid is ſtill a maid for me.

In which anſwer of his, are expreſſed at once that Spirit of Religion, and that Innocence of the Golden age, ſo neceſſary to be obſerved by all writers of Paſtoral.

[a] That is, the Kine or Cows.

At the concluſion of this piece, the author reconciles the Lovers, and ends the Eclogue the moſt ſimply in the world:

So Rager parted vor to vetch tha Kee,
And vor her bucket in went Cicily.

I am loth to ſhow my fondneſs for antiquity ſo far as to prefer this ancient Britiſh author to our preſent Engliſh Writers of Paſtoral; but I cannot avoid making this obvious remark, that Philips had hit into the ſame road with this old Weſt Country Bard of ours.

After all that hath been ſaid, I hope none can think it any injuſtice to Mr. Pope that I forbore to mention him as a Paſtoral writer; ſince, upon the whole, he is of the ſame claſs with Moſchus and Bion, whom we have excluded that rank; and of whoſe Eclogues, as well as ſome of Virgil's, it may be ſaid, that (according to the deſcription we have given of this ſort of poetry) they are by no means Paſtorals, but ſomething better.

N°. 61. May 21, 1713.

Primoque a caede ferarum Incaluiſſe putem maculatum ſanguine ferrum. OVID.

I Cannot think it extravagant to imagine, that mankind are no leſs, in proportion, accountable for the ill uſe of their dominion over creatures of the lower rank of beings, than for the exerciſe of tyranny over their own Species. The more entirely the inferior creation is ſubmitted to our power, the more anſwerable we ſhould ſeem for our miſmanagement of it; and the rather, as the very condition of nature renders theſe creatures incapable of receiving any recompence in another life for their ill treatment in this.

'Tis obſervable of thoſe noxious animals, which have qualities moſt powerful to injure us, that they naturally avoid mankind, and never hurt us unleſs provoked, or neceſſitated by hunger. Man, on the other hand, ſeeks out and purſues even the moſt inoffenſive animals, on purpoſe to perſecute and deſtroy them.

Montaigne thinks it ſome reflection upon human nature itſelf, that few people take delight in ing beaſts careſs or play together, but almoſt every ie is pleaſed to ſee them lacerate and worry one anher. I am ſorry this temper is become almoſt a ſtinguiſhing character of our own nation, from the ɔſervation which is made by foreigners of our beved Paſtimes, Bear-baiting, Cock fighting, and the ce. We ſhould find it hard to vindicate the deoying of any thing that has life, meerly out of wannneſs; yet in this principle our children are bred ɔ, and one of the firſt pleaſures we allow them, is e licence of inflicting pain upon poor animals: alɔſt as ſoon as we are ſenſible what life is ourſelves, e make it our ſport to take it from other creatures. cannot but believe a very good uſe might be made the fancy which children have for birds and inɛts. Mr. Locke takes notice of a mother who peritted them to her children, but rewarded or puniſh-l them as they treated them well or ill. This was ɔ other than entering them betimes into a daily exciſe of humanity, and improving their very diverɔn to a virtue.

I fancy too ſome advantage might be taken of the ɔmmon notion, that 'tis ominous or unlucky, to deroy ſome ſorts of birds, as Swallows and Martins. his opinion might poſſibly ariſe from the confidence ieſe birds ſeem to put in us by building under our ɔofs, ſo that it is a kind of violation of the laws of ɔſpitality to murder them. As for Robin-red-breaſts in particular, 'tis not improbable they owe their ſecurity to the old ballad of The Children in the Wood. However it be, I don't know, I ſay, why this prejudice, well improved and carried as far as it would go, might not be made to conduce to the preſervation of many innocent creatures, which are now expoſed to all the wantonneſs of an ignorant barbarity.

There are other animals that have the misfortune, for no manner of reaſon, to be treated as common enemies where ever found. The conceit that a Cat has nine lives has coſt at leaſt nine lives in ten of the whole race of them: ſcarce a boy in the ſtreets but has in this point outdone Hercules himſelf, who was famous for killing a monſter that had but three lives. Whether the unaccountable animoſity againſt this uſeful domeſtick may be any cauſe of the general perſecution of Owls (who are a ſort of feather'd cats) or whether it be only an unreaſonable pique the moderns have taken to a ſerious countenance, I ſhall not determine. Tho' I am inclined to believe the former; ſince I obſerve the ſole reaſon alledged for the deſtruction of Frogs is becauſe they are like Toads. Yet amidſt all the misfortunes of theſe unfriended creatures, 'tis ſome happineſs that we have not yet taken a fancy to eat them: for ſhould our countrymen refine upon the French never ſo little, 'tis not to be conceived to what unheardtorments, owls, cats, and frogs may be yet re-ved.

When we grow up to men, we have another ſucſion of Sanguinary ſports; in particular hunting.
are not attack a diverſion which has ſuch authoand cuſtom to ſupport it; but muſt have leave be of opinion, that the agitation of that exerciſe, h the example and number of the chaſers, not a e contribute to reſiſt thoſe checks, which comſion would naturally ſuggeſt in behalf of the ani-l purſued. Nor ſhall I ſay with Monſieur Fleuthat this ſport is a remain of the Gothic barbaribut I muſt animadvert upon a certain cuſtom yet ıſe with us, and barbarous enough to be derived n the Goths, or even the Scythians: I mean that age compliment our huntſmen paſs upon Ladies quality, who are preſent at the death of a Stag, en they put the knife in their hands to cut the ıat of a helpleſs, trembling and weeping crea-
e.

Queſtuque cruentus,
Atque Imploranti ſimilis.——

ut if our ſports are deſtructive, our gluttony is e ſo, and in a more inhuman manner. Lobſters ted alive, Pigs whipp'd to death, Fowls ſewed are teſtimonies of our outragious luxury. Thoſe who (as Seneca expreſſes it) divide their lives betwixt an anxious conſcience, and a nauſeated ſtomach, have a juſt reward of their gluttony in the diſeaſes it brings with it: for human ſavages, like other wild beaſts, find ſnares and poiſon in the proviſions of life, and are allured by their appetite to their deſtruction. I know nothing more ſhocking, or horrid, than the proſpect of one of their kitchens covered with blood, and filled with the cries of the creatures expiring in tortures. It gives one an image of a Giant's den in a romance beſtrew'd with the ſcattered heads and mangled limbs of thoſe who were ſlain by his cruelty.

The excellent Plutarch (who has more ſtrokes of good nature in his writings than I remember in any author) cites a ſaying of Cato to this effect: "That "'tis no eaſy taſk to preach to the belly which has "no ears. Yet if (ſays he) we are aſhamed to be ſo "out of faſhion as not to offend, let us, at leaſt, of "fend with ſome diſcretion and meaſure. If we kill "an animal for our proviſion, let us do it with the "meltings of compaſſion, and without tormenting it. "Let us conſider, that 'tis in its own nature cruelty "to put a living creature to death; we at leaſt de "ſtroy a ſoul that has ſenſe and perception." In the life of Cato the Cenſor, he takes occaſion from the ſevere diſpoſition of that man to diſcourſe in the manner: "It ought to be eſteemed a happineſs to mankind, that our humanity has a wider ſphere to exert itſelf in, than bare juſtice. It is no more than the obligation of our very birth to practiſe equity to our own kind; but humanity may be extended thro' the whole order of creatures, even to the meaneſt: ſuch actions of charity are the overflowings of a mild good nature on all below us. It is certainly the part of a well-natured man to take care of his horſes and dogs, not only in expectation of their labour while they are foals and whelps, but even when their old age has made them incapable of ſervice."

Hiſtory tells us of a wiſe and polite nation, that ected a perſon of the firſt quality, who ſtood for a liciary office, only becauſe he had been obſerved his youth to take pleaſure in tearing and murder- of birds. And of another, that expelled a man of the ſenate for daſhing a bird againſt the ound which had taken ſhelter in his boſom. Every e knows how remarkable the Turks are for their manity in this kind. I remember an Arabian au- r, who has written a treatiſe to ſhew, how far a n, ſuppoſed to have ſubſiſted in a deſert iſland, hout any inſtruction, or ſo much as the ſight of other man, may, by the pure light of nature, at- n the knowledge of philoſophy and virtue. One the firſt things he makes him obſerve is, that uni- ſal benevolence of nature in the protection and preſervation of its creatures. In imitation of which, the firſt act of virtue he thinks his ſelf-taught philoſopher would of courſe fall into, is, to relieve and aſſiſt all the animals about him, in their wants and diſtreſſes.

Ovid has ſome very tender and pathetick lines applicable to this occaſion:

Quid meruiſtis, oves, placidum pecus, inque tegendos
Natum homines, pleno quæ fertis in ubere nectar?
Mollia quæ nobis veſtras velamina lanas
Præbetis; vitaque magis quam morte juvatis.
Quid meruere boves, animal ſine fraude doliſque,
Innocuum, ſimplex, natum tolerare labores?
Immemor eſt demum, nec frugum munere dignus,
Qui potuit, curvi dempto modo pondere aratri,
Ruricolam mactare ſuum——.
Quam male conſuevit, quam ſe parat ille cruori
Impius humano, vituli qui guttura cultro
Rumpit, et immotas præbet mugitibus aures!
Aut qui vagitus ſimiles puerilibus hœdum
Edentem jugulare poteſt!——

Perhaps that voice or cry ſo nearly reſembling the human, with which providence has endued ſo many different animals, might purpoſely be given them to move our pity, and prevent thoſe cruelties we are too apt to inflict on our fellow creatures.

There is a paſſage in the book of Jonas, when God declares his unwillingneſs to deſtroy Nineveh, where, methinks, that compaſſion of the Creator, which extends to the meaneſt rank of his creatures, is expreſſed with wonderful tenderneſs—— "Should "I not ſpare Nineveh the great city, wherein are "more than ſix thouſand perſons——And alſo much "cattel?" And we have in Deuteronomy a precept of great good nature of this ſort, with a bleſſing in form annexed to it in thoſe words: "If thou ſhalt "find a bird's neſt in the way, thou ſhalt not take "the dam with the young: But thou ſhalt in any "wiſe let the dam go, that it may be well with thee, "and that thou may'ſt prolong thy days."

To conclude, there is certainly a degree of gratitude owing to thoſe animals that ſerve us; as for ſuch as are mortal or noxious, we have a right to deſtroy them; and for thoſe that are neither of advantage or prejudice to us, the common enjoyment of life is what I cannot think we ought to deprive them of.

This whole matter, with regard to each of theſe conſiderations, is ſet in a very agreeable light in one of the Perſian fables of Pilpay, with which I ſhall end this paper.

A traveller paſſing through a thicket, and ſeeing a few ſparks of a fire, which ſome paſſengers had kindled as they went that way before, made up to it.

On a ſudden the ſparks caught hold of a buſh, in the midſt of which lay an adder, and ſet it in flames. The adder intreated the traveller's aſſiſtance, who tying a bag to the end of his ſtaff, reached it, and drew him out: he then bid him go where he pleaſed, but never more be hurtful to men, ſince he owed his life to a man's compaſſion. The adder, however, prepared to ſting him; and when he expoſtulated how unjuſt it was to retaliate good with evil, I ſhall do no more (ſaid the adder) than what you men practiſe every day, whoſe cuſtom it is to requite benefits with ingratitude. If you can deny this truth, let us refer it to the firſt we meet. The man conſented, and ſeeing a Tree, put the queſtion to it, in what manner a good turn was to be recompenſed? If you mean according to the uſage of men (reply'd the Tree) by its contrary. I have been ſtanding here theſe hundred years to protect them from the ſcorching ſun, and in requital they have cut down my branches, and are going to ſaw my body into planks. Upon this the adder inſulting the man, he appealed to a ſecond evidence, which was granted, and immediately they met a Cow. The ſame demand was made, and much the ſame anſwer given, that among men it was certainly ſo: I know it, ſaid the Cow, by woful experience; for I have ſerved a man this long time with milk, butter and cheeſe, and brought him beſides a Calf every year: but now I am old, he turns me into this paſture, with deſign to ſell me to a butcher, who will ſhortly make an end of me. The traveller upon this ſtood confounded, but deſired of courteſy one trial more, to be finally judged by the next beaſt they ſhould meet. This happened to be the Fox, who upon hearing the ſtory in all its circumſtances, could not be perſuaded it was poſſible for the adder to get into ſo narrow a bag. The adder to convince him went in again; the Fox told the man he had now his enemy in his power, and with that he faſtened the bag, and cruſhed him to pieces.

N°. 91. June 25, 1713.

ineſt ſua gratia parvis. VIRG.

To NESTOR IRONSIDE, Eſq;

SIR,

"I Remember a ſaying of yours concerning perſons in low circumſtances of ſtature, that their "littleneſs would hardly be taken notice of, if they "did not manifeſt a conſciouſneſs of it themſelves

" in all their behaviour. Indeed the obſer
" that no man is ridiculous for being what
" but only for the affectation of being ſom
" more, is equally true in regard to the min
" the body.

" I queſtion not but it will be pleaſing to
" hear, that a ſett of us have formed a ſociet
" are ſworn to dare to be ſhort, and boldly b
" the dignity of littleneſs under the noſes o
" enormous engroſſers of manhood, thoſe hyp
" cal monſters of the Species, the tall fello
" overlook us.

" The day of our inſtitution was the te
" December, being the ſhorteſt of the ye
" which we are to hold an annual Feaſt over
" of Shrimps.

" The place we have choſen for this meetir
" the little Piazza, not without an eye to the " bourhood of Mr. Powel's Opera, for the pe
" ers of which, we have, as becomes us, a br
" affection.

" At our firſt reſort hither, an old woman b
" her ſon to the Club Room, deſiring he mi
" educated in this School, becauſe ſhe ſaw he " finer Boys than ordinary. However, this a " no way diſcouraged our deſigns. We bega
" ſending invitations to thoſe of a ſtature not e
" ing five foot, to repair to our aſſembly; I reater part returned excuſes, or pretended they ere not qualified.

One ſaid, he was indeed but five foot at preſent, ut repreſented that he ſhould ſoon exceed that roportion, his perriwig-maker and ſhoe-maker aving lately promiſed him three inches more be-ixt them.

Another alledged, he was ſo unfortunate as to ave one leg ſhorter than the other, and whoever ad determined his ſtature to five foot, had taken im at a diſadvantage; for when he was mounted 1 the other leg, he was at leaſt five foot two inches rd a half.

There are ſome who queſtioned the exactneſs our meaſures, and others inſtead of complying, turned us informations of people yet ſhorter than emſelves. In a word, almoſt every one recom-ended ſome neighbour or acquaintance, whom e was willing we ſhould look upon to be leſs than :. We were not a little aſhamed that thoſe who e paſt the years of growth, and whoſe beards onounce them men, ſhould be guilty of as many ifair tricks in this point, as the moſt aſpiring ildren when they are meaſured.

We therefore proceeded to fit up the Club-oom, and provide conveniences for our ac-mmodation. In the firſt place we cauſed a tal removal of all the chairs, ſtools, and tables,

" which had ſerved the groſs of mankind for many " years.

" The diſadvantages we had undergone while we " made uſe of theſe, were unſpeakable. The Preſi" dent's whole body was ſunk in the elbow-chair,
" and when his arms were ſpread over it, he ap" peared (to the great leſſening of his dignity) like a " child in a go-cart: It was alſo ſo wide in the ſeat,
" as to give a wag occaſion of ſaying, that, notwith-
" ſtanding the Preſident ſat in it, there was a Sede
" Vacante.

" The table was ſo high, that one who came by " chance to the door, ſeeing our chins juſt above the " pewter diſhes, took us for a circle of men that ſat
" ready to be ſhaved, and ſent in half a dozen Bar" bers.

" Another time, one of the Club ſpoke in a ludi" crous manner of the Preſident, imagining he had " been abſent, when he was only eclipſed by a flaſk
" of Florence, which ſtood on the table in a parallel
" line before his face.

" We therefore new furniſhed the room in all
" reſpects proportionably to us; and had the door
" made lower, ſo as to admit no man of above
" five foot high without bruſhing his foretop, which " whoever does is utterly unqualified to ſit among " us.

Some of the Statutes of the Club are as follow.

" I. If it be proved upon any member, though " never ſo duly qualified, that he ſtrives as much as " poſſible to get above his ſize, by ſtretching, cock- " ing, or the like; or that he hath ſtood on tiptoe in " a crowd, with deſign to be taken for as tall a man " as the reſt; or hath privily conveyed any large " book, cricket, or other device under him to exalt " him on his ſeat: every ſuch offender ſhall be ſen- " tenced to walk in pumps for a whole month.

" II. If any member ſhall take advantage from " the fulneſs or length of his wig, or any part of " his dreſs, or the immoderate extent of his hat, or " otherwiſe, to ſeem larger or higher than he is, it is " ordered, he ſhall wear red heels to his ſhoes, and " a red feather in his hat; which may apparently " mark and ſet bounds to the extremities of his ſmall " dimenſion, that all people may readily find him " out between his hat and his ſhoes.

" III. If any member ſhall purchaſe a horſe for " his own riding, above fourteen hands and a half " in height; that horſe ſhall forthwith be ſold, a " Scotch galloway bought in its ſtead for him, and " the overplus of the money ſhall treat the Club.

" IV. If any member, in direct contradiction to " the fundamental laws of the Society, ſhall wear " the heels of his ſhoes exceeding one inch and half;

" it ſhall be interpreted as an open renunciation of " littleneſs, and the criminal ſhall inſtantly be expel- " led. Note, The form to be uſed in expelling a " member ſhall be in theſe words; " Go from a- " mong us, and be tall if you can!

" It is the unanimous opinion of our whole ſocie- " ty, that ſince the race of mankind is granted to " have decreaſed in ſtature, from the beginning to " this preſent, it is the intent of Nature itſelf, that " men ſhould be little; and we believe, that all hu- " man kind ſhall at laſt grow down to perfection, " that is to ſay, be reduced to our own meaſure.

N°. 92. June 26, 1713.

Homunculi quanti ſunt, cum recogito! PLAUT.

To NESTOR IRONSIDE, Eſq;

" YOU are now acquainted with the nature " and deſign of our inſtitution; the Character " of the members, and the topicks of our Conver- " ſation, are what remain for the ſubject of this " Epiſtle.

"The moſt eminent perſons of our aſſembly are a little Poet, a little Lover, a little Politician, and a little Heroe. The firſt of theſe, Dick Diſtick by name, we have elected Preſident: not only as he is the ſhorteſt of us all, but becauſe he has entertained ſo juſt a ſenſe of his ſtature, as to go generally in black, that he may appear yet leſs. Nay, to that perfection is he arrived, that he ſtoops as he walks. The figure of the man is odd enough: he is a lively little creature, with long arms and legs: a Spider is no ill emblem of him: he has been taken at a diſtance for a ſmall Windmill. But indeed what principally moved us in his favour was his talent in Poetry, for he hath promiſed to undertake a long work in ſhort verſe to celebrate the heroes of our ſize. He has entertained ſo great a reſpect for Statius on the ſcore of that line,

Major in exiguo regnabat corpore virtus, that he once deſigned to tranſlate the whole Thebaid, for the ſake of little Tydeus.

"Tom Tiptoe, a dapper black fellow, is the moſt gallant lover of the age. He is particularly nice in his habiliments; and to the end juſtice may be done him that way, conſtantly employs the ſame artiſt who makes attire for the neighb'ring Princes

" and Ladies of quality at Mr. Powel's. The viva-
" city of his temper inclines him ſometimes to boaſt
" of the favours of the Fair. He was t'other night
" excuſing his abſence from the club on account of " an aſſignation with a Lady (and, as he had the " vanity to tell us, a tall one too) who had conſented
" to the full accompliſhment of his deſires that even" ing: But one of the company, who was his confi" dent, aſſured us ſhe was a woman of humour, and
" made the agreement on this condition that his toe
" ſhould be tied to hers.

" Our Politician is a perſon of real gravity, and
" profeſſed wiſdom: Gravity in a man of this ſize,
" compared with that of one of ordinary bulk, ap" pears like the gravity of a Cat compared with that " of a Lion. This gentleman is accuſtomed to talk " to himſelf, and was once over-heard to compare
" his own perſon to a little cabinet, wherein are lock" ed up all the ſecrets of ſtate, and refined ſchemes
" of Princes. His face is pale and meagre, which " proceeds from much watching and ſtudying for the " welfare of Europe, which is alſo thought to have
" ſtinted his growth: for he hath deſtroyed his own
" conſtitution with taking care of that of the nation.
" He is what Monſ. Balzac calls, a great Diſtiller
" of the maxims of Tacitus: when he ſpeaks, it is " ſlowly, and word by word, as one that is loth to " enrich you too faſt with his obſervations; like a

"limbeck that gives you, drop by drop, an extract "of the little that is in it.

"The laſt I ſhall mention is Tim. Tuck, the He-"ro. He is particularly remarkable for the length "of his Sword, which interſects his perſon in a croſs "line, and makes him appear not unlike a Fly that "the boys have run a pin through, and ſet a walk-"ing. He once challenged a tall fellow for giving "him a blow on the pate with his elbow, as he paſ-"ſed along the ſtreet. But what he eſpecially va-"lues himſelf upon is, that in all the campaigns he "has made, he never once duck'd at the whizz of a "cannon ball. Tim. was full as large at fourteen "years old as he is now. This we are tender of "mentioning, your little Heroes being generally "cholerick.

"Theſe are the gentlemen that moſt enliven our "converſation. The diſcourſe generally turns upon "ſuch accidents, whether fortunate or unfortunate, "as are daily occaſioned by our ſize: theſe we faith-"fully communicate, either as matter of mirth or "of conſolation to each other. The Preſident had "lately an unlucky fall, being unable to keep his "legs on a ſtormy day; whereupon he informed us "it was no new diſaſter, but the ſame a certain an-"cient Poet had been ſubject to; who is recorded to "have been ſo light that he was obliged to poiſe "himſelf againſt the wind, with lead on one ſide,

" and his own works on the other. The Lover con-
" feſt the other night that he had been cured of love
" to a tall woman, by reading over the legend of " Ragotine in Scarron, with his tea, three mornings
" ſucceſſively. Our Hero rarely acquaints us with " any of his unſucceſsful adventures: and as for the " Politician, he declares himſelf an utter enemy to
" all kind of burleſque, ſo will never diſcompoſe the " auſterity of his aſpect by laughing at our adven" tures, much leſs diſcover any of his own in this ri-
" dicrous light. Whatever he tells of any accidents " that befal him, is by way of complaint, nor is he " ever laugh'd at but in his Abſence.

" We are likewiſe particularly careful to commu" nicate in the club all ſuch paſſages of hiſtory, or " characters of illuſtrious perſonages, as any way
" reflect honour on little men. Tim. Tuck having
" but juſt reading enough for a military man, perpe" tually entertains us with the ſame ſtories of little
" David that conquer'd the mighty Goliah, and lit" tle Luxembourg that made Louis XIV. a grand
" Monarque, never forgetting little Alexander the " great. Dick Diſtick celebrates the exceeding hu" manity of Auguſtus, who called Horace lepidiſſi-
" mum homunciolum; and is wonderfully pleaſed with
" Voiture and Scarron, for having ſo well deſcribed
" their diminutive forms to poſterity. He is peremp" torily of opinion, againſt a great Reader and all

'his adherents, that Æſop was not a jot properer or 'handſomer than he is repreſented by the common 'pictures. But the Soldier believes with the learned 'perſon above-mentioned; for he thinks none but 'an impudent tall author could be guilty of ſuch an 'unmannerly piece of ſatire on little warriors, as his 'Battle of the Mouſe and the Frog. The Politician 'is very proud of a certain King of Egypt, called 'Bocchor, who, as Diodorus aſſures us, was a per-'ſon of a very low ſtature, but far exceeded all that 'went before him in diſcretion and politicks.

"As I am ſecretary to the club, 'tis my buſineſs, whenever we meet, to take minutes of the tranſactions: this has enabled me to ſend you the foregoing particulars, as I may hereafter other memoirs. We have ſpies appointed in every quarter of the town, to give us informations of the miſbehaviour of ſuch refractory perſons as refuſe to be ſubject to our ſtatutes. Whatſoever aſpiring practices any of theſe our people ſhall be guilty of in their Amours, ſingle combats, or any indirect means to manhood, we ſhall certainly be acquainted with, and publiſh to the world, for their puniſhment and reformation. For the Preſident has granted me the ſole propriety of expoſing and ſhewing to the town all ſuch intractable Dwarfs, whoſe circumſtances exempt them from being carried about in Boxes: reſerving only to himſelf, as

" the right of a Poet, thoſe ſmart characters that will
" ſhine in Epigrams. Venerable Neſtor, I ſalute
" you in the name of the club.

BOB. SHORT, Secretary.

N°. 173. September 29, 1713.

Nec ſera comantem
Narciſſum, aut flexi tacuiſſem vimen Acanthi, Pallenteſque hederas, et amantes littora myrtos.
VIRG.

I Lately took a particular friend of mine to my houſe in the country, not without ſome apprehenſion, that it could afford little entertainment to a man of his polite taſte, particularly in architecture and gardening, who had ſo long been converſant with all that is beautiful and great in either. But it was a pleaſant ſurprize to me, to hear him often declare he had found in my little retirement that beauty which he always thought wanting in the moſt lebrated ſeats (or, if you will, Villa's) of the na-on. This he deſcribed to me in thoſe verſes, with hich Martial begins one of his epigrams:

Baiana noſtri villa, Baſſe, Fauſtini,
Non otioſis ordinata myrtetis,
Viduaque platano, tonſilique buxeto,
Ingrata lati ſpatia detinet campi;
Sed rure vero, barbaroque lætatur.

There is certainly ſomething in the amiable ſim-icity of unadorned Nature, that ſpreads over the ind a noble ſort of tranquillity, and a loftier ſenſaon of pleaſure, than can be raiſed from the nicer enes of art.

This was the taſte of the Ancients in their garens, as we may diſcover from the deſcriptions ex-nt of them. The two moſt celebrated wits of the orld have each of them left us a particular picture a Garden; wherein thoſe great maſters being holly unconfined, and painting at pleaſure, may thought to have given a full idea of what they teemed moſt excellent in this way. Theſe (one may bſerve) conſiſt entirely of the uſeful part of horticul-re, fruit-trees, herbs, water, etc. The pieces I am eaking of are Virgil's account of the garden of the d Corycian, and Homer's of that of Alcinous in e ſeventh Odyſſey, to which I refer the reader.

Sir William Temple has remarked, that this garden of Homer contains all the juſteſt rules and proviſions which can go toward compoſing the beſt gardens. Its extent was four Acres, which, in thoſe times of ſimplicity, was looked upon as a large one, even for a Prince. It was incloſed all round for defence; and for conveniency joined cloſe to the gates of the Palace.

He mentions next the Trees, which were ſtandards, and ſuffered to grow to their full height. The fine deſcription of the Fruits that never failed, and the eternal Zephyrs, is only a more noble and poetical way of expreſſing the continual ſucceſſion of one fruit after another throughout the year.

The Vineyard ſeems to have been a plantation diſtinct from the Garden; as alſo the beds of Greens mentioned afterwards at the extremity of the incloſure, in the uſual place of our Kitchen Gardens.

The two Fountains are diſpoſed very remarkably. They roſe within the incloſure, and were brought in by conduits or ducts; one of them to water all parts of the gardens, and the other underneath the Palace into the Town, for the ſervice of the publick.

How contrary to this ſimplicity is the modern practice of gardening? We ſeem to make it our ſtudy to recede from Nature, not only in the various tonſure of greens into the moſt regular and formal ſhapes, but even in monſtrous attempts beyond the reach of the art itſelf: we run into ſculpture, and are yet better pleaſed to have our Trees in the moſt aukward figures of men and animals, than in the moſt regular of their own.

Hinc et nexilibus videas e frondibus hortos,
Implexos late muros, et moenia circum
Porrigere, et latas e ramis ſurgere turres;
Deflexam et myrtum in puppes, atque ærea roſtra?
In buxiſque undare fretum, atque e rore rudentes,
Parte alia frondere ſuis tentoria caſtris;
Scutaque, ſpiculaque, et jaculantia citria vallos.

I believe it is no wrong obſervation, that perſons of genius, and thoſe who are moſt capable of art, are always moſt fond of nature: as ſuch are chiefly ſenſible, that all art conſiſts in the imitation and ſtudy of nature: On the contrary, people of the common level of underſtanding are principally delighted with the little niceties and fantaſtical operations of art, and conſtantly think that fineſt which is leaſt natural. A Citizen is no ſooner proprietor of a couple of Yews, but he entertains thoughts of erecting them into Giants, like thoſe of Guildhall. I know an eminent Cook, who beautified his country ſeat with a Coronation-dinner in greens, where you ſee the Champion flouriſhing on horſeback at one end of the table, and the Queen in perpetual youth at the other.

For the benefit of all my loving countrymen of this curious taſte, I ſhall here publiſh a catalogue of Greens to be diſpoſed of by an eminent Town-Gardener, who has lately applied to me upon this head. He repreſents, that for the advancement of a politer ſort of ornament in the Villa's and Gardens adjacent to this great city, and in order to diſtinguiſh thoſe places from the meer barbarous countries of groſs nature, the world ſtands much in need of a virtuoſo Gardener, who has a turn to ſculpture, and is thereby capable of improving upon the ancients, in the imagery of Ever-greens. I proceed to his catalogue.

Adam and Eve in Yew; Adam, a little ſhattered by the fall of the Tree of Knowledge in the great ſtorm; Eve and the Serpent very flouriſhing.

Noah's ark in Holly, the ribs a little damaged for want of water.

The Tower of Babel, not yet finiſhed.

St. George in Box; his arm ſcarce long enough, but will be in a condition to ſtick the Dragon by next April.

A green Dragon of the ſame, with a tail of Ground Ivy for the preſent.

N. B. Thoſe two not to be ſold ſeparately.

dward the Black Prince in Cypreſs.

Lauruſtine Bear in Bloſſom, with a Juniper Hunter in Berries.

pair of Giants, ſtunted, to be ſold cheap.

Queen Elizabeth in Phyllirea, a little inclining to the green ſickneſs, but of full growth.

nother Queen Elizabeth in Myrtle, which was very forward, but miſcarried by being too near a Savine.

n old Maid of honour in Wormwood.

topping Ben. Johnſon in Laurel.

ivers eminent modern Poets in Bays, ſomewhat blighted, to be diſpoſed of a pennyworth.

quick-ſet Hog ſhot up into a Porcupine, by being forgot a week in rainy weather.

Lavender Pig, with Sage growing in his belly.

pair of Maidenheads in Firr, in great forwardneſs.

He alſo cutteth family pieces of men, women, and ildren, ſo that any gentleman may have his lady's figies in Myrtle, or his own in Horn-beam.

Thy Wife ſhall be as the fruitful Vine, and thy Chil-ren as Olive-branches round thy table.

PREFACE

TO

HOMER's ILIAD.

HOMER is univerſally allowed to have ha the greateſt Invention of any writer whatever The praiſe of Judgment Virgil has juſtly conteſte with him, and others may have their pretenſions a to particular excellencies; but his Invention remain yet unrivall'd. Nor is it a wonder if he has ever bee acknowledged the greateſt of poets, who moſt excel led in that which is the very foundation of poetry It is the invention that in different degrees diſtin guiſhes all great Genius's: The utmoſt ſtretch o human ſtudy, learning, and induſtry, which maſte every thing beſides, can never attain to this. It fur niſhes Art with all her materials, and without it Judgment itſelf can at beſt but ſteal wiſely: For Ar is only like a prudent ſteward that lives on manag ing the riches of Nature. Whatever praiſes may b given to works of Judgment, there is not even a ſin auty in them, to which the Invention muſt not bute. As in the moſt regular gardens, Art can reduce the beauties of Nature to more regula- and ſuch a figure, which the common eye may r take in, and is therefore more entertained . And perhaps the reaſon why common Critics inclined to prefer a judicious and methodical ge- to a great and fruitful one, is, becauſe they find aſier for themſelves to purſue their obſervations ough an uniform and bounded walk of Art, than comprehend the vaſt and various extent of Na- re.

Our author's work is a wild paradiſe, where if /e cannot ſee all the beauties ſo diſtinctly as in an ordered garden. it is only becauſe the number of hem is infinitely greater. 'Tis like a copious nur- ery which contains the ſeeds and firſt productions of every kind, out of which thoſe who followed him ave but ſelected ſome particular plants, each ac- ording to his fancy, to cultivate and beautify. If ome things are too luxuriant, it is owing to the rich- eſs of the ſoil; and if others are not arrived to per- ection or maturity, it is only becauſe they are over- un and oppreſt by thoſe of a ſtronger nature.

It is to the ſtrength of this amazing invention we re to attribute that unequall'd fire and rapture, which ; ſo forcible in Homer, that no man of a true poe- ical ſpirit is maſter of himſelf while he reads him.

What he writes, is of the moſt animated nature imaginable; every thing moves, every thing lives, and is put in action. If a council be called, or a battle fought, you are not coldly informed of what was ſaid or done as from a third perſon; the reader is hurried out of himſelf by the force of the Poet's imagination, and turns in one place to a hearer, in another to a ſpectator. The courſe of his verſes reſembles that of the army he deſcribes,

Οἱ δ' ἀξ ἴσαν, ὡσεί τε πυρὶ χθὼν πᾶσα νέμοιτο·

They pour along like a fire that ſweeps the whole earth before it. 'Tis however remarkable that his fancy, which is every where vigorous, is not diſcovered immediately at the beginning of his poem in its fulleſt ſplendor: It grows in the progreſs both upon himſelf and others, and becomes on fire like a chariot-wheel, by its own rapidity. Exact diſpoſition, juſt thought, correct elocution, poliſhed numbers, may have been found in a thouſand; but this poetical fire, this Vivida vis animi, in a very few. Even in works where all thoſe are imperfect or neglected, this can over-power criticiſm, and make us admire even while we diſapprove. Nay, where this appears, though attended with abſurdities, it brightens all the rubbiſh about it, till we ſee nothing but its own ſplendor. This Fire is diſcerned in Virgil, but diſ-cerned as through a glaſs, reflected from Homer, more ſhining than fierce, but every where equal and conſtant: In Lucan and Statius, it burſts out in ſudden, ſhort, and interrupted flaſhes: In Milton it glows like a furnace kept up to an uncommon ardor by the force of art: In Shakeſpear, it ſtrikes before we are aware, like an accidental fire from heaven: But in Homer and in him only, it burns every where clearly, and every where irreſiſtibly.

I ſhall here endeavour to ſhow, how this vaſt Invention exerts itſelf in a manner ſuperior to that of any poet, through all the main conſtituent parts of his work, as it is the great and peculiar characteriſtic which diſtinguiſhes him from all other authors.

This ſtrong and ruling faculty was like a powerful ſtar, which in the violence of its courſe, drew all things within its vortex. It ſeemed not enough to have taken in the whole circle of arts, and the whole compaſs of nature to ſupply his maxims and reflections; all the inward paſſions and affections of mankind, to furniſh his characters; and all the outward forms and images of things for his deſcriptions; but wanting yet an ampler ſphere to expatiate in, he opened a new and boundleſs walk for his imagination, and created a world for himſelf in the invention of Fable. That which Ariſtotle calls the Soul of poetry, was firſt breathed into it by Homer. I ſhall begin with conſidering him in this part, as it is naturally the firſt, and I ſpeak of it both as it means the deſign of a poem, and as it is taken for fiction.

Fable may be divided into the probable, the allegorical, and the marvellous. The probable fable is the recital of ſuch actions as though they did not happen, yet might, in the common courſe of nature: Or of ſuch as though they did, become fables by the additional epiſodes and manner of telling them. Of this ſort is the main ſtory of an Epic poem, the return of Ulyſſes, the ſettlement of the Trojans in Italy, or the like. That of the Iliad is the anger of Achilles, the moſt ſhort and ſingle ſubject that ever was choſen by any Poet. Yet this he has ſupplied with a vaſter variety of incidents and events, and crouded with a greater number of councils, ſpeeches, battles, and epiſodes of all kinds, than are to be found even in thoſe poems whoſe ſchemes are of the utmoſt latitude and irregularity. The action is hurried on with the moſt vehement ſpirit, and its whole duration employs not ſo much as fifty days. Virgil, for want of ſo warm a genius, aided himſelf by taking in a more extenſive ſubject, as well as a greater length of time, and contracting the deſign of both Homer's poems into one, which is yet but a fourth part as large as his. The other Epic Poets have uſed the ſame practice, but generally carried it ſo far as to ſuperinduce a multiplicity of fables, deſtroy the unity of action, and loſe their readers in an unable length of time. Nor is it only in the deſign that they have been unable to add to vention, but they have followed him in every e and part of ſtory. If he has given a regular ue of an army, they all draw up their forces in me order. If he has funeral games for Pa-, Virgil has the ſame for Anchiſes, and Sta-ather than omit them) deſtroys the unity of his for thoſe of Archemorus. If Ulyſſes viſit the , the Æneas of Virgil and Scipio of Silius are fter him. If he be detained from his re-y the allurements of Calypſo, ſo is Æneas by and Rinaldo by Armida. If Achilles be ab-om the army on the ſcore of a quarrel through ıe poem, Rinaldo muſt abſent himſelf juſt as on the like account. If he gives his hero a celeſtial armour, Virgil and Taſſo make the reſent to theirs. Virgil has not only obſerved oſe imitation of Homer, but where he had not way, ſupplied the want from other Greek au-

Thus the ſtory of Sinon, and the taking of was copied (ſays Macrobius) almoſt word for from Piſander, as, the Loves of Dido and are taken from thoſe of Medda and Jaſon in lonius, and ſeveral others in the ſame manner. proceed to the allegorical fable: If we reflect hoſe innumerable knowledges, thoſe ſecrets of and phyſical philoſophy, which Homer is ge-

introduce them into actions agreeable to th of the things they ſhadowed? This is a which no ſucceeding poets could diſpute w mer; and whatever commendations have lowed them on this head, are by no means invention in having enlarged his circle, their judgment in having contracted it. F
the mode of learning changed in following a ſcience was delivered in a plainer manner became as reaſonable in the more modern lay it aſide, as it was in Homer to mak
it. And perhaps it was no unhappy circ for Virgil, that there was not in his time
mand upon him of ſo great an invention, be capable of furniſhing all thoſe allegori of a poem.

n of the Gods, conſtantly laying their accuſa-againſt Homer as the chief ſupport of it. But ever cauſe their might be to blame his machines philoſophical or religious view, they are ſo per-in the poetic, that mankind have been ever contented to follow them: None have been to enlarge the ſphere of poetry beyond the li-he has ſet: Every attempt of this nature has d unſucceſsful; and after all the various changes nes and religions, his Gods continue to this day Gods of Poetry.

e come now to the characters of his perſons:
here we ſhall find no author has ever drawn any, with ſo viſible and ſurprizing a variety.
ven us ſuch lively and affecting impreſſions of . Every one has ſomething ſo ſingularly his that no painter could have diſtinguiſhed them by their features, than the Poet has by their
ers. Nothing can be more exact than the ſtions he has obſerved in the different degrees tues and vices. The ſingle quality of courage nderfully diverſified in the ſeveral characters e Iliad. That of Achilles is furious and in-ble; that of Diomede forward, yet liſtening to e and ſubject to command: That of Ajax is and ſelf-confiding: of Hector active and vi-
: The courage of Agamemnon is inſpirited
ve of empire and ambition, that of Menelaus

mixed with ſoftneſs and tenderneſs for his people: We find in Idomeneus a plain direct ſoldier, in Sarpedon a gallant and generous one. Nor is this judicious and aſtoniſhing diverſity to be found only in the principal quality which conſtitutes the main of each character, but even in the underparts of it, to which he takes care to give a tincture of that principal one. For example, the main characters of Ulyſſes and Neſtor conſiſt in wiſdom; and they are diſtinct in this, that the wiſdom of one is artificial and various, of the other, natural, open, and regular. But they have, beſides, characters of courage; and this quality alſo takes a different turn in each from the difference of his prudence: for one in the war depends ſtill upon caution, the other upon experience. It would be endleſs to produce inſtances of theſe kinds. The characters of Virgil are far from ſtriking us in this open manner; they lie in a great degree hidden and undiſtinguiſhed, and, where they are marked moſt evidently, affect us not in proportion to thoſe of Homer. His characters of valour are much alike; even that of Turnus ſeems no way peculiar but as it is in a ſuperior degree; and we ſee nothing that differences the courage of Mneſtheus from that of Sergeſtus, Cloanthus, or the reſt. In like manner it may be remark'd of Statius's heroes, that an air of impetuoſity runs through them all; the ſame horrid and avage courage appears in his Capaneus, Tydeus, Hippomedon, etc. They have a parity of character, which makes them ſeem brothers of one family. I believe when the reader is led into this track of reflection, if he will purſue it thro' the Epic nd Tragic writers, he will be convinced how infinitely ſuperior in this point the invention of Homer, vas to that of all others.

The ſpeeches are to be conſidered as they flow rom the characters, being perfect or defective as hey agree or diſagree with the manners of thoſe vho utter them. As there is more variety of characters in the Iliad, ſo there is of ſpeeches, than in any other poem. Every thing in it has manners (as Ariſtotle expreſſes it) that is, every thing is acted or ſpoken. It is hardly credible in a work of ſuch length, how ſmall a number of lines are employed in narration. In Virgil the dramatic part is leſs in proportion to the narrative; and the ſpeeches often conſiſt of general reflections or thoughts, which might be equally juſt in any perſon's mouth upon the ſame occaſion. As many of his perſons have no apparent characters, ſo many of his ſpeeches eſcape being applied and judged by the rule of propriety. We oftener think of the author himſelf when we read Virgil, than when we are engaged in Homer: All which are the effects of a colder invention, that intereſts us leſs in the action de-ſcribed: Homer makes us hearers, and Virgil leaves us readers.

If in the next place we take a view of the ſentiments, the ſame preſiding faculty is eminent in the ſublimity and ſpirit of his thoughts. Longinus has given his opinion, that it was in this part Homer principally excelled. What were alone ſufficient to prove the grandeur and excellence of his ſentiments in general, is, that they have ſo remarkable a parity with thoſe of the Scripture: Duport, in his Gnomologia Homerica, has collected innumerable inſtances of this ſort. And it is with juſtice an excellent modern writer allows, that if Virgil has not ſo many thoughts that are low and vulgar, he has not ſo many that are ſublime and noble; and that the Roman author ſeldom riſes into very aſtoniſhing ſentiments where he is not fired by the Iliad.

If we obſerve his deſcriptions, images, and ſimiles, we ſhall find the invention ſtill predominant. To what elſe can we aſcribe that vaſt comprehenſion of images of every ſort, where we ſee each circumſtance of art, and individual of nature ſummoned together, by the extent and fecundity of his imagination; to which all things, in their various views, preſented themſelves in an inſtant, and had their impreſſions taken off to perfection at a heat! Nay, he not only gives us the full proſpects of things, but ſeveral unexpected peculiarities and ſide-views, unobſerved by any Painter but Homer. Nothing is ſo ſurprizing as the deſcriptions of his battles, which take up no leſs than half the Iliad, and are ſupplied with ſo vaſt a variety of incidents, that no one bears a likeneſs to another; ſuch different kinds of deaths, that no two heroes are wounded in the ſame manner; and ſuch a profuſion of noble ideas, that every battle riſes above the laſt in greatneſs, horror, and confuſion. It is certain there is not near that number of images and deſcriptions in any Epic Poet; though every one has aſſiſted himſelf with a great quantity out of him: And it is evident of Virgil eſpecially, that he has ſcarce any compariſons which are not drawn from his maſter.

If we deſcend from hence to the expreſſion, we ſee the bright imagination of Homer ſhining out in the moſt enlivened forms of it. We acknowledge him the father of poetical diction, the firſt who taught that language of the Gods to men. His expreſſion is like the colouring of ſome great maſters, which diſcovers itſelf to be laid on boldly, and executed with rapidity. It is indeed the ſtrongeſt and moſt glowing imaginable, and touched with the greateſt ſpirit. Ariſtotle had reaſon to ſay, He was the only poet who had found out living words; there are in him more daring figures and metaphors, than in any good author whatever. An arrow is impatient to be on the wing, a weapon thirſts to drink the blood of an enemy, and the like. Yet his expreſſion is never too big for the ſenſe, but juſtly great in proportion to it. 'Tis the ſentiment that ſwells and fills out the diction, which riſes with it, and forms itſelf about it: And in the ſame degree that a thought is warmer, an expreſſion will be brighter; as that is more ſtrong, this will become more perſpicuous: Like glaſs in the furnace, which grows to a greater magnitude and refines to a greater clearneſs, only as the breath within is more powerful, and the heat more intenſe.

To throw his language more out of proſe, Homer ſeems to have affected the compound epithets. This was a ſort of compoſition peculiarly proper to poetry, not only as it heighten'd the diction, but as it aſſiſted and filled the numbers with greater ſound and pomp, and likewiſe conduced in ſome meaſure to thicken the images. On this laſt conſideration I cannot but attribute theſe alſo to the fruitfulneſs of his invention, ſince (as he has managed them) they are a ſort of ſupernumerary pictures of the perſons or things to which they are joined. We ſee the motion of Hector's plumes in the epithet Κορυθαίολος, the landſcape of mount Neritus in that of Εἰνοσίφυλλος, and ſo of others, which particular images, could not have been inſiſted upon ſo long as to expreſs them in a deſcription (tho' but of a ſingle line) without diverting the reader too much from the principal action or figure. As a metaphor is a ſhort ſimile, one of theſe epithets is a ſhort deſcription.

Laſtly, if we conſider his verſification, we ſhall be ſenſible what a ſhare of praiſe is due to his invention in that He was not ſatisfied with his language as he found it ſettled in any one part of Greece, but ſearch'd thro' its different dialects with this particular view, to beautify and perfect his numbers: he conſidered theſe as they had a greater mixture of vowels or conſonants, and accordingly employed them as the verſe required either a greater ſmoothneſs or ſtrength. What he moſt affected was the Ionic, which has a peculiar ſweetneſs from its never uſing contractions, and from its cuſtom of reſolving the diphthongs into two ſyllables: ſo as to make the words open themſelves with a more ſpreading and ſonorous fluency. With this he mingled the Attic contractions, the broader Doric, and feebler Æolic, which often rejects its aſpirate, or takes off its accent; and compleated this variety by altering ſome letters with the licence of poetry. Thus his meaſures, inſtead of being fetters to his ſenſe, were always in readineſs to run along with the warmth of his rapture, and even to give a further repreſentation of his notions, in the correſpondence of their ſounds to what they ſignified. Out of all theſe he has derived that harmony, which makes us confeſs he had not only the richeſt head, but the fineſt ear in the world. This is ſo great a truth, that whoever will but conſult the tune of his verſes, even without underſtanding them (with the ſame ſort of diligence as we daily ſee practiſed in the caſe of Italian Operas) will find more ſweetneſs, variety, and majeſty of ſound, than in any other language or poetry. The beauty of his numbers is allowed by the criticks to be copied but faintly by Virgil himſelf, though they are ſo juſt to aſcribe it to the nature of the Latin tongue: Indeed the Greek has ſome advantages both from the natural ſound of its words, and the turn and cadence of its verſe, which agree with the genius of no other language. Virgil was very ſenſible of this, and uſed the utmoſt diligence in working up a more intractable language to whatſoever graces it was capable of; and in particular never failed to bring the ſound of his line to a beautiful agreement with its ſenſe. If the Grecian poet has not been ſo frequently celebrated on this account as the Roman, the only reaſon is, that fewer criticks have underſtood one language than the other. Dionyſius of Halicarnaſſus has pointed out many of our author's beauties in this kind, in his treatiſe of the Compoſition of Words, and others will be taken notice of in the courſe of my Notes. It ſuffices at preſent to obſerve of his numbers, that they flow with ſo much eaſe, as to make one imagine Homer had no other care than to tranſcribe as faſt as the Muſes dictated; and at the ſame time with ſo much force and inſpiriting vigour, that they awaken and raiſe us like the ſound of a trumpet. They roll along as a plentiful river, always in motion, and always full; while we were borne away by a tide of verſe, the moſt rapid, and yet the moſt ſmooth imaginable.

Thus on whatever ſide we contemplate Homer, what principally ſtrikes us is his invention. It is that which forms the character of each part of his work; and accordingly we find it to have made his fable more extenſive and copious than any other, his manners more lively and ſtrongly marked, his ſpeeches more affecting and tranſported, his ſentiments more warm and ſublime, his images and deſcriptions more full and animated, his expreſſion more rais'd and daring, and his numbers more rapid and various. I hope, in what has been ſaid of Virgil, with regard to any of theſe heads, I have no way derogated from his character. Nothing is more abſurd or endleſs, than the common method of comparing eminent writers by an oppoſition of particular paſſages in them, and forming a judgment from thence of their merit upon the whole. We ought to have a certain knowledge of the principal character and diſtinguiſhing excellence of each: It is in that we are to conſider him, and in proportion to his degree in that we are to admire him. No man or author ever excelled all the world in more than one faculty; and as Homer has done this in invention, Virgil has in judgment. Not that we are to think Homer wanted judgment, becauſe Virgil had it in a more eminent degree; or that Virgil wanted invention, becauſe Homer poſſeſt a larger ſhare of it: Each of theſe great authors had more of both than perhaps any man beſides, and are only ſaid to have leſs in compariſon with one another. Homer was the greater genius, Virgil the better artiſt. In one we moſt admire the man, in the other the work. Homer hurries and tranſports us with a commanding impetuoſity. Virgil leads us with an attractive majeſty: Homer ſcatters with a generous profuſion, Virgil beſtows with a careful magnificence: Homer, like the Nile, pours out his riches with a boundleſs overflow; Virgil, like a river in its banks, with a gentle and conſtant ſtream. When we behold their battles, methinks the two Poets reſemble the Heroes they celebrate: Homer boundleſs and irreſiſtible as Achilles, bears all before him, and ſhines more and more as the tumult increaſes; Virgil calmly daring, like Æneas, appears undiſturbed in the midſt of the action; diſpoſes all about him, and conquers with tranquillity. And when we look upon their machines, Homer ſeems like his own Jupiter in his terrors, ſhaking Olympus, ſcattering the lightnings, and firing the Heavens; Virgil, like the ſame power in his benevolence, counſelling with the Gods, laying plans for empires, and regularly ordering his whole creation.

But after all, it is with great parts as with great virtues, they naturally border on ſome imperfection; and it is often hard to diſtinguiſh exactly where the virtue ends, or the fault begins. As prudence may ſometimes ſink to ſuſpicion, ſo may a great judgment decline to coldneſs; and as magnanimity may run up to profuſion or extravagance, ſo may a great invention to redundancy or wildneſs. If we look upon Homer in this view, we ſhall perceive the chief objections againſt him to proceed from ſo noble a cauſe as the exceſs of this faculty.

Among theſe we may reckon ſome of his marvellous fictions, upon which ſo much criticiſm has been ſpent, as ſurpaſſing all the bounds of probability. Perhaps it may be with great and ſuperior ſouls, as with gigantic bodies, which exerting themſelves with unuſual ſtrength, exceed what is commonly thought the due proportion of parts, to become miracles in the whole; and like the old heroes of that make, commit ſomething near extravagance, amidſt

a ſeries of glorious and inimitable performance: Homer has his ſpeaking horſes, and Virgil his diſtilling blood, where the latter has not ſo m contrived the eaſy intervention of a Deity the probability.

It is owing to the ſame vaſt invention, that miles have been thought too exuberant and circumſtances. The force of this faculty is nothing more, than in its inability to confine i that ſingle circumſtance upon which the com is grounded: it runs out into embelliſhments o tional images, which however are ſo managed to overpower the main one. His ſimiles are li tures, where the principal figure has not only i portion given agreeable to the original, but ſet off with occaſional ornaments and proſpect ſame will account for his manner of heaping a ber of compariſons together in one breath, wh fancy ſuggeſted to him at once ſo many vario correſpondent images. The reader will eaſily this obſervation to more objections of the ſame

If there are others which ſeem rather to him with a defect or narrowneſs of genius, th exceſs of it; thoſe ſeeming defects will be fou on examination to proceed wholly from the na the times he lived in. Such are his groſſer repr tions of the Gods, and the vicious and imperfect ners of his Heroes, which will be treated of ollowing [a] Eſſay: But I muſt here ſpeak a word of he latter, as it is a point generally carried into extremes, both by the cenſurers and defenders of Homer. It muſt be a ſtrange partiality to antiquity, to think with Madam Dacier, "that [b] thoſe times and "manners are ſo much the more excellent, as they "are more contrary to ours." Who can be ſo prejudiced in their favour as to magnify the felicity of thoſe ages, when a ſpirit of revenge and cruelty, oined with the practice of rapine and robbery, eign'd thro' the world; when no mercy was ſhown ut for the ſake of lucre, when the greateſt Princes were put to the ſword, and their wives and daughters made ſlaves and concubines? On the other ſide, I would not be ſo delicate as thoſe modern criticks, who are ſhocked at the ſervile offices and mean employments in which we ſometimes ſee the Heroes of Homer engaged. There is a pleaſure in taking a iew of that ſimplicity in oppoſition to the luxury f ſucceeding ages, in beholding Monarchs without heir guards, Princes tending their flocks, and Princeſſes drawing water from the ſprings. When we ead Homer, we ought to reflect that we are read-ig the moſt ancient author in the heathen world; nd thoſe who conſider him in this light, will dou-le their pleaſure in the peruſal of him. Let them

[a] See the articles of Theology and Morality, in the third part the Eſſay. [b] Preface to her Homer.

think they are growing acquainted with nati people that are now no more; that they are l almoſt three thouſand years back into the r Antiquity, and entertaining themſelves with and ſurpriſing viſion of things no where el found, the only true mirrour of that ancient
By this means alone their greateſt obſtacles niſh; and what uſually creates their diſlike, come a ſatisfaction.

This conſideration may further ſerve to
for the conſtant uſe of the ſame epithets to h and Heroes, ſuch as the far-darting Phœbus, ey'd Pallas, the ſwift-footed Achilles, etc. whi have cenſured as impertinent and tediouſly r Thoſe of the Gods depended upon the pow offices then believed to belong to them, and h tracted a weight and veneration from the r ſolemn devotions in which they were uſed; th a ſort of attributes with which it was a matt ligion to ſalute them on all occaſions, and was an irreverence to omit. As for the ep great men, Monſ. Boileau is of opinion that th in the nature of Surnames, and repeated as ſu the Greeks having no names derived from thers, were obliged to add ſome other diſtin each perſon; either naming his parents exp his place of birth, profeſſion, or the like: A ander the ſon of Philip, Herodotus of Halic

Diogenes the Cynic, etc. Homer therefore complying with the cuſtom of his countrry, uſed ſuch diſtinctive additions as better agreed with poetry. And indeed we have ſomething parallel to theſe in modern times, ſuch as the names of Harold Harefoot, Edmund Ironſide, Edward Long-ſhanks, Edward the Black Prince, etc. If yet this be thought to account better for the propriety than for the repetition, I ſhall add a further conjecture. Heſiod, dividing the world into its different ages, has placed a fourth age between the brazen and the iron one, of Heroes diſtinct from other men, a divine race, who fought at Thebes and Troy, are called Demi Gods, and live by the care of Jupiter in the iſlands of the bleſſed[c]. Now among the divine honours which were paid them, they might have this alſo in common with the Gods, not to be mentioned without the ſolemnity of an epithet, and ſuch as might be acceptable to them by its celebrating their families, actions, or qualities.

What other cavils have been raiſed againſt Homer, are ſuch as hardly deſerve a reply, but will yet be taken notice of as they occur in the courſe of the work. Many have been occaſioned by an injudicious endeavour to exalt Virgil: which is much the ſame, as if one ſhould think to raiſe the ſuperſtructure by undermining the foundation: One would imagine by the whole courſe of their parallels, that theſe Critics

c Heſiod, Op. et Dier. lib. i. ver. 155, etc.

never ſo much as heard of Homer's having written firſt; a conſideration which whoever compares theſe two Poets, ought to have always in his eye. Some accuſe him for the ſame things which they overlook or praiſe in the other, as when they prefer the fable and moral of the Æneis to thoſe of the Iliad, for the ſame reaſons which might ſet the Odyſſey above the Æneis: as that the Hero is a wiſer man; and the action of the one more beneficial to his country than that of the other: or elſe they blame him for not doing what he never deſigned; as becauſe Achilles is not as good and perfect a prince as Æneas, when the very moral of his poem required a contrary character: It is thus that Rapin judges in his compariſon of Homer and Virgil. Others ſelect thoſe particular paſſages of Homer, which are not ſo laboured as ſome that Virgil drew out of them: This is the whole management of Scaliger in his Poetic. Others quarrel with what they take for low and mean expreſſions, ſometimes thro' a falſe delicacy and refinement, oftner from an ignorance of the graces of the original; and then triumph in the aukwardneſs of their own tranſlations: This is the conduct of Perault in his Parallels. Laſtly, there are others, who, pretending to a fairer proceeding, diſtinguiſh between the perſonal merit of Homer, and that of his work; but when they come to aſſign the cauſes of the great reputation of the Iliad, they found it upon the ignorance of his times, and the prejudice of thoſe that followed: And in purſuance of this principle, they make thoſe accidents (ſuch as the contention of the cities, etc.) to be the cauſes of his fame, which were in reality the conſequences of his merit. The fame might as well be ſaid of Virgil, or any great author, whoſe general character will infallibly raiſe many caſual additions to their reputation. This is the method of Monſ. de la Motte; who yet confeſſes upon the whole, that in whatever age Homer had lived, he muſt have been the greateſt poet of his nation, and that he may be ſaid in this ſenſe to be the maſter even of thoſe who ſurpaſſed him.

In all theſe objections we ſee nothing that contradicts his title to the honour of the chief invention; and as long as this (which is indeed the characteriſtic of Poetry itſelf) remains unequal'd by his followers, he ſtill continues ſuperior to them. A cooler judgment may commit fewer faults, and be more approved in the eyes of one ſort of Critics: but that warmth of fancy will carry the loudeſt and moſt univerſal applauſes, which holds the heart of a reader under the ſtrongeſt enchantment. Homer not only appears the inventor of poetry, but excells all the inventors of other arts in this, that he has ſwallowed up the honour of thoſe who ſucceeded him. What he has done admitted no increaſe, it only left room for contraction or regulation. He ſhewed all the ſtretch of fancy at once; and if he has failed in ſome of his flights was but becauſe he attempted every thing. A work this kind ſeems like a mighty Tree which riſes fr the moſt vigorous ſeed, is improved with induſ flouriſhes, and produces the fineſt fruit; nature art conſpire to raiſe it; pleaſure and profit join make it valuable: and they who find the juſteſt fau have only ſaid that a few branches (which run lu riant thro' a richneſs of nature) might be lopped to form to give it a more regular appearance.

Having now ſpoken of the beauties and defect the original, it remains to treat of the tranſlati with the ſame view to the chief characteriſtic. As as that is ſeen in the main parts of the Poem, ſuch the fable, manners, and ſentiments, no tranſlator prejudice it but by wilful omiſſions or contradic As it alſo breaks out in every particular image, ſcription, and ſimile; whoever leſſens or too m ſoftens thoſe, takes off from this chief character. is the firſt grand duty of an interpreter to give his thor entire and unmaim'd; and for the reſt, the tion and verſification only are his proper provin ſince theſe muſt be his own, but the others he i take as he finds them.

It ſhould then be conſidered what methods n afford ſome equivalent in our language for the gra of theſe in the Greek. It is certain no literal tran tion can be juſt to an excellent original in a ſupe language: but it is a great miſtake to imagine (as many have done) that a raſh paraphraſe can make amends for this general defect; which is no leſs in danger to loſe the ſpirit of an ancient, by deviating into the modern manners of expreſſion. If there be ſometimes a darkneſs, there is often a light in antiquity, which nothing better preſerves than a verſion almoſt literal. I know no liberties one ought to take but thoſe which are neceſſary for transfuſing the ſpirit of the original, and ſupporting the poetical ſtyle of the tranſlation: and I will venture to ſay there have not been more men miſled in former times by a ſervile dull adherence to the letter, than have been deluded in ours by a chimerical inſolent hope of raiſing and improving their author. It is not to be doubted that the fire of the poem is what a tranſlator ſhould principally regard, as it is moſt likely to expire in his managing: However it is his ſafeſt way to be content with preſerving this to his utmoſt in the whole, without endeavouring to be more than he finds his author is in any particular place. 'Tis a great ſecret in writing to know when to be plain, and when poetical and figurative: and it is what Homer will teach us, if we will but follow modeſty in his footſteps. Where his diction is bold and lofty, let us raiſe ours as high as we can; but where his is plain and humble, we ought not to be deterred from imitating him by the fear of incurring the cenſure of a mere Engliſh Critic. Nothing that belongs to Homer ſeems to have been commonly miſtaken than the juſt pitch of his Some of his tranſlators having ſwelled into fuſt a proud confidence of the ſublime; others fun flatneſs in a cold and timorous notion of ſim Methinks I ſee theſe different followers of H ſome ſweating and ſtraining after him by violen and bounds (the certain ſigns of falſe mettle) ſlowly and ſervilely creeping in his train, whi Poet himſelf is all the time proceeding with a affected and equal majeſty before them. Howe the two extremes one could ſooner pardon than frigidity: No author is to be envied ſo commendations as he may gain by that chara ſtyle, which his friends muſt agree together ſimplicity, and the reſt of the world will call There is a graceful and dignified ſimplicity, as a bald and ſordid one, which differ as muc each other as the air of a plain man from th ſloven: 'Tis one thing to be tricked up, and a not to be dreſſed at all. Simplicity is the me tween oſtentation and ruſticity.

This pure and noble ſimplicity is no wh ſuch perfection as in the Scripture and our I One may affirm, with all reſpect to the inſpire ings, that the divine Spirit made uſe of n words but what were intelligible and comm men at that time, and in that part of the worl

as Homer is the author neareſt to thoſe, his ſtyle muſt of courſe bear a greater reſemblance to the ſacred books than that of any other writer. This conſideration (together with what has been obſerved of the parity of ſome of his thoughts) may methinks induce a tranſlator on the one hand, to give into ſeveral of thoſe general phraſes and manners of expreſſion which have attained a veneration even in our language from being uſed in the old Teſtament; as on the other, to avoid thoſe which have been appropriated to the Divinity, and in a manner conſigned to myſtery and religion.

For a further preſervation of this air of ſimplicity, a particular care ſhould be taken to expreſs with all plainneſs thoſe moral ſentences and proverbial ſpeeches which are ſo numerous in this poet. They have ſomething venerable, and as I may ſay oracular, in that unadorned gravity and ſhortneſs with which they are delivered: a grace which would be utterly loſt by endeavouring to give them what we call a more ingenious (that is, a more modern) turn in the paraphraſe.

Perhaps the mixture of ſome Greciſms and old words after the manner of Milton, if done without too much affectation, might not have an ill effect in a verſion of this particular work, which moſt of any other ſeems to require a venerable antique caſt. But certainly the uſe of modern terms of war and govern-

common eye diſtinguiſhes him at firſt ſigl who are not his greateſt admirers look up defects; and thoſe who are, ſeem pleaſed as beauties. I ſpeak of his compound epith his repetitions. Many of the former cann literally into Engliſh without deſtroying th
our language. I believe ſuch ſhould be r ſlide eaſily of themſelves into an Engliſh c without violence to the ear or to the rec of compoſition; as well as thoſe which h ed a ſanction from the authority of our l and are become familiar thro' their uſe ſuch as the cloud-compelling Jove, etc. As fi whenever any can be as fully and ſignifi preſt in a ſingle word as in a compounde courſe to be taken is obvious.

majeſtic idea in the periphraſis: The lofty mountain ſhakes his waving woods. Others that admit of differing ſignifications, may receive an advantage by a judicious variation, according to the occaſions on which they are introduced. For example, the epithet of Apollo, ἑκηβόλος, or far-ſhooting, is capable of two explications; one literal in reſpect of the darts and bow, the enſign of that God; the other allegorical with regard to the rays of the ſun: Therefore in ſuch places where Apollo is repreſented as a God in perſon, I would uſe the former interpretation; and where the effects of the ſun are deſcribed, I would make choice of the latter. Upon the whole, it would be neceſſary to avoid that perpetual repetition of the ſame epithets which we find in Homer, and which, tho' it might be accommodated (as has been already ſhewn) to the ear of thoſe times, is by no means ſo to ours: But one may wait for opportunities of placing them, where they derive an additional beauty from the occaſions on which they are employed: and in doing this properly, a tranſlator may at once ſhew his fancy and his judgment.

As for Homer's Repetitions, we may divide them into three ſorts; of whole narrations and ſpeeches, of ſingle ſentences, and of one verſe or hemiſtich. I hope it is not impoſſible to have ſuch a regard to theſe, as neither to loſe ſo known a mark of the author on the one hand, nor to offend the reade too much on the other. The repetition is not un graceful in thoſe ſpeeches where the dignity of th ſpeaker renders it a ſort of inſolence to alter hi words; as in the meſſages from Gods to men, o from higher powers to inferiors in concerns of ſtate or where the ceremonial of religion ſeems to requir it, in the ſolemn forms of prayers, oaths, or the like In other caſes, I believe the beſt rule is to be guide by the nearneſs, or diſtance, at which the repeti tions are placed in the original: When they fol low too cloſe, one may vary the expreſſion, but i is a queſtion whether a profeſſed tranſlator be au thorized to omit any: If they be tedious, the au thor is to anſwer for it.

It only remains to ſpeak of the Verſification Homer (as has been ſaid) is perpetually applying the ſound to the ſenſe, and varying it on every new ſubject. This is indeed one of the moſt exquiſite beau ties of poetry, and attainable by very few: I know only of Homer eminent for it in the Greek, and Virgi in Latin. I am ſenſible it is what may ſometime happen by chance, when a writer is warm, and fully poſſeſt of his image: however it may be reaſonably believed they deſigned this, in whoſe verſe it ſo ma nifeſtly appears in a ſuperior degree to all others. Few readers have the ear to be judges of it; but thoſe who have, will ſee I have endeavoured at this beauty.

Upon the whole, I muſt confeſs myſelf utterly incapable of doing juſtice to Homer. I attempt him in no other hope but that which one may entertain without much vanity, of giving a more tolerable copy of him than any entire tranſlation in verſe has yet done. We have only thoſe of Chapman, Hobbes, and Ogilby. Chapman has taken the advantage of an immeaſurable length of verſe, notwithſtanding which, there is ſcarce any paraphraſe more looſe and rambling than his. He has frequent interpolations of four or ſix lines, and I remember one in the thirteenth book of the Odyſſey, ver. 312, where he has ſpun twenty verſes out of two. He is often miſtaken in ſo bold a manner, that one might think he deviated on purpoſe, if he did not in other places of his notes inſiſt ſo much upon verbal trifles. He appears to have a ſtrong affectation of extracting new meanings out of his author, inſomuch as to promiſe in his rhyming preface, a poem of the myſteries he had revealed in Homer: and perhaps he endeavoured to ſtrain the obvious ſenſe to this end. His expreſſion is involved in fuſtian, a fault for which he was remarkable in his original writings, as in the tragedy of Buſſy d'Amboiſe, etc. In a word the nature of the man may account for his whole performance; for he appears from his preface and remarks to have been of an arrogant turn, and an enthuſiaſt in poetry.

writ before he arrived at years of diſcretion

Hobbes has given us a correct explanati ſenſe in general, but for particulars and ſtances he continually lops them, and often moſt beautiful. As for its being eſteeme tranſlation, I doubt not many have beer that error by the ſhortneſs of it, which not from his following the original line but from the contractions above-mention ſometimes omits whole ſimiles and ſentenc now and then guilty of miſtakes, into v writer of his learning could have fallen, careleſſneſs. His poetry as well as Ogilby mean for criticiſm.

It is a great loſs to the poetical world
Dryden did not live to tranſlate the Iliad.
left us only the firſt book, and a ſmall n

too much regard to Chapman, whoſe words he ſometimes copies, and has unhappily followed him in paſſages where he wanders from the original. However, had he tranſlated the whole work, I would no more have attempted Homer after him than Virgil, his verſion of whom (notwithſtanding ſome human errors) is the moſt noble and ſpirited tranſlation I know in any language. But the fate of great genius's is like that of great miniſters, tho' they are confeſſedly the firſt in the commonwealth of letters, they muſt be envied and calumniated only for being at the head of it.

That which in my opinion ought to be the endeavour of any one who tranſlates Homer, is above all things to keep alive that ſpirit and fire which makes his chief character; In particular places, where the ſenſe can bear any doubt, to follow the ſtrongeſt and moſt poetical, as moſt agreeing with that character; to copy him in all the variations of his ſtyle, and the different modulations of his numbers; to preſerve, in the more active or deſcriptive parts, a warmth and elevation; in the more ſedate or narrative, a plainneſs and ſolemnity; in the ſpeeches, a fullneſs and perſpicuity; in the ſentences a ſhortneſs and gravity: Not to neglect even the little figures and turns on the words, nor ſometimes the very caſt of the periods; neither to omit nor confound any rites or cuſtoms of antiquity: Perhaps too he ought to include the whole in a ſhorter compaſs, than has hitherto been done by any tranſlator, who has tolerably preſerved either the ſenſe or poetry. What I would farther recommend to him, is to ſtudy his author rather from his own text, than from any commentators, how learned ſoever, or whatever figure they may make in the eſtimation of the world; to conſider him attentively in compariſon with Virgil above all the ancients, and with Milton above all the moderns. Next theſe, the Archbiſhop of Cambray's Telemachus may give him the trueſt idea of the ſpirit and turn of our author, and Boſſu's admirable treatiſe of the Epic poem the juſteſt notion of his deſign and conduct. But after all, with whatever judgment and ſtudy a man may proceed, or with whatever happineſs he may perform ſuch a work, he muſt hope to pleaſe but a few; thoſe only who have at once a taſte of poetry, and competent learning. For to ſatisfy ſuch as want either, is not in the nature of this undertaking; ſince a mere modern wit can like nothing that is not modern, and a pedant nothing that is not Greek.

What I have done is ſubmitted to the publick, from whoſe opinions I am prepared to learn; tho' I fear no judges ſo little as our beſt poets, who are moſt ſenſible of the weight of this taſk. As for the worſt, whatever they ſhall pleaſe to ſay, they

y give me ſome concern as they are unhappy n, but none as they are malignant writers. I was ded in this tranſlation by judgments very diffe-t from theirs, and by perſons for whom they have no kindneſs, if an old obſervation be true, t the ſtrongeſt antipathy in the world is that of ls to men of wit. Mr. Addiſon was the firſt oſe advice determined me to undertake this taſk,
o was pleaſed to write to me upon that occaſion
ſuch terms, as I cannot repeat without vanity.
/as obliged to Sir Richard Steel for a very early ommendation of my undertaking to the publick.
. Swift promoted my intereſt with that warmth
h which he always ſerves his friend. The manity and frankneſs of Sir Samuel Garth are at I never knew wanting on any occaſion. I muſt ) acknowledge with infinite pleaſure, the many ndly offices, as well as ſincere criticiſms of Mr.
ngreve, who had led me the way in tranſlating ne parts of Homer. I muſt add the names of . Rowe and Dr. Parnell, though I ſhall take a ther opportunity of doing juſtice to the laſt, whoſe od-nature (to give it a great panegyrick) is no
s extenſive than his learning. The favour of theſe ıtlemen is not entirely undeſerved by one who ars them ſo true an affection. But what can I ſay the honour ſo many of the Great have done me, ile the firſt names of the age appear as my ſub-ſcribers, and the moſt diſtinguiſhed patrons and ornaments of learning as my chief encouragers. Among theſe it is a particular pleaſure to me to find, that my higheſt obligations are to ſuch who have done moſt honour to the name of Poet: That his Grace the Duke of Buckingham was not diſpleaſed I ſhould undertake the author to whom he has given (in his excellent Eſſay) ſo complete a Praiſe.

Read Homer once, and you can read no more;
For all Books elſe appear ſo mean, ſo poor,
Verſe will ſeem Proſe: but ſtill perſiſt to read,
And Homer will be all the Books you need.

That the Earl of Halifax was one of the firſt to favour me, of whom it is hard to ſay whether the advancement of the polite arts is more owing to his generoſity or his example. That ſuch a Genius as my Lord Bolingbroke, not more diſtinguiſhed in the great ſcenes of buſineſs, than in all the uſeful and entertaining parts of learning, has not refuſed to be the critick of theſe ſheets, and the patron of their writer. And that the noble author of the Tragedy of Heroic Love, has continued his partiality to me, from my writing Paſtorals, to my attempting the Iliad. I cannot deny myſelf the pride of confeſſing, that I have had the advantage not only of their advice for the conduct in ge-

ral, but their correction of ſeveral particulars of s tranſlation.

I could ſay a great deal of the pleaſure of being linguiſhed by the Earl of Carnarvon, but it is noſt abſurd to particularize any one generous ac-n in a perſon whoſe whole life is a continued ies of them. Mr. Stanhope, the preſent Secre-y of State, will pardon my deſire of having it own that he was pleaſed to promote this affair.
ıe particular zeal of Mr. Harcourt (the ſon of the e lord Chancellor) gave me a proof how much I ı honoured in a ſhare of his friendſhip. I muſt ribute to the ſame motive that of ſeveral others my friends, to whom all acknowledgments are ıdered unneceſſary by the privileges of a familiar rreſpondence: And I am ſatisfy'd I can no way
tter oblige men of their turn, than by my ſilence.
In ſhort, I have found more patrons than ever omer wanted. He would have thought himſelf ppy to have met the ſame favour at Athens, that s been ſhewn me by its learned rival, the Unirſity of Oxford. And I can hardly envy him ɔſe pompous honors he received after death, when reflect on the enjoyment of ſo many agreeable ligations, and eaſy friendſhips, which make the isfaction of life. This diſtinction is the more to acknowledged, as it is ſhewn to one whoſe pen s never gratified the prejudices of particular par- ties, or the vanities of particular men. Whatever the ſucceſs may prove, I ſhall never repent of an undertaking in which I have experienced the candour and friendſhip of ſo many perſons of merit; and in which I hope to paſs ſome of thoſe years of youth that are generally loſt in a circle of follies, after a manner neither wholly unuſeful to others, nor diſagreeable to myſelf.

PREFACE

TO THE

WORKS of SHAKESPEAR.

[T is not my deſign to enter into a critieiſm upon this author; tho' to do it effectually and not ſuperficially, would be the beſt occaſion that any juſt riter could take, to form the judgment and taſte of ır nation. For of all Engliſh poets Shakeſpear uſt be confeſſed to be the faireſt and fulleſt ſubject r criticiſm, and to afford the moſt numerous, as well moſt conſpicuous inſtances, both of beauties and ults of all ſorts. But this far exceeds the bounds a Preface, the buſineſs of which is only to give an count of the fate of his works, and the diſadvanges under which they have been tranſmitted to us. 'e ſhall hereby extenuate many faults which are his, id clear him from the imputation of many which e not: A deſign, which, though it can be no guide future criticks to do him juſtice in one way, will leaſt be ſufficient to prevent their doing him an inſtice in the other.

I cannot however but mention ſome of his principal and characteriſtic excellencies, for which (notwithſtanding his defects) he is juſtly and univerſally elevated above all other dramatic Writers. Not that this is the proper place of praiſing him, but becauſe I would not omit any occaſion of doing it.

If ever any author deſerved the name of an Original, it was Shakeſpear. Homer himſelf drew not his art ſo immediately from the fountains of Nature; it proceeded through Ægyptian ſtrainers and channels, and came to him not without ſome tincture of the learning, or ſome caſt of the models, of thoſe before him. The poetry of Shakeſpear was inſpiration indeed: he is not ſo much an Imitator, as an Inſtrument, of Nature; and 'tis not ſo juſt to ſay that he ſpeaks from her, as that ſhe ſpeaks through him.

His Characters are ſo much Nature herſelf, that 'tis a ſort of injury to call them by ſo diſtant a name as copies of her. Thoſe of other Poets have a conſtant reſemblance, which ſhews that they received them from one another, and were but multipliers of the ſame image: each picture like a mock rainbow is but the reflection of a reflection. But every ſingle character in Shakeſpear is as much an individual, as thoſe in life itſelf; it is as impoſſible to find any two alike; and ſuch as from their relation or affinity in any reſpect appear moſt to be twins, will upon com-

pariſon be found remarkably diſtinct. To this life and variety of character, we muſt add the wonderful preſervation of it; which is ſuch throughout his Plays, that, had all the ſpeeches been printed without the very names of the perſons, I believe one might have applied them with certainty to every ſpeaker.

The Power over our Paſſions was never poſſeſſed in a more eminent degree, or diſplayed in ſo different inſtances. Yet all along, there is ſeen no labour, no pains to raiſe them; no preparation to guide our gueſs to the effect, or be perceived to lead toward it: But the heart ſwells, and the tears burſt out, juſt at the proper places: We are ſurprized the moment we weep; and yet upon reflection find the paſſion ſo juſt, that we ſhould be ſurprized if we had not wept, and wept at that very moment.

How aſtoniſhing is it again, that the Paſſions directly oppoſite to theſe, Laughter and Spleen, are no leſs at his command! that he is not more a maſter of the great than of the ridiculous in human nature; of our nobleſt tenderneſſes, than of our vaineſt foibles; of our ſtrongeſt emotions than of our idleſt ſenſations!

Nor does he only excel in the Paſſions: in the coolneſs of Reflection and Reaſoning he is full as admirable. His Sentiments are not only in general the moſt pertinent and judicious upon every ſubject; but by a talent very peculiar, ſomething betwe tration and felicity, he hits upon that particul

on which the bent of each argument turns, force of each motive depends. This is perf mazing, from a man of no education or ex in thoſe great and publick ſcenes of life wh uſually the ſubject of his thoughts: So that h to have known the world by intuition, to have thro' human nature at one glance, and to be t author that gives ground for a very new e That the philoſopher and even the man of the may be born as well as the poet.

It muſt be owned that with all theſe great lencies, he has almoſt as great defects; and he has certainly written better, ſo he has written worſe, than any other. But I think I ſome meaſure account for theſe defects, from cauſes and accidents; without which it is h imagine that ſo large and ſo enlightened a mind ever have been ſuſceptible of them. That al contingencies ſhould unite to his diſadvantage to me almoſt as ſingularly unlucky, as that ſo various (nay contrary) talents ſhould meet i man, was happy and extraordinary.

It muſt be allowed that Stage-poetry of all is more particularly levelled to pleaſe the to and its ſucceſs more immediately depending the common ſuffrage. One cannot therefore w

if Shakeſpear, having at his firſt appearance no other aim in his writings than to procure a ſubſiſtence, directed his endeavours ſolely to hit the taſte and humour that then prevailed. The audience was generally compoſed of the meaner ſort of people; and therefore the images of life were to be drawn from thoſe of their own rank; accordingly we find, that not our author's only, but almoſt all the old comedies have their ſcene among Tradeſmen and Mechanicks: And even their hiſtorical plays ſtrictly follow the common old ſtories or vulgar traditions, of that kind of people. In Tragedy, nothing was ſo ſure to ſurprize and cauſe admiration, as the moſt ſtrange, unexpected, and conſequently moſt unnatural, events and incidents; the moſt exaggerated thoughts; the moſt verboſe and bombaſt expreſſion; the moſt pompous rhymes, and thundering verſification. In Comedy, nothing was ſo ſure to pleaſe, as mean buffoonry, vile ribaldry, and unmannerly jeſts of fools and clowns. Yet even in theſe, our author's wit buoys up, and is borne above his ſubject: his genius in thoſe low parts is like ſome prince of a romance in the diſguiſe of a ſhepherd or peaſant; a certain greatneſs and ſpirit now and then break out, which manifeſt his higher extraction and qualities.

It may be added, that not only the common audience had no notion of the rules of writing, but few even of the better ſort piqued themſelves upon any great degree of knowledge or nicety that way; till Ben Johnſon, getting poſſeſſion of the ſtage, brought critical learning into vogue: And that this was not done without difficulty, may appear from thoſe frequent leſſons (and indeed almoſt declamations) which he was forced to prefix to his firſt plays, and put into the mouths of his actors, the Grex, Chorus, etc. to remove the prejudices, and inform the judgment of his hearers. 'Till then, our authors had no thoughts of writing on the model of the ancients: their Tragedies were only hiſtories in dialogue; and their comedies followed the thread of any novel as they found it, no leſs implicitly than if it had been true hiſtory.

To judge therefore of Shakeſpear by Ariſtotle's rules, is like trying a man by the laws of one country, who acted under thoſe of another. He writ to the people; and writ at firſt without patronage from the better ſort, and therefore without aims of pleaſing them: without aſſiſtance or advice from the learned, as without the advantage of education or acquaintance among them: without that knowledge of the beſt models, the ancients, to inſpire him with an emulation of them: in a word, without any views of reputation, and of what poets are pleaſed to call immortality: Some or all of which have encouraged the vanity, or animated the ambition, of other writers.

Yet it muſt be obſerved, that when his perfor-ances had merited the protection of his prince, and hen the encouragement of the court had ſucceeded that of the town; the works of his riper years e manifeſtly raiſed above thoſe of his former. The tes of his plays ſufficiently evidence that his proctions improved, in proportion to the reſpect he d for his auditors. And I make no doubt this ſervation would be found true in every inſtance, ere but editions extant from which we might learn e exact time when every piece was compoſed, and hether writ for the town, or the court.

Another cauſe (and no leſs ſtrong than the for-er) may be deduced from our author's being a yer, and forming himſelf firſt upon the judg-ents of that body of men whereof he was a mem-
r. They have ever had a ſtandard to themſelves, on other principles than thoſe of Ariſtotle. As ey live by the majority, they know no rule but at of pleaſing the preſent humour, and comply-g with the wit in faſhion; a conſideration which ings all their judgment to a ſhort point. Players e juſt ſuch judges of what is right, as taylors are what is graceful. And in this view it will be but ir to allow, that moſt of our Author's faults are leſs be aſcribed to his wrong judgment as a Poet, than his right judgment as a Player.

By theſe men it was thought a praiſe to Shakeſpear that he ſcarce ever blotted a line. This they induſtriouſly propagated, as appears from what we are told by Ben Johnſon in his Diſcoveries, and from the preface of Heminges and Condell to the firſt folio edition. But in reality (however it has prevailed) there never was a more groundleſs report, to the contrary of which there are more undeniable evidences. As the Comedy of the Merry Wives of Windſor, which he entirely new writ; the Hiſtory of Henry VI. which was firſt publiſhed under the title of the Contention of York and Lancaſter: and that of Henry V. extremely improved; that of Hamlet enlarged to almoſt as much again as at firſt, and many others. I believe the common opinion of his want of learning proceeded from no better ground. This too might be thought a praiſe by ſome, and to this his errors have as injudiciouſly been aſcribed by others. For 'tis certain, were it true, it could concern but a ſmall part of them; the moſt are ſuch as are not properly defects, but ſuperfœtations; and ariſe not from want of learning or reading, but from want of thinking or judging: or rather (to be more juſt to our Author) from a compliance to thoſe wants in others. As to a wrong choice of the ſubject, a wrong conduct of the incidents, falſe thoughts, forced expreſſions, etc. if theſe are not to be aſcribed to the aforeſaid acci-ental reaſons, they muſt be charged upon the poet imſelf, and there is no help for it. But I think he two diſadvantages which I have mentioned to be obliged to pleaſe the loweſt of people, and o keep the worſt of company) if the conſideration e extended as far as it reaſonably may, will ap-ear ſufficient to miſlead and depreſs the greateſt Genius upon earth. Nay the more modeſty with hich ſuch a one is endued, the more he is in dan-er of ſubmitting and conforming to others, againſt is own better judgment.

But as to his want of learning, it may be neceſ-ary to ſay ſomething more: There is certainly a aſt difference between learning and languages. How ar he was ignorant of the latter, I cannot deter-ine; but it is plain he had much reading at leaſt, f they will not call it learning. Nor is it any great natter, if a man has knowledge, whether he has from one language or from another. Nothing is ore evident than that he had a taſte of natural hiloſophy, mechanicks, ancient and modern hiſtory, oetical learning and mythology: We find him very nowing in the cuſtoms, rites, and manners of anti-uity. In Coriolanus and Julius Cæſar, not only e ſpirit, but manners, of the Romans are exactly rawn; and ſtill a nicer diſtinction is ſhown, be-ween the manners of the Romans in the time of e former, and of the latter. His reading in the antient hiſtorians is no leſs conſpicuous, in many references to particular paſſages: and the ſpeeches copied from Plutarch in Coriolanus may, I think, as well be made an inſtance of his learning, as thoſe copied from Cicero in Catiline, of Ben Johnſon's. The manners of other nations in general, the Egyptians, Venetians, French, etc. are drawn with equal propriety. Whatever object of nature, or branch of ſcience, he either ſpeaks of or deſcribes; it is always with competent, if not extenſive knowledge: his deſcriptions are ſtill exact; all his metaphors appropriated, and remarkably drawn from the true nature and inherent qualities of each ſubject. When he treats of ethic or politic, we may conſtantly obſerve a wonderful juſtneſs of diſtinction, as well as extent of comprehenſion. No one is more a maſter of the poetical ſtory, or has more frequent alluſions to the various parts of it: Mr. Waller (who has been celebrated for this laſt particular) has not ſhewn more learning this way than Shakeſpear. We have tranſlations from Ovid publiſhed in his name, among thoſe poems which paſs for his, and for ſome of which we have undoubted authority (being publiſhed by himſelf, and dedicated to his noble patron the Earl of Southampton:) He appears alſo to have been converſant in Plautus, from whom he has taken the plot of one of his plays: he follows the Greek authors, and particu-

rly Dares Phrygius, in another: (altho' I will not retend to ſay in what language he read them.) he modern Italian writers of novels he was manifeſtly acquainted with; and we may conclude him be no leſs converſant with the antients of his own ountry, from the uſe he has made of Chaucer in roilus and Creſſida, and in the Two noble Kinſmen, if hat Play be his, as there goes a tradition it was nd indeed it has little reſemblance of Fletcher, nd more of our Author than ſome of thoſe which ave been received as genuine.)

I am inclined to think this opinion proceeded riginally from the zeal of the Partizans of our Auhor and Ben Johnſon; as they endeavoured to exlt the one at the expence of the other. It is ever he nature of Parties to be in extremes; and nohing is ſo probable, as that becauſe Ben Johnſon ad much the more learning, it was ſaid on the ne hand that Shakeſpear had none at all; and beauſe Shakeſpear had much the moſt wit and fancy, t was retorted on the other, that Johnſon wanted oth. Becauſe Shakeſpear borrowed nothing, it as ſaid that Ben Johnſon borrowed every thing. ecauſe Johnſon did not write extempore, he was eproached with being a year about every piece; nd becauſe Shakeſpear wrote with eaſe and rapiity. they cried he never once made a blot. Nay he ſpirit of oppoſition ran ſo high that whatever thoſe of the one ſide objected to the other, was taken at the rebound, and turned into praiſes; as injudiciouſly as their antagoniſts before had made them objections.

Poets are always afraid of envy; but ſure they have as much reaſon to be afraid of admiration. They are the Scylla and Charybdis of Authors; thoſe who eſcape one, often fall by the other. Peſſimum genus inimicorum laudantes, ſays Tacitus: and Virgil deſires to wear a charm againſt thoſe who praiſe a poet without rule or reaſon.

Si ultra placitum laudârit, baccare frontem
Cingito, ne vati noceat.

But however this contention might be carried on by the Partizans on either ſide, I cannot help thinking theſe two great poets were good friends, and lived on amicable terms, and in offices of ſociety with each other. It is an acknowledged fact, that Ben Johnſon was introduced upon the ſtage, and his firſt works encouraged by Shakeſpear. And after his death, that Author writes To the memory of his beloved Mr. William Shakeſpear, which ſhews as if the friendſhip had continued thro' life. I cannot for my own part find any thing invidious or ſparing in thoſe verſes, but wonder Mr. Dryden was of that opinion. He exalts him not only above all his contemporaries, but above Chaucer and Spenſer, whom he will not allow to be great enough to be ranked with him; and challenges the names of Sophocles, Euripides, and Æſchylus, nay all Greece and Rome at once, to equal him; and (which is very particular) expreſly vindicates him from the imputation of wanting art, not enduring that all his excellencies ſhould be attributed to nature. It is remarkable too, that the praiſe he gives him in his Diſcoveries ſeems to proceed from a perſonal kindneſs; he tells us that he lov'd the man, as well as honoured his memory; celebrates the honeſty, openneſs, and frankneſs of his temper; and only diſtinguiſhes, as he reaſonably ought, between the real merit of the Author, and the ſilly and derogatory applauſes of the Players. Ben Johnſon might indeed be ſparing in his commendations, (tho' certainly he is not ſo in this inſtance) partly from his own nature, and partly from judgment. For men of judgment think they do any man more ſervice in praiſing him juſtly, than laviſhly. I ſay, I would fain believe they were friends, tho' the violence and ill-breeding of their followers and flatterers were enough to give riſe to the contrary report. I would hope that it may be with parties, both in wit and ſtate, as with thoſe monſters deſcribed by the poets; and that their heads at leaſt may have ſomething human, tho' their bodies and tails are wild beaſts and ſerpents.

As I believe that what I have mentioned gave riſe to the opinion of Shakeſpear's want of learning; ſo what has continued it down to us may have been the many blunders and illiteracies of the firſt publiſhers of his works. In theſe editions their ignorance ſhines in almoſt every page; nothing is more common than Actus tertia. Exit Omnes. Enter three witches ſolus. Their French is as bad as their Latin, both in conſtruction and ſpelling: Their very Welſh is falſe. Nothing is more likely than that thoſe palpable blunders of Hector's quoting Ariſtotle, with others of that groſs kind, ſprung from the ſame root: it not being at all credible that theſe could be the errors of any man who had the leaſt tincture of a ſchool, or the leaſt converſation with ſuch as had. Ben Johnſon (whom they will not think partial to him) allows him at leaſt to have had ſome Latin; which is utterly inconſiſtent with miſtakes like theſe. Nay the conſtant blunders in proper names of perſons and places, are ſuch as muſt have proceeded from a man, who had not ſo much as read any hiſtory, in any language: ſo could not be Shakeſpear's.

I ſhall now lay before the reader ſome of thoſe almoſt innumerable errors, which have riſen from one ſource, the ignorance of the players, both as his actors, and as his editors. When the nature and kinds of theſe are enumerated and conſidered, I dare to ſay, that not Shakeſpear only, but Ariſtotle or Cicero, had their works undergone the ſame fate, might have appeared to want ſenſe as well as learning.

It is not certain that any one of his plays was publiſhed by himſelf. During the time of his employment in the Theatre, ſeveral of his pieces were printed ſeparately in quarto. What makes me think that moſt of theſe were not publiſhed by him, is the exceſſive careleſſneſs of the preſs: every page is ſo ſcandalouſly falſe ſpelled, and almoſt all the learned or unuſual words ſo intolerably mangled, that it's plain there either was no corrector to the preſs at all, or one totally illiterate. If any were ſuperviſed by himſelf, I ſhould fancy the two parts of Henry IV. and Midſummer Night's Dream might have been ſo: becauſe I find no other printed with any exactneſs; and (contrary to the reſt) there is very little variation in all the ſubſequent editions of them. There are extant two prefaces to the firſt quarto edition of Troilus and Creſſida in 1609, and to that of Othello; by which it appears, that the firſt was publiſhed without his knowledge or conſent, and even before it was acted, ſo late as ſeven or eight years before he died; and that the latter was not printed till after his death. The whole number of genuine plays which we have been able to find printed in his life-time, amounts but to eleven. And of ſome of theſe, we meet with two or more editions by different printers, each of which has whole heaps of traſh different from the other: which I ſhould fancy was occaſioned by their being taken from different copies, belonging to d ferent Playhouſes.

The folio edition (in which all the plays we n receive as his, were firſt collected) was publiſhed two Players, Heminges and Condell, in 1623, ſe years after his deceaſe. They declare, that all other editions were ſtolen and ſurreptitious, a affirm theirs to be purged from the errors of the f
mer. This is true as to the literal errors, and other; for in all reſpects elſe it is far worſe than quarto's.

Firſt, becauſe the additions of trifling and bo
baſt paſſages are in this edition far more numero
For whatever had been added, ſince thoſe quart by the actors, or had ſtolen from their mouths i the written parts, were from thence conveyed i the printed text, and all ſtand charged upon the A thor. He himſelf complained of this uſage in Ha let, where he wiſhes that thoſe who play the Clow would ſpeak no more than is ſet down for them. (Act Sc. iv.) But as a proof that he could not eſcape in the old editions of Romeo and Juliet there is hint of a great number of the mean conceits and baldries now to be found there. In others, the l ſcenes of Mobs, Plebeians and Clowns, are vaſ ſhorter than at preſent: And I have ſeen one in pa ticular (which ſeems to have belonged to the pla uſe, by having the parts divided with lines, and : Actors names in the margin) where ſeveral of )ſe very paſſages were added in a written hand,

ıich are ſince to be found in the folio.

In the next place, a number of beautiful paſſages ıich are extant in the firſt ſingle editions, are omit-l in this: as it ſeems without any other reaſon, than ir willingneſs to ſhorten ſome ſcenes: Theſe men it was ſaid of Procruſtes) either lopping, or ſtretch-
; an Author, to make him juſt fit for their ſtage.
This edition is ſaid to be printed from the original
ies. I believe they meant thoſe which had lain r ſince the author's days in the play-houſe, and l from time to time been cut, or added to, arbi-rily. It appears that this edition, as well as the arto's, was printed (at leaſt partly) from no better )ies than the prompter's book, or piece-meal parts itten out for the uſe of the actors: For in ſome ces their very names are through careleſsneſs ſet vn inſtead of the perſonæ dramatis: And in others notes of direction to the property-men for their veables, and to the players for their entries, are in-

Much ado about Nothing, Act ii. Enter Prince Leonato, idio, and Jack Wilſon, inſtead of Balthaſar. And in Act iv.
ley, and King, conſtantly into a whole ſcene.

Edit. Fol. of 1623, and 1632.

ſerted into the text, thro' the ignorance of the tran ſcribers.

The Plays not having been before ſo much as di ſtinguiſhed by acts and ſcenes, they are in this editio divided according as they played them: often wher there is no pauſe in the action, or where they though fit to make a breach in it, for the ſake of muſick maſques, or monſters.

Sometimes the ſcenes are tranſpoſed and ſhuffle backward and forward; a thing which could n otherwiſe happen, but by their being taken from ſe parate and piece-meal written parts.

Many verſes are omitted entirely, and others tran poſed; from whence invincible obſcurities have ſ riſen, paſt the gueſs of any commentator to clear u but juſt where the accidental glimpſe of an old ed tion enlightens us.

Some characters were confounded and mix'd, two put into one, for want of a competent numb of actors. Thus in the quarto edition of Midſumm Night's Dream, Act v. Shakeſpear introduces a kn of Maſter of the revels called Philoſtrate; all who part is given to another character (that of Egeus) the ſubſequent editions: So alſo in Hamlet and Ki Lear. This too makes it probable, that the prom ter's books were what they called the original c pies.

From liberties of this kind, many ſpeeches alſo re put into the mouths of wrong perſons, where
: Author now ſeems chargeable with making them
:ak out of character: Or ſometimes perhaps for no tter reaſon, than that a governing player, to have : mouthing of ſome favourite ſpeech himſelf, would itch it from the unworthy lips of an underling.

Proſe from verſe they did not know, and they ac-rdingly printed one for the other throughout the lume.

Having been forced to ſay ſo much of the players,
hink I ought in juſtice to remark, that the judg-
:nt, as well as condition, of that claſs of people is then far inferior to what it is in our days. As :n the beſt playhouſes were inns and taverns (the obe, the Hope, the Red Bull, the Fortune, etc.) ſo
: top of the profeſſion were then meer players, not ntlemen of the ſtage: They were led into the but-·y by the ſteward, not placed at the lord's table, or ly's toilette: and conſequently were entirely de-ived of thoſe advantages they now enjoy, in the faliar converſation of our nobility, and an intimacy ot to ſay dearneſs) with people of the firſt condi)n.

From what has been ſaid, there can be no queſtion
t had Shakeſpear publiſhed his works himſelf (eſcially in his latter time, and after his retreat from lage) we ſhould not only be certain which are uine; but ſhould find in thoſe that are, the er- s leſſened by ſome thouſands. If I may judge om all the diſtinguiſhing marks of his ſtyle, and s manner of thinking and writing, I make no doubt declare that thoſe wretched plays, Pericles, Locrine, Sir John Oldcaſtle, Yorkſhire Tragedy, Lord Cromwell, The Puritan, and London Prodigal, cannot be admitted as his. And I ſhould conjecture of ſome of the others (particularly Love's Labour's Loſt, The Winter's Tale, and Titus Andronicus) that only ſome characters, ſingle ſcenes, or perhaps a few particular paſſages, were of his hand. It is very probable what occaſioned ſome plays to be ſuppoſed Shakeſpear's was only this; that they were pieces produced by unknown authors, or fitted up for the theatre while it was under his adminiſtration: and no owner claiming them, they were adjudged to him, as they give ſtrays to the Lord of the manor: a miſtake which (one may alſo obſerve) it was not for the intereſt o the houſe to remove. Yet the players themſelve Heminges and Condell, afterwards did Shakeſpe the juſtice to reject thoſe eight plays in their editio though they were then printed in his name, in ev body's hands, and acted with ſome applauſe; (as learn from what Ben Johnſon ſays of Pericles ir Ode on the New-Inn.) That Titus Andronicus i of this claſs I am the rather induced to believe, by finding the ſame Author openly expreſs his contempt of it in the Induction to Bartholomew-Fair, in the year 1614, when Shakeſpear was yet living. And there is no better authority for theſe latter ſort, than for the former, which were equally publiſhed in his life-time.

If we give into this opinion, how many low and vicious parts and paſſages might no longer reflect upon this great genius, but appear unworthily charged upon him? And even in thoſe which are really his, how many faults may have been unjuſtly laid to his account from arbitrary additions, expunctions, tranſpoſitions of ſcenes and lines, confuſion of characters and perſons, wrong application of ſpeeches, corruptions of innumerable paſſages by the ignorance, and wrong corrections of them again by the impertinence, of his firſt editors? From one or other of theſe conſiderations, I am verily perſuaded, that the greateſt and the groſſeſt part of what are thought his errors would vaniſh, and leave his character in a light very different from that diſadvantageous one, in which it now appears to us.

This is the ſtate in which Shakeſpear's writings lie at preſent; for, ſince the above-mentioned folio edition, all the reſt have implicitly followed it, without having recourſe to any of the former, or ever making the compariſon between them. It is impoſſible to repair the injuries already done him; too much time has elapſed, and the materials are too few. In what I have done I have rather given a proof of my willingneſs and deſire, than of my ability, to do him juſtice. I have diſcharged the dull duty of an Editor, to my beſt judgment, with more labour than I expect thanks, with a religious abhorrence of all innovation, and without any indulgence to my private ſenſe or conjecture. The method taken in this edition will ſhew itſelf. The various readings are fairly put in the margin, ſo that every one may compare them; and thoſe I have preferred into the text are conſtantly ex fide codicum, upon authority. The alterations or additions which Shakeſpear himſelf made, are taken notice of as they occur. Some ſuſpected paſſages which are exceſſively bad (and which ſeem interpolations by being ſo inſerted that one can intirely omit them without any chaſm, or deficience in the context) are degraded to the bottom of the page; with an aſteriſk referring to the places of their inſertion. The ſcenes are marked ſo diſtinctly that every removal of place is ſpecify'd; which is more neceſſary in this Author than any other, ſince he ſhifts them more frequently: and ſometimes without attending to this particular, the reader would have met with obſcurities. The more obſolete or unuſual words are explained. Some of the moſt ſhining paſſages are diſtinguiſhed by comma's in the margin; and where the beauty lay not in particulars but in the whole, a ſtar is prefixed to the ſcene. This ſeems to me a ſhorter and leſs oſtentatious method of performing the better half of Criticiſm (namely the pointing out an Author's excellencies) than to fill a whole paper with citations of fine paſſages, with general applauſes, or empty exclamations at the tail of them. There is alſo ſubjoined a catalogue of thoſe firſt editions by which the greater part of the various readings and of the corrected paſſages are authoriſed (moſt of which are ſuch as carry their own evidence along with them.) Theſe editions now hold the place of originals, and are the only materials left to repair the deficiencies or reſtore the corrupted ſenſe of the author: I can only wiſh that a greater number of them (if a greater were ever publiſhed) may yet be found, by a ſearch more ſucceſsful than mine, for the better accompliſhment of this end.

I will conclude by ſaying of Shakeſpear, that with all his faults, and with all the irregularity of his drama, one may look upon his works, in compariſon of thoſe that are more finiſhed and regular, as upon an ancient majeſtic piece of Gothic architecture, compared with a neat modern building: The latter is more elegant and glaring, but the former is more ſtrong and more ſolemn. It muſt be allowed, that in one of theſe there are materials enough to make many of the other. It has much the greater variety, and much the nobler apartments; tho' we are often conducted to them by dark, odd, and uncouth paſſages. Nor does the whole fail to ſtrike us with greater reverence, tho' many of the parts are childiſh, ill-placed, and unequal to its grandeur.

The End of the SEVENTH VOLUME.